the Court shall direct that the property be released from attachment, and shall make such order as to the costs of the attachment as it thinks fit.

12. [S. 170.] The Court may, where such person does not appear, or appears but fails so to satisfy the Court, impose upon him such fine not exceeding five hundred rupees as it thinks fit, having regard to his condition in life and all the circumstances of the case and may order his property, or any part thereof, to be attached and sold or, if already attached under rule 10, to be sold for the purpose of satisfying all costs of such attachment, together with the amount of the said fine, if any :

Procedure if witness fails to appear.

Provided that, if the person whose attendance is required pays into Court the costs and fine aforesaid, the Court shall order the property to be released from attachment.

Order releasing property from attachment.—In a case under the Code of 1882 the Court accepted the fine and costs even after sale of the property attached and refused to confirm the sale, the price realised at the sale being absurdly low. The auction purchaser appealed from the order, but it was held that no appeal lay from the order (b). If a similar case arises under the new Code, it will have to be considered in the light of rule 13 of this Order and of O. 21, r. 89 [which cannot apply unless the Crown is regarded as a decree-holder], r. 90 and r. 92.

13. [New.] The provisions with regard to the attachment and sale of property in the execution of a decree shall, so far as they are

O. 16, applicable, be deemed to apply to any attachment and sale were a judgment-debtor.

14. [S. 171.] Subject to the provisions of this Code as to attendance and appearance and to any law for the time being in force, where the Court at any time thinks it necessary to examine any person other than a party to the suit and not called as a witness by a party to the suit the Court may, of its own motion, cause such person to be summoned as a witness to give evidence, or to produce any document in his possession, on a day to be appointed, and may examine him as a witness or require him to produce such document.

Court may of its own accord summon as witness strangers to suit.

15. [S. 172.] Subject as last aforesaid, whoever is summoned to appear and give evidence in a suit shall attend at the time and place named in the summons for that purpose and whoever is summoned to produce a document shall either attend to produce it, or cause it to be produced, at such time and place.

Duty of persons summoned to give evidence or

16. [S. 173.] (1) A person so summoned and attending shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, attend at each hearing until the suit has been disposed of.

When they may depart.

(2) On the application of either party and the payment through the Court of all necessary expenses (if any) the Court may require any person so summoned and attending to furnish security to attend at the next or any other hearing or until the suit is disposed of and, in default of his furnishing such security, may order him to be detained in the civil prison.

Sub-rule (2),—This sub-rule is new.

Duty of suitors to give evidence on their own behalf.—In Lal Kunwar v. Chiranjil Lal (c), their Lordships of the Privy Council severely condemned the practice

O. 16, r. 21. followed in some parts of India of advocates omitting to call their own client as a witness in the hope of forcing their opponents to call him as their witness in order that they themselves may have the opportunity of cross-examining their own client when called by the other side. Referring to this practice, their Lordships said: "It is a vicious practice, unworthy of a high-toned or respectable system of advocacy. It must embarrass and perplex judicial investigation, and, it is to be feared, too often enables fraud, falsehood, or chicane to baffle justice."

ORDER XVII.

Adjournments.

O. 17,
rr. 1, 2.

1. [S. 156.] (1) The Court may, if sufficient cause is shown, at any stage of the suit grant time to the parties or to any of them, and may from time to time adjourn the hearing of the suit.

Court may grant time and adjourn hearing.

(2) In every such case the Court shall fix a day for the further hearing of the suit, and may make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the costs occasioned by the adjournment:

Costs of adjournment.

Provided that, when the hearing of evidence has once begun, the hearing of the suit shall be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, unless the Court finds the adjournment of the hearing beyond the following day to be necessary for reasons to be recorded.

2. [S. 157.] Where, on any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned, the parties or any of them fail to appear, the Court may proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by Order IX or make such other order as it thinks fit.

Procedure if parties fail to appear on day fixed.

"One of the modes directed by Order IX."—The effect of this rule is to assimilate the procedure in cases where there is default of appearance at an adjourned hearing with that in cases where there is such default at the first hearing. The result is that though a party may have appeared at the first hearing, but fails to appear at an adjourned hearing, the procedure laid down in Order 9 will apply, that is to say, where a plaintiff fails to appear at an adjourned hearing, the Court may make an order dismissing the suit under this rule and O. 9, r. 8, and the plaintiff may, if so advised, then apply under this rule and O. 9, r. 9, for an order to set the dismissal aside (d); and where a defendant fails to appear at an adjourned hearing the Court may pass a decree ex parte under this rule and O. 9, r. 6, and the defendant may, if so advised, then apply under this rule and O. 9, r. 13, for an order to set it aside (e). If both parties fail to appear at the hearing, the Court may make an order dismissing the suit under this rule and O. 9, r. 3, and the plaintiff may then, if so advised, either bring a fresh suit, or apply for an order to set the dismissal aside under this rule and O. 9, r. 4 (f).

Or make such other order as it thinks fit.—It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that the words “may proceed” show that it is not obligatory on the Court to proceed in the manner directed by Order 9: rather, the Court should in each case exercise its discretion as to whether it should proceed under that Order or make some other order. Thus it will be a bad exercise of discretion if an order is made dismissing the suit under this rule and O. 9, r. 8, when the plaintiff has at the first hearing made a case which, if uncontradicted, would entitle him to a decree, but neither he nor his pleader appears at an adjourned hearing. The Court should in such a case proceed to decide the case on its merits, and not dismiss it for default of appearance (g). On the other hand, it has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the words “or make such other order as it thinks fit” do not empower the Court to dispose of the suit on the merits, but enable the Court merely to grant a further adjournment, and if the Court is not inclined to grant a further adjournment, the only course left open to the Court is to dismiss the suit under this rule and O. 9, r. 8 (h).

“Adjourned” hearing.—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that the word “adjourned” in this rule refers to an adjournment upon the application of parties granted under r. 1, and not an adjournment necessitated by the rules of the Court relating to the regulation of its own business (i).

“Fail to appear.”—See notes to O. 9, r. 9, “Meaning of appearance,” on p. 451 above. It cannot be said that a decree passed against a defendant is an ex parte decree within the meaning of O. 9, r. 6, where at an adjourned hearing of a part-heard suit the plaintiff's case being closed, and the defendant's case being partially entered, the defendant's pleader applies for an adjournment, and on the application being refused he withdraws from the case, and a decree is passed against the defendant on the merits. It is not open to the defendant in such a case to apply to have the decree set aside under this rule and O. 9, r. 13 (j).

3. [s. 158.] Where any party to a suit to whom time has been granted fails to produce his evidence, or to cause the attendance of his witnesses, or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the Court may proceed notwithstanding either party fails to produce evidence, etc.

O. 17,
rr. 2, 3.

- O. 17, r. 3. suit, for which time has been allowed, the Court may, notwithstanding such default, proceed to decide the suit forthwith.

Scope of the rule.—The provisions of this rule do not apply unless—

(1) the hearing is adjourned on the application of a party to the suit, as distinguished from an adjournment by the Court of its own motion (k);

(2) the adjournment is granted to enable the party to produce his evidence or to cause the attendance of his witness, or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit; and

(3) the party fails to perform any of the acts for which the adjournment was granted within the time allowed by the Court.

"Any other act."—A sues B to recover possession of certain lands. B contends that the suit is not properly valued. The Court thereupon appoints a commissioner, on the application of A, to value the land, and directs A to pay into Court Rs. 100, being the commissioner's fee, within a specified time. If A fails to make the payment within the prescribed time, the Court may proceed under this rule. The payment of the commissioner's fee is an act necessary to the further progress of the suit within the meaning of this rule (kk).

Procedure to be followed under this rule.—Rule 2 applies to cases where the hearing is adjourned, no matter for what purpose, and the parties or any of them fail to appear at the adjourned hearing. The present rule contemplates cases where the hearing is adjourned at the instance of a party for some one or other of the purposes specified in the rule, and the party fails to perform the specified act or acts for which the adjournment was granted within the time allowed by the Court. In such a case, the rule says, "the Court may, notwithstanding such default, proceed to decide the suit forthwith." These words do not mean that the Court may dismiss the suit if the plaintiff is in default, or pass a decree against the defendant if the defendant is in default. What the words mean is that the Court may further adjourn the hearing, or, it may, without granting any further adjournment, proceed to try the suit and take such evidence as may be tendered by the parties and decide the suit on the merits (l). Thus where an adjournment is granted to the plaintiff to amend the plaint, but the plaintiff fails to amend the plaint, the Court should not dismiss the suit, but decide it on the merits (m). The word "forthwith" means "without granting any further adjournment." Contrast the words "at once pronounce judgment" in O. 15, r. 4.

Remedy.—Where a suit is disposed of under the first part of r. 2 above, it is open to the party aggrieved by the order to proceed under O. 9, r. 9 or O. 9, r. 13, as the case may be [see notes to r. 2 under the head "One of the modes directed by Order 9"]. But where a case is decided under the present rule, the decision amounts to a decree, and the remedy of the party aggrieved is by way of appeal (n) or by way of review (o). As to what points may be taken in appeal and what on the application for review, see the undermentioned case (p).

Case where "default under this rule" is coupled with "default of appearance under rule 2."—If the hearing of a suit is adjourned on the application of the plaintiff to enable him to produce his evidence, and if on the date to which the hearing is adjourned the plaintiff does not appear, should the Court proceed under this rule or under rule 2? It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the Court should in such a case proceed under this rule, on the ground, it would appear, that time was granted to the plaintiff to produce his evidence and that this was sufficient to bring the case within this rule though the plaintiff had failed to appear (g). On the other hand, it has been held by the High Court of Madras that the Court should in such a case proceed under rule 2 and dismiss the suit for default of appearance on the part of the plaintiff, in which case the plaintiff will have an opportunity to apply to the Court under O. 9, r. 9, to set aside the dismissal (r). This view is in accordance with the earlier decisions of the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts (s). In recent cases, however, the latter Courts have held that where an adjournment is granted at the instance of a party for any of the purposes stated in r. 3, and either party fails to appear at the adjourned hearing, the Court should, if there are materials enabling it to decide the suit, act under this rule and not rule (2)(t). If the Court does not do so, and dismisses the suit for default of appearance, then according to the Patna High Court the dismissal must be treated as one under r. 2 of this Order (u). If there be no sufficient materials on the record to enable the Court to proceed to judgment as required by this rule, the Court, according to the Chief Court of Punjab, should proceed under r. 2 above and not under the present rule (v).

"To whom time has been granted."—Where a party has paid the process fee for summoning witnesses, but the witnesses are not served, and the Court adjourns the hearing to enable its officer to serve the summonses, the adjournment does not amount to granting of time within the meaning of this rule and the rule does not apply (w).

Execution proceedings—The provisions of this Order do not apply to execution proceedings (x).

ORDER XVIII.

Hearing of the Suit and Examination of Witnesses.

1. [S. 179, Expln.] The plaintiff has the right to begin unless the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff and contends that either in point of law or on some additional facts alleged by the defendant the plaintiff is not entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks, in which case the defendant has the right to begin.

O. 18,
rr. 1-3.

Right to begin.—The right to begin is to be determined by the rules of evidence. As a general rule the party on whom the burden of proof rests should begin. Sections 101-114 of the Indian Evidence Act I of 1872 deal with burden of proof. Section 102 of the Act provides that the burden of proof lies on that party who would fail if no evidence at all were given on either side. Thus if A sues B for the recovery of a piece of land of which B is in possession, the burden of proof lies on A, for if no evidence were given on either side, B would be entitled to retain his possession.

“Unless the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff.”—“Facts” mean “all material facts.” Thus where a defendant admits only some of the facts alleged by the plaintiff, it does not give him the right to begin (y).

Preliminary issue raised by defendant that suit does not lie.—Where the defendant raises a preliminary issue that the suit is barred as res judicata, the defendant has the right to begin (z).

Preliminary issue raised by respondent that appeal does not lie.—In such a case, according to the Bombay High Court, the appellant has the right to begin. The decision was put on the ground of established practice in the Bombay High Court (a).

2. [s. 179, 1st para., s. 180, 1st and 2nd paras.] (1) On the day fixed for the hearing of the suit or on any other day to which the hearing is adjourned, the party having the right to begin shall state his case and produce his evidence in support of the issues which he is bound to prove.

(2) The other party shall then state his case and produce his evidence (if any) and may then address the Court generally on the whole case.

(3) The party beginning may then reply generally on the whole case.

“The other party shall then state his case.”—Where there are two sets of defendants and their interests are practically the same, the rule is that after the plaintiff has closed his case, both the defendants should state their case before any evidence is given by either defendant (b).

Some of the defendants supporting plaintiff's case.—Where there are several defendants and some of them support the plaintiff's case, the rule is that the plaintiff and such of the defendants as support his case, wholly or in part, must address the Court and call their evidence in the first place, and then “the other party,” that is, the other defendants, should address the Court and call their evidence (c).

3. [s. 180, 3rd para.] Where there are several issues the burden of proving some of which lies on the other party, the party beginning may, at his option, either produce

rr. 3-5.

4. [S. 181.] The evidence of the witnesses in attendance shall be taken orally in open Court in the presence and under the personal direction and superintendence of the Judge.

Witness to be examined in open Court.

Evidence of witnesses.—It is the duty of the Judge to examine every witness tendered, unless it appears clearly that the object of summoning a large number of witnesses is to obstruct or delay justice (d). It is not right for the Judge to select a certain number of witnesses and send away the rest, because he thinks that they would only prove the same facts as those already deposed to (e), or because he is satisfied on the evidence already recorded (f). If he does so, the appellate Court may remand the case with a direction to him to take the evidence of the witnesses tendered by the party, but not examined by the Judge (g).

Evidence shall be taken "in open Court."—As to the examination of witnesses "on commission," see Order 26 below.

5. [S. 182.] In cases in which an appeal is allowed the evidence of each witness shall be taken down in writing, in the language of the Court, by or in the presence and under the personal direction and superintendence of the Judge, not ordinarily in the form of question and answer, but in that of a narrative, and, when completed, shall be read over in the presence of the Judge and of the witness, and the Judge shall, if necessary, correct the same, and shall sign it.

How evidence shall be taken in appealable cases.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (4)].

Presence of parties.—Where evidence is taken in the absence of the opposite party, it will be rejected by the Court of appeal, if the objection to the reception of the evidence was taken before the Court trying the suit. If no such objection was taken the appellate Court would not remand the case especially if the other evidence in the case is sufficient to support the decision of the lower Court (h). "Shall be read over."—There is a difference of opinion whether, if the deposition is not read over to the witness as required by this rule or interpreted to him as required by r. 6 below, it is admissible in evidence in trials for perjury and forgery, it being held in some cases that the deposition is not admissible in evidence (i), while in others that it is (j). The former class of decisions proceed on the ground that the deposition not being read over or interpreted to the witness, it does not prove itself under s. 80 of the Evidence Act, 1872, and that it cannot be proved in any other way having regard to the provisions of s. 91 of that Act. The latter class of decisions proceed on the ground that though the deposition does not in such a case prove itself under s. 80 of the Evidence Act, it may be proved in any other way, e.g., by the Judge who took it down, and that s. 91 of the Act is no bar to such proof.

Where a witness understands English and the deposition is read over by him instead of being read over to him, it is a substantial compliance with the rule (k).

Signature of witness.—The rule does not require a witness to sign his evidence (l).

Signature of Judge.—A prosecution for perjury cannot be sustained if the deposition is not signed by the Judge. The signing of the deposition by the Judge is made essential to the application of s. 80 of the Evidence Act, 1872, by the section itself (m).

6. [S. 183.] Where the evidence is taken down in a language different from that in which it is given, and the witness does not understand the language in which it is taken down, the evidence as taken down in writing shall be interpreted to him in the language in which it is given.

When deposition to be interpreted.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (4)].

"Shall be interpreted."—See notes to r. 5 above, "Shall be read over."

7. [New.] Evidence taken down under section 138 shall be in the form prescribed by rule 5 and shall be read over and signed and, as occasion may require, interpreted and corrected as if it were evidence taken down under that rule.

Evidence under section 138.

8. [S. 184.] Where the evidence is not taken down in writing by the Judge, he shall be bound, as the examination of each witness proceeds, to make a memorandum of the substance of what each witness deposes and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Judge and shall form part of the record.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (4)]. O. 18, rr. 8-12.

9. [S. 185.] Where English is not the language of the Court, but all the parties to the suit who appear in person, and the pleaders of such as appear by pleaders, do not object to have such evidence as is given in English taken down in English, the Judge may so take it down.

When evidence may be taken in English.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (4)].

10. [S. 186.] The Court may, of its own motion or on the application of any party or his pleader, take down any particular question and answer, or any objection to any question, if there appears to be any special reason for so doing.

Any particular question and answer may be taken down.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (4)].

11. [S. 187.] Where any question put to a witness is objected to by a party or his pleader, and the Court allows the same to be put, the Judge shall take down the question, the answer, the objection and the name of the person making it, together with the decision of the Court thereon.

Questions objected to and allowed by Court.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (4)].

Where no objection is taken.—If evidence has been admitted without objection in the Court of first instance, it must not be rejected by the appellate Court (n).

12. [S. 188.] The Court may record such remarks as it thinks material respecting the demeanour of any witness while under examination.

Remarks on demeanour of witnesses.

O. 18,
rr. 13-16.

13. [S. 189.] In cases in which an appeal is not allowed, it shall not be necessary to take down the evidence of the witnesses in writing at length; but the Judge, as the examination of each witness proceeds, shall make a memorandum of the substance of what he deposes, and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Judge and shall form part of the record.

Memorandum of evidence in unappealable cases.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (4)].

14. [S. 190.] (1) Where the Judge is unable to make a memorandum as required by this Order, he shall cause the reason of such inability to be recorded, and shall cause the memorandum to be made in writing from his dictation in open Court.

Judge unable to make such memorandum to record reasons of his inability.

(2) Every memorandum so made shall form part of the record.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (4)].

15. [S. 191.] (1) Where a Judge is prevented by death, transfer or other cause from concluding the trial of a suit, his successor may deal with any evidence or memorandum taken down or made under the foregoing rules as if such evidence or memorandum had been taken down or made by him or under his direction under the said rules and may proceed with the suit from the stage at which his predecessor left it.

(2) The provisions of sub-rule (1) shall, so far as they are applicable, be deemed to apply to evidence taken in a suit transferred under section 24.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule so far as it relates to the manner of taking evidence does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (4)].

of the Court why his evidence should be taken immediately, the Court may upon the application of any party or of the witness, at any time after the institution of the suit, take the evidence of such witness in manner hereinbefore provided. O. 18,
rr. 16-18.

(2) Where such evidence is not taken forthwith and in the presence of the parties, such notice as the Court thinks sufficient, of the day fixed for the examination, shall be given to the parties.

(3) The evidence so taken shall be read over to the witness, and, if he admits it to be correct, shall be signed by him, and the Judge shall, if necessary, correct the same and shall sign it, and it may then be read at any hearing of the suit.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule so far as it relates to the manner of taking evidence does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (4)].

Notice.—For form of notice, see App. H, form No. 6.

17. [S. 193.] The Court may at any stage of a suit recall any witness who has been examined and may (subject to the law of evidence for the time being in force) put such questions to him as the Court thinks fit.

Court may recall and examine witness.

18. [New.] The Court may at any stage of a suit inspect any property or thing concerning which any question may arise.

Power of Court to inspect.

View by Judge.—This rule does not entitle a Judge to put a view in the place of evidence. Thus in an action of deceit brought on the ground that a particular article used by the defendant is a colourable imitation of the plaintiff's, the conclusion of the Judge, on a view by him of the two articles—such as two rival omnibuses, that the defendant's article is calculated to deceive, is not sufficient by itself to support an injunction. The Judge must be satisfied by independent evidence that there is at least a reasonable probability of deception (o).

ORDER XIX.

Affidavits.

1. [S. 194.] Any Court may at any time for sufficient reason order that any particular fact or facts may be proved by affidavit, or that the affidavit of any witness may

O. 19, rr. 1-3. be read at the hearing, on such conditions as the Court thinks reasonable :

Provided that where it appears to the Court that either party bona fide desires the production of a witness for cross-examination, and that such witness can be produced, an order shall not be made authorizing the evidence of such witness to be given by affidavit.

2. [S. 195.] (1) Upon any application evidence may be given by affidavit, but the Court may, at the instance of either party, order the attendance for cross-examination of the deponent.

Power to order attendance of deponent for cross-examination.

(2) Such attendance shall be in Court, unless the deponent is exempted from personal appearance in Court, or the Court otherwise directs.

3. [S. 196.] (1) Affidavits shall be confined to such facts as the deponent is able of his own knowledge to prove, except on interlocutory applications, on which statements of his belief may be admitted : provided that the grounds thereof are stated.

Matters to which affidavits shall be confined.

(2) The costs of every affidavit which shall unnecessarily set forth matters of hearsay or argumentative matter, or copies of or extracts from documents, shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be paid by the party filing the same.

Grounds of belief.—The grounds of belief must be stated with sufficient particularity to enable the Court to judge whether it would be safe to act on the deponent's belief (p).

ORDER XX.

Judgment and Decree.

O. 20, r. 1. 1. [S. 198.] The Court, after the case has been heard, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day, of which due notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders.

Judgment when pronounced.

See s. 33 above.

O. 20,
rr. 1-2.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (5)].

General rule.—As a general rule, judgment must be given upon evidence taken by the Judge before himself, and not upon evidence taken before another person (q).

Exceptions to the above rule.—In the three following cases the Judge may give judgment upon evidence recorded by some other Judge or person :—

- (1) Under O. 18, r. 15, when the Judge taking down evidence is prevented by death, transfer or other cause from concluding the trial of the suit.
- (2) Under O. 26, r. 1, where the evidence has been taken by a commissioner of a witness residing within the jurisdiction who is exempted under the Code from attending the Court or is unable to attend from sickness or infirmity.
- (3) Under O. 26, r. 4, where the evidence has been taken by a commissioner of a witness residing beyond the jurisdiction and of other persons specified in the rule.

Judgment not pronounced.—A judgment not pronounced in Court does not operate as a judgment at all; it operates only as minutes or memoranda made by the Judge who wrote it (r).

Non-compliance with rules 1, 2 and 3.—Where a judgment is not pronounced, dated, or signed in conformity with the requirements of the Code, it constitutes a mere irregularity within the meaning of s. 99; it affords no ground for reversal of the decree based on it (s).

Power to pronounce judgment written by Judge's predecessor

2. [S. 199.] A Judge may pronounce a judgment written but not pronounced by his predecessor.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (5)].

Written by his predecessor.—It does not matter that the judgment was written by the Judge's predecessor after he had taken leave or left the judicial post which he occupied when he heard the case or after he had been transferred (t). The fact that the transferred officer himself pronounces the judgment does not make any difference (u).

May pronounce.—The word "may" leaves a Judge the option to pronounce a judgment according to his own view of the case, though it may be different from the judgment written by his predecessor who heard the case (v).

8. [S. 202.] The judgment shall be dated and signed by the Judge in open Court at the time of pronouncing it and, when once signed, shall not afterwards be altered or added to, save as provided by section 152 or on review.

Judgment to be signed.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (5)].

“Shall not afterwards be altered.”—Where a District Judge delivered a judgment in open Court, but suspended the issue of the decree pending the production by the plaintiff of a certificate of succession, it was held that it was not competent to the Judge to cancel the judgment and deliver another judgment inconsistent with the first (w).

Amendment.—S. 152 enables the Court to correct clerical or arithmetical mistakes or errors arising from accidental slips in judgments, decrees or orders. See p. 327 above.

Review.—See s. 114, and O. 47, r. 1.

Non-compliance with rules 1, 2 and 3.—See notes to r. 1 above under the same head.

4. [S. 203.] (1) Judgments of a Court of Small Causes need not contain more than the points for determination and the decision thereon.

Court invested with Small Cause Court powers.—A Court invested with Small Cause Court powers is governed by sub-r. (1), and not sub-r. (2) (x).

5. [S. 204.] In suits in which issues have been framed, the Court shall state its finding or decision, with the reasons therefor, upon each separate issue, unless the finding upon any one or more of the issues is sufficient for the decision of the suit.

O. 20,
rr. 5-7.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (5)].

Object of judgment.—The proper object of a judgment is to support by the most cogent reasons that suggest themselves the final conclusion at which the Judge has conscientiously arrived. That object is defeated by the Judge elaborately recording the fluctuations of his mind from day to day in reference to the witnesses, the evidence, and the arguments. It is a substantial objection to a judgment that it does not dispose of the question as it was presented by the parties, e.g., when it finds a particular signature to be a forgery which both sides admit to be genuine (y).

6. [S. 206, 1st and 2nd paras., S. 221.] (1) The decree shall agree with the judgment; it shall contain the number of the suit, the names and descriptions of the parties, and particulars of the claim and shall specify clearly the relief granted or other determination of the suit.

Contents of decree.

(2) The decree shall also state the amount of costs incurred in the suit, and by whom or out of what property and in what proportions such costs are to be paid.

(3) The Court may direct that the costs payable to one party by the other shall be set off against any sum which is admitted or found to be due from the former to the latter.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (5)].

Sub-rule 3.—This sub-rule corresponds to s. 221 of the Code of 1882.

Power to amend decree.—See s. 152 and notes thereto.

7. [S. 205.] The decree shall bear date the day on which the judgment was pronounced, and when the Judge has satisfied himself that the decree has been drawn up in accordance with the judgment he shall sign the decree.

Date of Decree.

8. [New.] Where a Judge has vacated office after pronouncing judgment but without signing the decree, a decree drawn up in accordance with such judgment may be signed by his successor or, if the Court has ceased to exist, by the Judge of any Court to which such Court was subordinate.

Procedure where Judge has vacated office before signing decree.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3, cl. (5)].

9. [S. 207.] Where the subject-matter of the suit is immovable property, the decree shall contain a description of such property sufficient to identify the same, and where such property can be identified by boundaries by numbers in a record of settlement of survey, the decree shall specify such boundaries or numbers.

Decree for recovery of immovable property.

Decree for possession of land.—A decree for possession of land carries with it possession of account books and other papers relating to the management of the land (z).

10. [S. 208.] Where the suit is for movable property, and the decree is for the delivery of such property, the decree shall also state the amount of money to be paid as an alternative if delivery cannot be had.

Decree for delivery of movable property.

Decree for delivery of movable property.—This rule contemplates suits for the recovery of specific movable property, referred in arts. 48 and 49 of the Limitation Act (a).

11. [S. 210.] (1) Where, and in so far as a decree is for the payment of money, the Court may for any sufficient reason at the time of passing the decree, order that payment of the amount decreed shall be postponed or shall be made by instalments, with or without interest, notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which the money is payable.

Decree may direct payment by instalments.

(2) After the passing of any such decree the Court may, O.20, r. 11.

payment by instalments.

on the application of the judgment-debtor and with the consent of the decree-holder, order that payment of the amount decreed shall be postponed or shall be made by instalments on such terms as to the payment of interest, the attachment of the property of the judgment-debtor, or the taking of security from him, or otherwise, as it thinks fit.

Old section.—This rule corresponds with s. 210 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars : —

- (1) The words “shall be postponed” in sub-rules (1) and (2) are new.
- (2) The words “notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which the money is payable” in sub-rule (1) are also new; see notes below under those words.

“In so far as the decree is for the payment of money.”—This rule applies to money-decrees only and not to mortgage decrees (b).

“Notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which the money is payable.”—Those words are new. They have been added to over-ride the ruling of the Bombay High Court in Ragho v. Dipchand (c). In that case it was held that if A executed a bond to B payable by instalments, with a proviso that if default was made in payment of any one of the instalments, the whole amount should become due and payable forthwith, and if on default being made by A in payment of any one instalment B sued A to recover the whole of the balance due, the Court could not, at the time of passing the decree, order the amount decreed to be paid by instalments, for to do so, it was said, would be inconsistent with the terms of the bond. Under the present rule the Court has the power to order payment of the amount decreed by instalments, notwithstanding the terms of the bond.

Interest.—Where a decree is made payable by instalments under sub-rule (1), the rate of interest is in the discretion of the Court (d).

Sub-rule (2).—After decree, no order can be made for payment by instalments nor can payment be postponed except with the consent of the decree-holder.

Limitation.—An application by a judgment-debtor under this rule for payment of the amount of a decree by instalments should be made within 6 months from the date of the decree [Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, art. 175].

Execution of decree payable by instalments.—In the case of an ordinary instalment decree, that is a decree payable by instalments on certain specified dates, the period of limitation as regards each instalment (which is 3 years) runs from the date on which the instalment becomes due (e). In the case of a decree payable by instalments, with a proviso that if default be made in payment of any one of the instalments, the whole of the decretal amount should become due and recoverable in execution, limitation runs from the date of the first default (f). But if the judgment-debtor pays

12. [Ss. 211, 121.] (1) Where a suit is for the recovery of possession of immovable property and for rent or mesne profits, the Court may pass a decree—

Decree for possession and mesne profits.

- (a) for the possession of the property ;
- (b) for the rent of mesne profits which have accrued on the property during a period prior to the institution of the suit or directing an inquiry as to such rent or mesne profits ;
- (c) directing an inquiry as to rent or mesne profits from the institution of the suit until—
 - (i) the delivery of possession to the decree-holder.
 - (ii) the relinquishment of possession by the judgment-debtor with notice to the decree-holder through the Court, or
 - (iii) the expiration of three years from the date of the decree, whichever event first occurs.

(2) Where an inquiry is directed under clause (b) or clause (c) a final decree in respect of the rent or mesne profits shall be passed in accordance with the result of such inquiry.

Old section.—The provisions relating to mesne profits in the Code of 1882 were contained in ss. 211, 212 and 244. Those provisions have now been re-cast. The definition of mesne profits is relegated to s. 2, cl. 12. At the same time an important alteration has been made as regards procedure in determining the amount of mesne profits. Under the Code of 1882, the amount of mesne profits was to be determined in execution proceedings [see C.P.C., 1882, s. 244, cls. (a) and (b)]. Under the present rule the amount must be determined by the decree and not in execution.

Decree for possession and mesne profits.—In a suit for the recovery of possession of immovable property, the plaintiff may claim mesne profits which have accrued due during a period prior to the institution of the suit. He may also claim mesne profits which have accrued due subsequent to the institution of the suit [see s. 11, p. 80, O.20, r. 12. para. (2)]. The decree to be passed in such a case will now be as follows :—

1. That the defendant do put the plaintiff in possession of the property specified in the schedule annexed to the decree. [To this extent the decree is final].
2. { That the defendant do pay to the plaintiff the sum of Rs. with interest thereon at the rate of per cent. per annum to the date of realization on account of mesne profits which have accrued due prior to the institution of the suit. [To this extent the decree is final].
Or [where accounts have to be taken of the mesne profits]—
That an inquiry be made as to the amount of mesne profits which have accrued due prior to the institution of the suit. [To this extent the decree is preliminary: see s. 2, Expln].
3. That an inquiry be made as to the amount of mesne profits from the institution of the suit until the point of time specified in cl. (c) of the section. [To this extent the decree is preliminary]. See Sch. I, App. D, Form No. 23.

The inquiry referred to above will be held before an officer of the Court appointed in that behalf, who must report to the Court the result of the inquiry. After that is done, and the parties have been heard on the report, a final decree will be passed in respect of the mesne profits. It is important to note that where a preliminary decree under this rule has either intentionally or inadvertently omitted to direct an enquiry into future mesne profits, the Court has no power to direct such enquiry by its final decree (h).

Application of the rule.—This rule applies not only where the plaintiff sues for possession of the whole of an immovable property, but also where he sues for possession of a portion thereof. But the portion must be a specified portion, that is, a portion to the profits whereof the plaintiff is exclusively entitled. Hence the provisions of this rule do not apply to a suit for partition by a member of a joint Hindu family, for until partition no member is entitled to a specific share of the property (i). This does not mean that a member of a joint Hindu family is not entitled in a suit or partition to claim his share of the rents and profits of the joint property from which he may have been wrongfully excluded. He is entitled to such share (j), but the Court in deciding upon his claim is to be guided, not by the provisions of this rule, but by the rules of Hindu law relating to partition.

Mesne profits.—The expression “mesne profits” is defined in s. 2, cl. (12), as meaning those profits which the person in wrongful possession of property actually received or might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom, together with interest on such profits, but shall not include profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession.

The claim for mesne profits is virtually a claim for damages. Hence there is no rigid rule for determining the amount of mesne profits, and the amount must be assessed in every case by a proper exercise of judicial discretion (k). “Mesne profits are in the nature of damages which the Court may mould according to the justice of the case.”

- O. 20, r. 12. Hence in calculating mesne profits, payments of revenue and cesses made by the defendant should be deducted (l). But the costs of collecting the rents or profits should not be allowed to the defendant, unless he entered on the property in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right (m).

Where a defendant has been in wrongful possession for a certain period, and is subsequently dispossessed by a third party, the defendant can only be charged with mesne profits for the period for which he was in wrongful possession. He cannot be charged with mesne profits that have accrued due subsequently to his dispossession, though the person who dispossessed him may not have done anything to recover the rents or profits (n). The reason is that if a defendant is dispossessed by a third party, he cannot be said to have even impliedly received the profits, nor could he with ordinary or extraordinary diligence have received them. But where a defendant who has been in wrongful possession abandons the land without giving notice to the plaintiff, he will be held liable for mesne profits (o).

Where a person buys immovable property from a defendant pending a suit against him for recovery of the property and for mesne profits, and a decree is eventually passed against the defendant, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the mesne profits not only from the defendant, but from the purchaser pendente lite (p).

Interest forming part of mesne profits.—It will be seen from the definition of mesne profits, that mesne profits consist of two items, namely, (1) profits of the property and (2) interest on such profits. Hence if a decree awards mesne profits, but says nothing about interest, that is, interest on the profits, it must be construed as including not only the profits, but the interest on such profits. It has been so held by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Grish Chunder v. Shoshi Shikhareswar (q). If the profits were payable from month to month, the interest thereon would be calculated month by month, and if they were payable from year to year, the interest would be calculated year by year. Calculating in this manner, the interest on the profits must be allowed up to the date of ascertainment of the aggregate amount of mesne profits (r); but in no case should it be allowed for a period longer than three years from the date of the decree (s). The reason is that the item of interest we are now considering forms an integral part of "mesne profits," and since mesne profits cannot be allowed for a period longer than three years from the date of the decree, the interest forming part thereof also cannot be allowed for a longer period. It must not, however, be supposed that because "mesne profits" are defined as meaning "profits" plus "interest on such profits," therefore the Court must always allow interest on such profits. Mesne profits, it must be remembered, are in the nature of damages which the Court may award according to the justice of the case. And since the item of interest now under consideration forms part of mesne profits, it is equally in the discretion of the Court whether to allow such interest or not (t). For the same reason, the Court may, while allowing the claim for interest, direct the interest to be calculated not month by month or year by year as stated above, but in a manner less advantageous to the plaintiff. The mode of calculation indicated in the beginning of this paragraph applies only to those cases where the decree is silent as to the mode in which interest is to be calculated.

After the aggregate amount of mesne profits is ascertained, the plaintiff may apply to the Court for a final decree for the amount so ascertained, and for interest on that amount, and the Court may award interest at such rate as it thinks fit (u). This rate is usually 6 per cent. (v). See s. 34. O. 20,
rr. 12, 13.

"Three years from the date of the decree."—"Decree" means final decree. Thus if an appeal is preferred from a decree for mesne profits, and the decree is confirmed in appeal, the period of three years is to be computed from the date of the appellate decree (w). Similarly, if a decree for mesne profits is taken to the Privy Council and is confirmed, the period of three years is to be counted from the date of the King's order in Council (x). See notes to s. 36, "What decree may be executed?"

When a decree awards possession with mesne profits to be ascertained in an inquiry, but specifies no time down to which mesne profits are to be computed, the decree cannot be construed as giving mesne profits for a period longer than three years from the date of the decree (y). The plaintiff therefore is not entitled to mesne profits for more than three years from the date of the decree, though the possession was not delivered to him until after the expiration of the three years. Note the words "whichever event first occurs" in sub-r. (1), ol. (c).

Limitation.—As regards mesne profits accrued due prior to the institution of the suit, the defendant is only liable for the mesne profits accrued due during the three years before the date of the suit. A claim for mesne profits during a period proceeding the three years next before the date of the suit is barred under the Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 109 (z).

Appeal.—Under the Code of 1882 [s. 244], the amount of mesne profits was determined in execution proceedings, and the decision determining mesne profits, being an order in execution proceedings, was appealable as a decree. Under the present rule the amount of mesne profits is to be determined by the decree itself, and a party aggrieved by the determination as to mesne profits may now prefer an appeal from the decree itself (a).

Mesne profits and jurisdiction.—See notes to s. 6 on p. 15 above, and notes to s. 38, under the head "Rule IV," on p. 114 above.

For an additional sub-rule made by the Madras High Court.—See Appendix VII below.

13. [S. 213.] (1) Where a suit is for an account of any property and for its due administration under the decree of the Court, the Court shall, before passing the final decree, pass a preliminary decree ordering such accounts and inquiries to be taken and made, and giving such other directions as it thinks fit.

O. 20, r. 13. (2) In the administration by the Court of the property of any deceased person, if such property proves to be insufficient for the payment in full of his debts and liabilities, the same rules shall be observed as to the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors and as to debts and liabilities proveable, and as to the valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities respectively, as may be in force for the time being within the local limits of the Court in which the administration-suit is pending with respect to the estates of persons adjudged or declared insolvent; and all persons, who in any such case would be entitled to be paid out of such property, may come in under the preliminary decree, and make such claims against the same as they may respectively be entitled to by virtue of this Code.

Judicature Act, 1875, s. 10.—The words of the present rule are almost the same as s. 10 of the Judicature Act of 1875.

Administration-suit.—Where a person dies leaving a will, it is his executor that administers his estate, and where he dies intestate, it is his administrator that administers his estate. The administration of the estate of a deceased person consists, first, in paying his funeral expenses, next his debts, and then the legacies under his will (if any). The residue of his estate is then to be divided among the residuary legatees under his will (b), or amongst his heirs if he has left no will. In an administration-suit, it is the Court that takes upon itself to a large extent the functions of an executor or administrator, and administers the estate of the deceased.

The following persons may maintain an administration-suit :—

(1) A creditor of the deceased, when his claim is not paid off by the legal representatives of the deceased. But though a creditor may bring an administration-suit, he must bring the suit on behalf of himself and the other creditors (c).

(2) A legatee, whether specific or pecuniary, where the legacy is not paid to him by the legal representatives of the deceased.

(3) Next-of-kin of the deceased, for their share in the estate of the deceased.

(4) An executor or administrator, when there are disputes amongst the legatees or next-of-kin as to the amount of the property left by the deceased and the amount to which the legatees or next-of-kin are entitled (Walker and Elgood on Administration Actions, pp. 24-31).

Forms of plaint in an administration-suit.—See Sch. I, App. A, forms Nos. 41 to 43.

Preliminary decree.—This rule provides that in an administration-suit, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree before passing the final decree, directing accounts to be taken and enquiries to be made. For forms of preliminary decree, see Sch. I, App. D, forms Nos. 17 and 19, and for forms of final decree, see forms Nos. 18 and 20.

Insolvent estate.—Sub-rule (2) provides that when it appears in an administration-suit that the estate of the deceased is insolvent, the rules laid down in the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act, 1909, as to Presidency Towns, and in the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1907, as to the rest of British India, shall apply so far as regards (1) the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors, (2) debts and liabilities proveable, and (3) the valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities. Note that this sub-rule does not apply all the rules and principles of bankruptcy to insolvent estates, but only the rules in respect of the three heads enumerated above (d).

Rights of secured creditors under the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act.—See s. 48 of the Act, and cls. 9 to 17 of Sch. II to the Act.

Rights of secured creditors under the Provincial Insolvency Act.—See S. 31 of the Act.

Debts and liabilities proveable under the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act.—See sections 46 and 48 and Schedule II of the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act, 1909.

Debts and liabilities proveable under the Provincial Insolvency Act.—See ss. 28 and 29 of the Act.

Suit to recover assets improperly paid by the Administrator-General.

This section does not apply to a suit brought by a creditor of the deceased against the Administrator-General (to whom letters of administration have been granted) and against other creditors of the deceased to recover assets alleged to have been improperly paid by the Administrator-General to such creditors in priority to the plaintiff (e).

14. [S. 214.] (1) Where the Court decrees a claim to pre-emption in respect of a particular sale of property and the purchase-money has not been paid into Court, the decree shall—

Decree in pre-emption suit.

- (a) specify a day on or before which the purchase-money shall be so paid and
- (b) direct that on payment into Court of such purchase-money, together with the costs (if any) decreed against the plaintiff, on or before the day referred to in clause (a), the defendant shall deliver possession of the property to the plaintiff, whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment, but that, if the purchase-money and the costs (if any) are not so paid, the suit shall be dismissed with costs.

(2) Where the Court has adjudicated upon rival claims to pre-emption, the decree shall direct,—

O. 20, r.14.

- (a) if and in so far as the claims decreed are equal in degree, that the claim of each pre-emptor complying with the provisions of sub-rule (1) shall take effect in respect of a proportionate share of the property including any proportionate share in respect of which the claim of any pre-emptor failing to comply with the said provisions would, but for such default, have taken effect; and,
- (b) if and so far as the claims decreed are different in degree, that the claim of the inferior pre-emptor shall not take effect unless and until the superior pre-emptor has failed to comply with the said provisions.

Difference between the old section and the present rule.—This rule corresponds with s. 214, C. P. C., 1882, except in the following particulars :—

1. The words “ whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment ” are new. See notes below under those words.

2. Sub-rule (2) is also new. See notes below under the head “ Sub-rule (2) : Rival pre-emptors.”

Pre-emption.—The right of pre-emption can only be exercised in respect of immovable property. A and B, both Mahomedans, are co-sharers of a house. If B sells his share to X for Rs. 500, A is entitled to pre-empt B's share on payment of Rs. 500, that is to say, A as co-sharer may require B to sell his share to him in preference to X. The same rule applies if A and B are owners of adjoining houses. If B refuses to sell his share to A, A may institute a suit for pre-emption against B and X. It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad, that if the sale by B to X has been completed before the date of the suit, B having no longer any interest in the property, he is not a necessary party to the suit (f). If a decree is passed for A, and if he has not paid the amount of purchase-money into Court, the decree should specify a day on or before which the purchase-money should be paid into Court. If the amount is paid within the time fixed by the Court, A will be entitled to enter into possession of B's share. But if he fails to pay the amount within that time, he will lose the benefit of the decree (g). The original Court has no power to extend the time for payment (h), but it is competent to the appellate Court to extend the time (i).

It is important to note that the right of pre-emption is a personal right. This gives rise to the following consequences :—

1. If the pre-emptor, that is, the person entitled to pre-emption, transfers the right to a third party, the right is lost and the transferee cannot maintain a suit for pre-emption (j).

2. It is not settled whether if the pre-emptor dies during the pendency of the O.20, r. 14. suit for pre-emption, the right, according to Sunni Mahomedan Law, is extinguished (k), or whether it survives to his heirs or to his legal representatives (l).
3. If the pre-emptor transfers the right of pre-emption during the pendency of the suit for pre-emption, the right of pre-emption is lost, and the suit will be dismissed. And even if he obtains a decree and transfers the decree, the right of pre-emption will be lost, and the Court will not allow execution of the decree. But if he obtains a decree, and transfers not the decree, but the property which is the subject of pre-emption, the right of pre-emption is not lost and he may execute the decree, though execution will not be allowed to the transferee (m).

"Whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment."—These words have been added to make it clear that the title to the property vests in the plaintiff on payment of the purchase-money, and that it is not necessary to complete the title that there should be any document in writing and registered as required by the Transfer of Property Act in the case of a sale of immovable property. The object of adding these words into the rule is to supersede the opinion expressed by the High Court of Madras that, since the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, the title to a pre-empted property could not vest in the plaintiff without an instrument of transfer (n).

Mesne profits.—Upon a pre-emption decree the property and the right to mesne profits therefrom vest in the pre-emptor only from the date when he pays the amount of the purchase price finally decreed; until that time, the original purchaser retains possession and is entitled to the rents and profits (o).

Extension of time for payment into Court.—See notes above under the head "Pre-emption" and notes to s. 148 above.

Sub-rule (2): Rival pre-emptors.—Sub-r. (2) prescribes the form of decree to be passed when there are rival pre-emptors. It is based upon the undermentioned rulings of the Allahabad High Court (p).

Pre-emption under the Mahomedan law.—The Mahomedan law is the only system prevalent in British India which provides substantive rules relating to the right of pre-emption in a systematic form (q). The Mahomedan law of pre-emption is applied by the Courts of British India to Mahomedans except in the Madras Presidency, the Punjab and Oudh. In the Madras Presidency, the right of pre-emption is not recognised by the Courts even as between Mahomedans, on the ground that it places a restriction upon liberty of transfer of property, and is therefore opposed to equity and good conscience (r). Pre-emption in the Punjab is regulated by the Punjab Laws Act, 1872, and in Oudh by the Oudh Laws Act, 1876. See Mulla's "Principles of Mahomedan Law," 6th Ed., pp. 147-149.

rr. 14-16.

Pre-emption by custom.—The Sunni Mahomedan law of pre-emption applies by custom to Hindus in Behar (s) and Gujarat (t).

Pre-emption by contract.—A right of pre-emption is occasionally given in mortgage deeds to the mortgagee, so that in case of a sale of the equity of redemption by the mortgagor, the mortgagee shall have the refusal of the property; and in such a case the price may or may not be fixed beforehand (u).

Vendor's title in pre-emption suit.—A pre-emptor is not entitled in a pre-emption suit to put the vendor on proof of his title to the property which he purports to sell. The reason is that the principle of pre-emption is substitution. A pre-emptor is therefore bound to take the title which the vendee was ready to take (v).

15. [S. 215.] Where a suit is for the dissolution of a partnership, or the taking of partnership accounts, the Court, before passing a final decree, may pass a preliminary decree declaring the proportionate shares of the parties, fixing the day on which the partnership shall stand dissolved or be deemed to have been dissolved, and directing such accounts to be taken, and other acts to be done, as it thinks fit.

Decree in suit for dissolution of partnership.

Preliminary decree directing accounts to be taken.—The preliminary decree directing accounts to be taken should always contain a declaration of the rights of the parties, and it should be in form No. 21, Sch. I, App. D (w). After the accounts are taken, a final decree is passed directing that the partnership assets be applied, first, in payment of the partnership debts, next, in payment of the costs of the suit, and lastly, in payment to each partner of the amount found due to him on taking the accounts; see Sch. I, App. D, form No. 22.

Appeal.—A preliminary decree in a suit for the dissolution of a partnership or the taking of partnership accounts is appealable under s. 96. But the appeal must be filed within the period prescribed by the law of limitation. If no appeal is preferred within the period of limitation, the party aggrieved by such decree is precluded by virtue of the provisions of s. 97 from disputing its correctness in an appeal from the final decree. See s. 97 and note thereto.

16. [S. 215-A.] In a suit for an account of pecuniary transactions between a principal and an agent, and in any other suit not hereinbefore provided for, where it is necessary, in order to ascertain the amount of money due to or from any party, that an account should be taken, the Court shall, before passing its final decree, pass a preliminary decree directing such account to be taken as it thinks fit.

Decree in suit for account between principal and agent.

Shall pass a preliminary decree directing accounts.—The provisions of this rule must be strictly followed. If the fact of agency is established, it is the duty of the Court to direct an account to be taken of the dealings between the parties, before passing the final decree. It is not proper to pass a final decree at the hearing (x). O. 20,

Stay of proceedings.—Where an appeal is pending against a preliminary decree, the Appellate Court may make an order under O. 41, r. 5, staying the inquiry into accounts pending the hearing of the appeal (y). See notes to O. 41, r. 5, under the head “Stay of proceedings under a decree.”

17. [New.] The Court may, either by the decree directing an account to be taken or by any subsequent order, give special directions with regard to the mode in which the account is to be taken or vouched and in particular may direct that in taking the account the books of account, in which the accounts in question have been kept, shall be taken as prima facie evidence of the truth of the matters therein contained with liberty to the parties interested to take such objection thereto as they may be advised.

Special directions as to accounts.

18. [New.] Where the Court passes a decree for the partition of property or for the separate possession of a share therein, then,— Decree in suit for partition of property or separate possession of a share therein.

(1) if and in so far as the decree relates to an estate assessed to the payment of revenue to the Government, the decree shall declare the rights of the several parties interested in the property, but shall direct such partition or separation to be made by the Collector, or any gazetted subordinate of the Collector deputed by him in this behalf, in accordance with such declaration and with the provisions of section 54.

(2) if and in so far as such decree relates to any other immovable property or to movable property, the Court may, if the partition or separation cannot be conveniently made without further inquiry, pass a preliminary decree declaring the rights of the several parties interested in the property and giving such further directions as may be required.

Sub-rule (1).—See s. 54 and notes thereto.

“Giving such further directions.”—These words are wide enough to include a direction for an enquiry into future mesne profits. But under the rule the

O. 20, direction should be in the preliminary decree. If no such direction is included in the preliminary decree, the Court has no power to direct an enquiry into future mesne profits by its final decree (z).

19. [S. 216.] (1) Where the defendant has been allowed a set-off against the claim of the plaintiff, the decree shall state what amount is due to the plaintiff and what amount is due to the defendant, and shall be for the recovery of any sum which appears to be due to either party.

Decree when set-off is allowed.

(2) Any decree passed in a suit in which a set-off is claimed shall be subject to the same provisions in respect of appeal to which it would have been subject if no set-off had been claimed.

Appeal from decree relating to set-off.

(3) The provisions of this rule shall apply whether the set-off is admissible under rule 6 of Order VIII or otherwise.

Appeal from decrees relating to set-off.—This rule corresponds with s. 216 of the Code of 1882, except as regards the provision as to the Court to which an appeal should lie from a decree passed in a suit in which a set-off is claimed. The second paragraph of s. 216 ran as follows :—

“The decree of the Court with respect to any sum awarded to the defendant shall have the same effect, and be subject to the same rules in respect of appeal or otherwise, as if such sum had been claimed by the defendant in a separate suit against the plaintiff.”

The present rule provides that appeals from decrees relating to set-off shall lie to the Courts to which appeals in respect of the original claim would lie.

Decree in case of set-off.—It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that in a suit by a principal against his agent for accounts, the Court can grant a decree to the agent for the amount found due to him on the taking of the accounts between the parties (a). The ground on which the decision is based is that a suit for accounts against an agent necessarily involves an undertaking by the principal to pay to the agent any sum that may be found due to him. Commenting upon this case, Phillips, J., in a Madras case (b) said : “This, I think, is taking a somewhat large view of the intention of a plaintiff in such a suit, for it could rarely be his intention to bring a suit in order that a decree might be given against him.” See note to O. 8, r. 6, “The amount claimed to be set off must be legally recoverable,” p. 443 above.

20. [S. 217.] Certified copies of judgment and decree to be furnished. Certified copies of the judgment and decree shall be furnished to the parties on application to the Court, and at their expense.

ORDER XXI.

Execution of Decrees and Orders.

Of execution of decrees in general.—The present order is the longest Order in the whole Schedule. It consists of 103 rules. It is proposed here to give a summary of these rules, and at the same time an idea of the different kinds of execution, and the procedure in respect thereof. The references to the rules given in this summary are to the rules of the present Order.

O. 21.

A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 5,000. Here A is the decree-holder, B is the judgment-debtor, and Rs. 5,000 is the judgment-debt. If B fails to satisfy the decree, A may apply for execution of the decree against B's person, or against his property, or both (r. 30). But the Court may, in its discretion, refuse execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor (r. 21). Execution against the person of the judgment-debtor consists in arresting him and detaining him in jail. Execution against the property of a judgment-debtor consists in attaching and selling his property, and paying the decree-holder the amount of the judgment-debt out of the sale-proceeds.

Application for execution.—All proceedings in execution are to be commenced by an application for execution (r. 10). The application for execution must be in writing [r. 11 (2)] and should contain the particulars set forth in rr. 11 (2) to 14. The only exception is where the decree is for the payment of money and the judgment-debtor is in the precincts of the Court when the decree is passed, in which case the Court may order immediate execution on the oral application of the decree-holder at the time of passing the decree [r. 11 (1)]. If the application complies with the requirements of rr. 11 (2) to 14, the Court will direct execution to issue (r. 24). If it does not, the Court may reject it, or may require it to be amended (r. 17). If the application is rejected, the decree-holder may present another application properly framed.

Who may apply for execution.—The application for execution is to be made by the decree-holder. If the decree is transferred by the decree-holder, the transferee may apply for execution (r. 16). If the decree has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one, any one of such persons may apply for execution (r. 15). If the decree holder is dead, his legal representative may apply for execution (s. 146).

Against whom execution may be applied for.—If the judgment-debtor is living, execution is to be applied for against him. If he is dead, execution may be applied for against his legal representative. In the latter case, the decree may not be executed against the person of the legal representative, but only against the property of the judgment-debtor which has come to the hands of the legal representative and has not been duly disposed of by him (s. 50). As to notice to the legal representative, see the next paragraph.

Notice before ordering execution.—The law does not require any notice to be issued to the party against whom execution is applied for, except in the following two cases:—

1. Where the application for execution is made more than one year after the date of the decree or more than one year after the date of the last order made on any previous application for execution.
2. Where execution is applied for against the legal representative of the judgment-debtor.

- O. 21. In the two cases mentioned above the Code provides that "the Court executing the decree shall issue a notice" (r. 22). There is one case in which it is discretionary with the Court to issue a notice before making an order for execution, and that is where the decree is for money and execution is sought against the person of the judgment-debtor (r. 37).

Execution against the person of the judgment-debtor.—

(i) Decrees for the payment of money.—A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 5,000 and costs. [This is a money-decree.] B fails to pay the amount of the judgment-debt. A applies for execution of the decree against B's person [r. 11 (2), cl. (j)]. The decree being a money-decree, the Court may, instead of issuing a warrant for B's arrest, issue a notice calling upon him to appear and show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison in execution of the decree (r. 37). If B appears and satisfies the Court that he is unable to pay the amount of the decree from poverty or other sufficient cause, and if there are no circumstances which disentitle B to the indulgence of the Court, the Court may make an order disallowing A's application for B's arrest and detention [r. 40 (1)]. If B does not appear, the Court should issue a warrant for his arrest if the decree-holder so desires (r. 37). If B appears, but fails to show cause to the satisfaction of the Court, the Court should cause him to be arrested [r. 40 (5)].

Where a warrant of arrest is issued, it should be executed by an officer of the Court appointed in that behalf (rr. 24-25). If when the officer goes to execute the warrant B offers payment of the amount of the judgment-debt (which must always be specified in the warrant), the officer should receive the payment and the warrant should not then be executed (r. 38). But if no payment is made, B should be arrested and brought before the Court "as soon as practicable" (s. 55). If no notice was issued prior to his arrest under r. 37, it is open to B to show that he is unable to pay the amount of the decree from poverty or any other sufficient cause [r. 40 (1)]. If the Court is satisfied that B is unable to pay the amount of the decree from poverty or any other sufficient cause, and if there are no other circumstances which would disentitle B to the indulgence of the Court, the Court will make an order directing B's release [r. 40 (1)]. Otherwise the Court will make an order committing B to prison [r. 40 (5)]. The prison is to be a civil prison (s. 55), and the term of detention in prison is six months if the amount of the decree exceeds Rs. 50, and six weeks if the amount of the decree does not exceed Rs. 50 (s. 58). If, while in prison, B pays the amount mentioned in the warrant to the officer in charge of the prison, or the decree is otherwise fully satisfied, as by attachment and sale of his property, he will be released from detention (s. 58). Otherwise, he will be detained in prison until expiration of the term of his detention unless the decree-holder requests the Court to release him from detention, or omits to pay the subsistence allowance of the judgment-debtor. A judgment-debtor released from detention in any one of the above cases cannot be rearrested in execution of the same decree [s. 58 (2)], though the judgment-debt has remained unpaid. This does not mean that his liability to pay the debt ceases, for the decree still subsists, and A may yet execute the decree against B's property [s. 58 (2)], though not against his person.

No woman can be arrested in execution of a money-decree [s. 56].

(ii) Decrees other than those for the payment of money.—A judgment-debtor may be arrested and imprisoned not only in execution of a decree for the payment of money, but also in execution of other decrees (rr. 31, 32, 33). The procedure to be followed in these cases is as follows: If the application is in proper form, the Court will issue a warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor (r. 24). If the judgment-debtor is arrested in execution of the warrant, he must be brought before the Court "as soon as practicable" (s. 55). The Court will then make an order committing him to the civil prison. If, while in jail, the decree is fully satisfied, he will be released from detention [s. 58 (1)]. Otherwise he will be detained in prison until expiration of the term of his detention, unless the decree-holder requests the Court to release him from detention, or omits to pay the subsistence allowance of the judgment-debtor as provided by r. 39.

Execution against property of judgment-debtor.—This subject may be considered under two heads, namely, (1) attachment, and (2) sale. We shall first state the rules relating to attachment, and then the rules governing sale, for attachment precedes sale. Attachment is levied and the sale of the property attached is effected by an officer of the Court under a warrant issued from the Court.

Before considering the rules relating to attachment and sale, it is to be observed that there are certain kinds of property which are not liable to attachment or sale in execution of a decree. These are described in s. 60. Subject thereto all saleable property which belongs to the judgment-debtor, or over which he has a disposing power which he may exercise for his own benefit, is liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree against him (s. 60).

I. Attachment.—Attachable property belonging to a judgment-debtor may be divided into two classes, (1) movable, and (2) immovable.

As to attachment of movable property.—See rr. 43 to 53.

Attachment of immovable property.—If the property be immovable, the attachment is to be made by an order prohibiting the judgment-debtor from transferring or charging the property in any way, and prohibiting all other persons from taking any benefit from such transfer or charge. The order is to be proclaimed at some place on or adjacent to the property, and a copy of the order is to be affixed on a conspicuous part of the property and then upon a conspicuous part of the Court-house (r. 54).

Where an attachment has been made, any private transfer of the property attached whether it be movable or immovable, is void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment (r. 64).

If any claim be preferred to any property attached in execution of a decree by any person other than a party to the suit, the procedure prescribed by rr. 58 to 63 is to be followed. If any questions arise in the course of execution proceedings between the parties to the suit, or their representatives, they are to be dealt with under s. 47.

If during the pendency of the attachment the judgment-debtor satisfies the decree through the Court, the attachment will be deemed to be withdrawn (r. 55). Otherwise the Court will order the property to be sold (r. 64). If the property attached is current coin or currency-notes, the Court may direct the same to be paid to the decree-holder in satisfaction of his decree (r. 56), for coin or currency-notes do not require to be sold.

II. Sale of attached property.—If the property attached be movable property which is subject to speedy and natural decay, the same may be sold at once (r. 43). Every sale in execution of a decree should be conducted by an officer of the Court except where the property to be sold is a negotiable instrument or a share in a corporation, which the Court may order to be sold through a broker (r. 76).

After the property is attached, the first step to be taken by the Court towards the sale thereof, whether the property be movable or immovable, is to cause a proclamation of the intended sale to be made, stating the time and place of sale, and specifying the property to be sold, the revenue (if any) assessed upon the property, the encumbrances

O. 21, r. 1. (if any) to which it is liable, the amount for the recovery of which the sale is ordered and such other particulars as the Court considers material for a purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property (r. 66). No sale should take place until after the expiration of at least thirty days in the case of immovable property, and of at least fifteen days in the case of movable property, calculated from the date on which a copy of the proclamation has been affixed on the Court-house of the Judge ordering the sale, unless the judgment-debtor consents in writing to the sale being held at an earlier date (r. 68). The Court may, in its discretion, adjourn the sale from time to time, but if the sale is adjourned for longer period than seven days, a fresh proclamation should be made, unless the judgment-debtor consents to waive it (r. 69).

It is important to note that no holder of a decree, in execution of which property is sold, can bid for or purchase the property without the express permission of the Court (r. 72).

Irregularity in the conduct of sale of attached property.—No sale of immovable property can be set aside on the ground of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale, unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied that the party seeking to set aside the sale has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity (r. 90). As regards movable property, the rule is that a sale of movable property is not liable to be set aside in any case on the ground of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale. The only remedy open to the party who has sustained any injury by reason of such irregularity is to institute a suit for compensation against the person responsible for the irregularity. But if such person be the purchaser himself, the party sustaining the injury may sue for the recovery of the specific property and for compensation in default of such recovery (r. 78).

Disposal of sale-proceeds.—The sale-proceeds of property sold in execution of a decree are to be applied in the manner prescribed by s. 73.

Resistance to delivery of possession to purchaser.—Where immovable property is sold in execution of a decree, and the purchaser is resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession of the property, he may make an application to the Court complaining of such resistance or obstruction. The Court will thereupon fix a day for investigating the matter, and summon the party against whom the application is made to appear and answer the same (rr. 97-103).

Payment under decree.

1. [S. 257.] (1) All money payable under a decree shall be paid as follows, namely :—

Modes of paying money under decree.

- (a) into the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree ; or
- (b) out of Court to the decree-holder ; or
- (c) otherwise as the Court which made the decree directs.

(2) Where any payment is made under clause (a) of sub-rule (1), notice of such payment shall be given to the decree-holder. O. 21,
rr. 1, 2.

Retrospective effect of rules contained in this order.—On comparing this Order with the corresponding Chapter of the Code of 1882, it will be found that several changes have been introduced in the matter of procedure so far as it relates to the execution of decrees. In this connection it is important to remember that changes in matter of procedure are retrospective in effect and apply to pending proceedings (c).

Money payable under the decree.—It is money payable under a decree that may be paid into Court under this rule. Costs of an application awarded by an order under s. 35 cannot be said to be money payable under a decree. Hence such costs ought to be paid to the party direct, and not into Court (d).

Where an order has been made for the payment of money into Court on a certain date, and the Court is closed on that date, a payment made on the following date is good payment for the purposes of the order (e).

Decree directing payment to decree-holder.—Payment into Court is a valid compliance with a decree even though the decree directs payment to the decree holder (f).

Payment into Court.—Sub-r. (2) which requires notice to be given to the decree-holder where payment is made into Court is new. Where payment is made into Court, interest does not cease to run on the money payable under the decree until the decree-holder gets notice of the payment (g).

2. [S. 258.] (1) Where any money payable under a decree of any kind is paid out of Court or the decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, the decree-holder shall certify such payment or adjustment to the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree and the Court shall record the same accordingly.

(2) The judgment-debtor also may inform the Court of such payment or adjustment, and apply to the Court to issue a notice to the decree-holder to show cause, on a day to be fixed by the Court, why such payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified; and if, after service of such notice, the decree-holder fails to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, the Court shall record the same accordingly.

- O. 21, r. 2. (3) A payment or adjustment, which has not been certified or recorded as aforesaid, shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree.

S. 257A, C. P. C., 1882, omitted in this Code.—Before proceeding with the subject-matter of the present rule, it is important to note that s. 257A of the Code of 1882 has been omitted in this Code. That section ran as follows :—

“ Every agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt shall be void unless it is made for consideration and with the sanction of the Court which passed the decree, and such Court deems the consideration to be under the circumstances reasonable.”

Agreement to give time to judgment-debtor.

Every agreement for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt, which provides for the payment, directly or indirectly, of any sum in excess of the sum due or to accrue due under the decree, shall be void unless it is made with the like sanction.”

Agreement for satisfaction of judgment-debt.

Any sum paid in contravention of the provisions of this section shall be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment-debt; and the surplus, if any, shall be recoverable by the judgment-debtor.”

This section was first enacted by Act XII of 1879 with a view to protect the interests of judgment-debtors against the exercise of undue pressure by decree-holders. It gave rise to conflicting decisions, and as interpreted by the majority of the High Courts was found in practice to be of little service to judgment-debtors. It has been therefore omitted in this Code with the result that—

- (1) agreements to give time to the judgment-debtor, and
- (2) agreements for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt which provide for the payment of any sum in excess of the decretal amount, may now be entered into between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor without the sanction of the Court, and effect may be given to them, if otherwise valid, as to any other agreement.

Points of difference between old section 258 and the present rule.—The present rule corresponds with s. 258 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars :—

(1) The words “ of any kind ” have been added into sub-r. (1) to make it clear that this rule applies not only to money-decrees, but to decrees for the enforcement of a mortgage (h) and other decrees.

(2) In para. 3 of s. 258 there occurred the words “ as a payment or adjustment of the decree ” after the word “ recognized.” These words have been omitted [see sub-r. (3)] to make it clear that the Court cannot recognize an uncertified payment or adjustment for any purpose whatever. See notes below under the head “ Uncertified payment and limitation.”

Scope and application of the rule.—This rule provides that—

- (1) where any money payable under a decree of any kind is paid out of Court, or

(h) See Vaidhinasamy v. Somasundram (1905) 28 Mad. 473.

- (2) where a decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction O. 21, r. 2. of the decree-holder, the decree-holder shall certify such payment or adjustment to the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree, so that the same may be recorded by that Court.

If the decree-holder fails to inform the Court of the payment or adjustment, it is open to the judgment-debtor to protect himself from execution of the decree by applying to the Court within 90 days from the date of the payment or adjustment (i) to issue a notice to the decree-holder to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified. If the payment or adjustment is not certified by either party, it shall not be recognized by any Court executing the decree. This may be explained by the following

Illustration.

A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 2,000. It is subsequently agreed between A and B that A should accept Rs. 1,000 in full satisfaction of the decree. B accordingly pays A Rs. 1,000, but neither the payment nor adjustment is certified to the Court. A applies for execution of the full amount of the decree notwithstanding the adjustment. B objects to execution on the ground that the decree has been adjusted. The adjustment, not being certified, cannot be recognized by the Court executing the decree, and the Court must direct execution to issue. It will not avail B to contend that A had agreed to certify the payment to the Court, but has omitted to do so. See notes below under the head "Fraud."

History of sub-rule (3).—The Codes of 1859 (s. 206) and 1877 (s. 258) provided that a payment or adjustment made out of Court should not be recognized by any Court executing the decree unless it had been certified to that Court. The Code of 1877 was amended in the year 1879, and the amendment provided that an uncertified payment or adjustment should not be recognized by any Court, and the same provision occurred in the Code of 1882. In the year 1888, the section was again altered, by providing that an uncertified payment or adjustment should not be recognized by any Court executing the decree, and this is the form in which the rule now stands.

Sub-rule (3).—Sub-rule (3) provides that an uncertified payment or adjustment shall not be recognized by any Court executing the decree. The words "Court executing the decree" indicate the extent to which an uncertified payment or adjustment should not be recognized by a Court. These words show that the prohibition to take cognizance of an uncertified payment or adjustment is limited to the Court which is called upon to execute the decree. It is in execution proceedings alone that an uncertified payment or adjustment cannot be recognized by a Court. The rule does not prohibit a Court from taking cognizance of such payment or adjustment in proceedings other than execution proceedings. An uncertified payment or adjustment may therefore be recognized by a Court trying a suit for a relief based upon such payment or adjustment (j). This gives rise to the following questions :—

1. Whether, on the Court directing execution to issue in the case put in the above illustration, B can maintain a suit against A for a declaration that the decree has been adjusted and for an injunction restraining A from executing the decree ?

(i) Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I., art. 174.

Cal. 718. The operation of sub-r. (3) is not excluded, because a party proceeds by way of suit instead of proceeding by an application as required by s. 47. Moru v. Hasan (1919) 43 Bom. 240.

O. 21, r. 2. 2. Whether, if A causes the decree to be executed notwithstanding the adjustment, and B's property is sold in execution, B can maintain a suit against A to set aside the sale, on the ground that the decree having been adjusted, A ought not to have caused the same to be executed ?

3. Whether, if A causes the decree to be executed notwithstanding the adjustment, B can maintain a suit against A to recover damages for breach of the contract represented by the adjustment ? In other words, whether, if B is compelled to pay in execution of the decree the full amount of the decree, namely, Rs. 2,000, he is entitled to recover back that sum from A as damages for breach of the contract on A's part not to execute the decree ?

Each of the suits referred to above would involve recognition of an uncertified adjustment, and B's success in each of them would depend inter alia upon the recognition of such adjustment by the Court trying the suit. Now, it has been made sufficiently clear that the prohibition against the recognition of an uncertified adjustment is confined to Courts executing decrees, and does not extend to Courts trying suits. Hence a Court trying any of the above suits would not be precluded from recognizing the adjustment though the adjustment has not been certified. It is not, however, to be supposed that this circumstance by itself is sufficient to entitle B to a decree in all the three suits, for in the first two cases there is an initial difficulty in B's way. That difficulty is presented by the provisions of s. 47 by which it is enacted that all questions relating to the "execution, discharge or satisfaction" of a decree should be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not by a separate suit. Noting these provisions, we proceed to answer the above questions in order.

As regards the first question, it is quite true that if B brought a suit for an injunction restraining A from executing the decree, the Court trying the suit would recognize the adjustment though it might not have been certified. But the Court cannot try the suit at all, for such a suit is barred under s. 47, the principal question in the suit being whether A should be restrained from executing the decree. This being a question relating to "execution," it cannot be tried in a separate suit (k). Hence the answer to the first question is in the negative.

The answer to the second question is also in the negative, and for the same reasons. The suit being one to set aside the sale in execution, the principal question would be whether the proceedings in execution should be set aside and this question is also one relating to "execution" within the meaning of s. 47, and the suit would therefore be barred under that section (l). It is therefore immaterial whether the purchaser at the sale in execution is a stranger or the decree-holder himself. There are two cases both prior in date to the Allahabad decision cited above, in which the property was purchased by a stranger, and the suit was to set aside the sale on the ground that the decree had already been satisfied out of Court at the time the sale was held. In both these cases it was held that the person who bought the property having purchased it bona fide at an auction sale, the sale to him could not be set aside. But the question whether the suit was barred was not raised in either of these cases. According to the Allahabad decision cited above, the suit would be barred under s. 47 (m).

The third question stands upon a different footing. The suit therein referred to is one for the recovery of damages for breach of the contract represented by the adjustment. The contract represented by the adjustment was to accept Rs. 1,000 in full satisfaction of the decree, and not to execute the decree for its full amount. If notwithstanding the payment to A of Rs. 1,000 in pursuance of the adjustment, A causes the decree to be executed, and B is compelled to pay the amount of the decree (that is, Rs. 2,000) in execution, B may sue A to recover back that amount as damages for breach of the contract not to execute the decree. Such a suit is not barred under s. 47, for the principal question in the suit is not one relating to execution, but to the contract, its breach, and the amount of damages suffered by B in consequence of the breach. The answer to the third question is therefore in the affirmative (n). The Court trying the suit will take cognizance of the adjustment, and will direct A by its decree to repay Rs. 2,000 as and by way of damages to B, though the adjustment has not been certified. It may here be noted that if after the decree is satisfied out of Court, A assigns the decree to X, and X then proceeds to realize the decree by execution against B, B has no cause of action against X, and he is not entitled to recover from X as damages the amount paid by him in execution to X, even though X took the assignment with the knowledge that the decree had been satisfied (o).

(m) Yellappa v. Ramchandra (1897) 21 Bom. 403 ; Mothura Mohun v. Akhoy Kumar (1888) 15 Cal. 557.

Summarizing the above, we may say that if a decree is adjusted to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, but the adjustment is not certified, it will not be recognized by any Court executing the decree. The result is that if the decree-holder applies for execution notwithstanding the adjustment, the Court will direct execution to issue, and the judgment-debtor will not be heard to say that the decree has been adjusted. Nor can he, even by instituting a regular suit for injunction, obtain a stay of execution, for such a suit is barred under s. 47. Nor is it open to him, if his property be sold in execution, to bring a suit to set aside the sale, for such a suit also is barred under s. 47. His only remedy is to sue the decree-holder for the damages sustained by him by reason of the breach of the contract represented by the adjustment. He need not, however, wait until execution of the decree against him. His cause of action arises on the presentation of an application by the decree-holder to execute the decree. Therefore where he has paid any money under the adjustment, he may sue the decree-holder to recover the same if the decree-holder applies to the Court for execution notwithstanding the adjustment (p).

Suit by judgment-debtor based upon uncertified adjustment.—We have already considered three kinds of suits that may be brought by a judgment-debtor against the decree-holder upon an uncertified adjustment, namely, (1) suits for an injunction, (2) suits for setting aside sales in execution, and (3) suits for damages for breach of the contract represented by the adjustment. All these suits are of a typical character, and they demand a careful study. The following case is of a different kind altogether. A obtains a decree against B for possession of certain immovable property. A then executes an ekrarnama, whereby in consideration of Rs. 156 paid to him by B, he relinquishes an eight-anna share of the property in favour of B. Subsequently he sells the remaining eight-anna share to B by a kabala. Both the ekrarnama and kabala are duly registered, but neither of them is certified to the Court. A then applies for execution of the decree, and obtains possession of the property. B sues A upon the two documents for a declaration of his right to the property, and for recovery of possession thereof. Is the suit

O. 21, r. 2. barred under s. 47? It has been held that it is not barred, and that B is entitled to a decree. The suit is not one for an injunction, and it cannot therefore be said to be directed to interfere with the execution of the decree. In fact the decree has already been executed. Nor is the suit one for setting aside a sale in execution, for there has been no sale. The suit is one for the recovery of property conveyed to B by two documents, both of which are duly registered. The documents no doubt constitute an adjustment of the decree, but as stated above there is nothing in sub-r. (3) which bars a suit upon an uncertified adjustment (q).

The reader is now in a position to understand the following proposition which summarizes in one sentence all that has gone before :—

An uncertified payment or adjustment may be recognized by any Court except a Court executing the decree, and a suit based upon such payment or adjustment is maintainable unless it is barred by the provisions of s. 47.

Suit by decree-holder based upon uncertified adjustment.—Hitherto we have considered the case of the judgment-debtor so far as it is affected by an uncertified adjustment. We now turn to the case of the decree-holder. A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 315 and costs. B pays A Rs. 200, and induces A to give up the costs and accept a bond for the balance to be paid at the end of eight months. Neither the payment nor adjustment is certified to the Court. This does not preclude A from suing on the bond, for, as stated above, sub-r. (3) only prohibits a Court executing a decree from recognizing an uncertified payment or adjustment (r). Since the repeal of s. 257A or the Code of 1882, the result would be the same, even if the bond provided for payment of a sum in excess of the balance (s).

"Money payable under a decree".—Where under the terms of a decree in a mortgage suit the decree-holder (mortgagee) was to be in possession of the mortgaged property and to render accounts every year of receipts of the income of the property and give credit for the surplus income accruing from the property, it was held that the income of the property received by the mortgagee decree-holder under the terms of the decree did not constitute it "money payable under a decree" within the meaning of this rule (t).

"Decree of any kind."—See notes above under the head "Points of difference between old section 258 and the present rule."

"Where the decree is adjusted in part"—A obtains a decree against B and U. A then enters into an agreement with B by which B is discharged from liability under the decree. The agreement constitutes an adjustment of a "part" of the decree within the meaning of this rule (u).

Mode of certifying.—See notes below under the head "Uncertified payment and limitation."

This rule applies only to parties who stand in the relation of decree-holder and judgment-debtor at the date of payment or adjustment.—A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 5,000. B, being unable to pay the amount of the decree in cash, transfers certain immovable property to C in consideration of C under O. 21, r. 2, taking to pay the amount of the decree to A. C pays the amount of the decree to A out of Court. Subsequently, C gets the decree transferred to himself from A, and applies for execution against B. The payment of the decretal amount by C to A, though not certified, is a bar to execution, for the payment was made not by B, the judgment-debtor, but by C, a third party, and this rule applies only where a payment is made out of Court by a judgment-debtor to the decree-holder (v).

Fraud.—There is an earlier decision of the Madras High Court which lends colour to the view that where a decree is adjusted to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, and he agrees to certify the adjustment to the Court, but omits to do so, and thereafter applies to the Court for execution of the decree, the judgment-debtor may object to the execution and prove the adjustment in execution proceedings, and the Court executing the decree may take cognizance of the payment notwithstanding the provisions of this rule, the reason given being that the suppression of the adjustment from the Court is not only a fraud upon the judgment-debtor, but a fraud upon the Court (w). But in later cases it has been held by the same High Court that if that be the effect of that decision, it is not good law (x).

In a Bombay case (y), a decree for Rs. 2,500 was adjusted by the judgment-debtor paying and the decree-holder accepting Rs. 2,000 in full satisfaction of the decree, but the adjustment was not certified to the Court. The decree-holder thereafter applied for execution of the decree. He omitted to state in his application, as required by O. 21, r. 11 (e), that the decree was adjusted. It was held, following an earlier decision of the same Court (z), that it was a case of fraud upon the Court, and the application for execution was dismissed. On the other hand, it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that it is not competent to a Court executing a decree to enquire into the fact of a payment or adjustment which has not been certified as required by this rule even when fraud is imputed to the decree-holder (a). It is submitted, with respect, that the view taken by the High Court of Calcutta and that taken by the High Court of Madras in its later decisions is correct. The reasons given by the High Court of Bombay in support of the contrary view are not satisfactory. In one of the Bombay cases cited above (b), it was said in effect that the Court has power under s. 47 to inquire into the alleged fraud. But what could be the object of that enquiry unless it be to ask the Court to recognize an uncertified payment or adjustment, in other words, to recognize that which the present rule says in explicit terms it shall not recognize. In the other Bombay case (c), it was said in effect that the Court of first instance having found as a fact that there was fraud on the part of the decree-holder, the lower appellate Court should have dismissed his application for execution. But this is begging the whole question, for is not the question this, namely, whether it is competent to the Court to enquire into the charge of fraud and admit evidence on that charge if the sole object of the enquiry be to recognize an uncertified payment or adjustment which the law says it shall not recognize. To us it so appears that if such an enquiry were allowed, the provisions of sub-r. (3) would be rendered nugatory. If there be fraud, there is nothing to preclude the judgment-debtor from adopting criminal proceedings against the decree-holder. The law allows the

C. 21, r. 2. judgment-debtor 90 days within which he may apply to have the payment or adjustment certified [Limitation Act, Sch. I, art. 174]. If he does not so apply, and the decree-holder applies for execution within that period, he may apply to have the payment or adjustment certified, but this he should do within 90 days. And it has been held that objections filed by a judgment-debtor to the decree-holder's application for execution may be treated as an application to certify, provided the objections are filed within 90 days of the adjustment (d). But the judgment-debtor is not entitled to an extension of time even if fraud is established on the part of the decree-holder. For such extension he can only be entitled to under s. 18 of the Limitation Act, and that section provides only for the case where an applicant has by means of fraud been kept from the knowledge of his right to make the application; it does not provide for the case where he is kept by means of fraud from the exercise of his right to make the application (e).

Uncertified payment and limitation.—Sub-r. (3) of this rule provides that an uncertified payment shall not be recognized by any Court executing the decree. The third paragraph of the old section provided that an uncertified payment or adjustment shall not be recognized as a payment or adjustment of the decree by any Court executing the decree. It was accordingly held under that section that there was nothing to prevent an uncertified payment from operating as a part payment within the meaning of s. 20 of the Limitation Act, so as to prolong the period of limitation for applying for execution under that Act (f). The words "as a payment or adjustment of the decree" have been omitted in sub-r. (3). The result is that under the present rule the Court cannot recognize an uncertified payment or adjustment for any purpose whatever. It follows that an uncertified payment can no longer operate as a part payment so as to prolong the period of limitation for an application for the execution of a decree (g). This may be explained by an illustration. A obtains a decree against B in January, 1889, for Rs. 4,000. B pays A out of Court Rs. 2,000 in January 1891, but the payment is not certified. A applies for execution of the decree for the balance in January 1893, that is, more than three years after the date of the decree, but within three years from the date of payment under the decree. Under the old section, the payment, though not certified, operated as a fresh starting point for limitation and the application was therefore not barred. Under the present rule, the payment, not being certified, cannot be recognised by the Court even for the purpose of limitation, and the application must be rejected as barred by limitation.

Nice questions have arisen in this connection as to the meaning of "certify" and as to the modes in which payments made out of Court may be certified. It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras (h), that where interest on the decretal amount has been paid by the judgment-debtor out of Court, or where part payment has been made of the decretal amount by the judgment-debtor out of Court, the decree-holder may "certify" the payment either by an application made expressly for that purpose or by a declaration that he has received such payment made in an application for execution of the rest of the decree (h) [O. 21, r. 11 (e)]. According to the Allahabad High Court, such a declaration as aforesaid made in an application for execution does not amount to "certifying" at all within the meaning of this rule (i). This may be explained by an illustration. A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 4,000 and interest in 1906. He then applies for execution of the decree in 1911, that is, more than three years from the date of the decree. In his application A states that B paid him interest on the decretal amount on 19th June 1909. According to the Calcutta and Madras High Courts, A's declaration in the application amounts to certifying the payment of interest within the meaning of this rule, and the payment being certified, it saves the bar of limitation, the application for execution having been made within three years from the date of the certified payment. According to the Allahabad High Court, A's declaration in the application for execution does not amount to certifying at all, and the payment being uncertified, it cannot operate to save the bar of limitation. No such question, however, can arise in the case of a mortgage decree, the reason being that an application for a final decree under O. 34 is not an application for execution, while sub-rule (3) applies only to a Court executing a decree (j).

O. 21, r. 2.

Uncertified adjustment and estoppel.—Since an uncertified adjustment cannot be recognized by the Court executing the decree, it cannot operate as an estoppel against the decree-holder. A obtains a decree against B. The decree is adjusted, but the adjustment is not certified to the Court. A receives payments under the adjustment and then applies for execution of the decree. The adjustment being uncertified, the fact that A has received payments under the adjustment does not estop him from applying for execution (k).

Restitution of uncertified payment on reversal of decree in appeal.—

If a decree is reversed in appeal, the judgment-debtor is entitled to recover back any payment that he may have made under the decree, though the payment may not have been certified. The decree being reversed in appeal, the payment, whether certified or not, is one made without consideration, and the judgment-debtor is entitled to a refund by an application to the Court of first instance (l). See s. 144.

Joint-decree.—See notes to O. 21, r. 16, under the head "Payment by judgment-debtor out of Court to one of several holders of a joint decree."

Minor.—An adjustment of a decree made by a guardian without obtaining the permission of the Court as required by O. 32, r. 7, cannot be certified under this rule (m).

Representative.—The word "judgment-debtor" in this rule includes persons claiming under him. Such persons therefore are as much precluded from setting up an uncertified adjustment in execution proceedings as the judgment-debtor himself would be (n). Compare s. 146.

Limitation.—A decree-holder may apply at any time for having a payment or an adjustment certified to the Court (o). But the application by a judgment-debtor for the issue of a notice to the decree-holder to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, must be made within 90 days from the date of the payment or adjustment. See Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, art. 174.

Appeal.—An order allowing or refusing an application to record an adjustment of a decree or a payment made out of Court under a decree is a decree within the meaning of s. 2, cl. 2, read with s. 47, and is therefore appealable under s. 96 (p).

Criminal proceedings.—The prohibition against the recognition of an uncertified payment or adjustment is confined to civil Courts executing decrees, and does not extend to criminal Courts. Hence an uncertified payment or adjustment may be recognized by criminal Courts, and proof thereof is admissible in the investigation and trial of offences by those Courts. A holds a decree against B for Rs. 1,000. B pays the full amount of the decree to A out of Court, but the payment is not certified. A then applies for execution of the decree, but omits to state in the application for execution, though required to do so by r. 11, sub-r. (2), cl. (e), of this Order, that the full amount of the decree has been paid. A is guilty of the offence of “giving false evidence” within the meaning of ss. 191 and 193 of the Indian Penal Code, and if the decree is executed, he is also guilty of the offence of “fraudulently causing a decree to be executed after it has been satisfied” within the meaning of s. 210 of the Penal Code. In either case, proof of the uncertified payment may be admitted by a criminal Court (g). It is however to be noted that a mere application for execution not followed by execution does not constitute an offence under s. 210 of the Penal Code, for it is of the essence of the offence under that section that the decree must have been “caused to be executed” (r).

Land situate in more than one jurisdiction.—This rule is new. It gives effect to a ruling of the Calcutta High Court in the undermentioned case (s). The rule, when amplified, may be stated thus : where immovable property attached in execution of a decree forms one estate, of which a part is situate within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree, and the rest beyond such limits, the Court executing the decree has the power to attach and sell the whole estate, though only a part thereof is situate within the local limits of its jurisdiction.

5. [S. 223, 6th para.] Where the Court to which a decree is to be sent for execution is situate within the same district as the Court which passed such decree, such Court shall send the same directly to the former Court. But, where the Court to which the decree is to be sent for execution is situate in a different district, the Court which passed it shall send it to the District Court of the district in which the decree is to be executed.

Mode of transfer.

Procedure where Court desires that its own decree shall be executed by another Court.

6. [S. 224.] The Court sending a decree for execution shall send—

- (a) a copy of the decree;
- (b) a certificate setting forth that satisfaction of the decree has not been obtained by execution within the jurisdiction of the Court by which it was passed, or, where the decree has been executed in part, the extent to which satisfaction has been obtained and what part of the decree remains unsatisfied; and
- (c) a copy of any order for the execution of the decree, or, if no such order has been made, a certificate to that effect.

Clause (6).—The omission to transmit to the Court executing the decree the certificate referred to in cl. (b) is not a “material” irregularity within the meaning of r. 90 of this Order. Hence it is not a good ground for setting aside a sale in execution (t).

7. [S. 225.] The Court to which a decree is so sent shall cause such copies and certificates to be filed, without any further proof of the decree or order for execution, or of the copies thereof, unless the Court, for any special reasons to be recorded under the hand of the Judge requires such proof.

Court receiving copies of decree, etc., to file same without proof.

Alteration in the rule.—The words, “or of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it,” which occurred in the corresponding section of the Code of 1882 after

O. 21, the words "or of the copies thereof" have been omitted. See notes below under the
rr. 7-10. head "Proof of jurisdiction."

Proof of jurisdiction.—A decree is sent for execution by Court X to Court Y. The judgment-debtor raises an objection in Court Y that Court X had no jurisdiction to pass the decree. Under the old section Court Y had the power to enquire whether Court X had jurisdiction to pass the decree or not (u), though it was held that that power should not be exercised unless the defect appeared on the face of the decree (v). Under the present rule, Court Y has no such power at all. This follows from the omission in this rule of the words "or of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it" which occurred in the old section. The object of the omission is to give effect to the principle that a Court executing the decree of another Court ought not to go into any question as to the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it (w). As to execution of decrees of Courts of Native States, see notes to s. 44, p. 119 above.

8. [S. 226.] Where such copies are so filed, the decree or order may, if the Court to which it is sent is the District Court, be executed by such Court or be transferred for execution to any subordinate Court of competent jurisdiction.

Execution of decree or order by Court to which it is sent.

Subordinate Court.—If a Munsiff in district X sends a decree passed by him for execution direct to a Munsiff in district Y, the latter has no jurisdiction to execute the decree. The proper course is for the Munsiff in district X to send the decree to the District Court of district Y, and the latter Court may then under this rule transfer the decree for execution to the Munsiff in that district (x).

9. [S. 227.] Where the Court to which the decree is sent for execution is a High Court, the decree shall be executed by such Court in the same manner as if it had been passed by such Court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction.

Execution by High Court of decree transferred by other Court.

Application for Execution.

10. [S. 230, 1st para.] When the holder of a decree desires to execute it, he shall apply to the Court which passed the decree or to the Officer (if any) appointed in this behalf, or if the decree has been sent under the provisions hereinbefore contained to another Court then to such Court or to the proper officer thereof.

[Ss. 256, 235.] (1) Where a decree is for the payment of money the Court may, on the oral application of the decree-holder at the time of the passing of the decree, order immediate execution thereof by the arrest of the judgment-debtor, prior to the preparation of a warrant if he is within the precincts of the Court.

(2) Save as otherwise provided by sub-rule (1), every application for the execution of a decree shall be in writing, signed and verified by the applicant or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case and shall contain in a tabular form the following particulars, namely :—

- (a) the number of the suit ;
- (b) the names of the parties ;
- (c) the date of the decree ;
- (d) whether any appeal has been preferred from the decree ;
- (e) whether any, and (if any) what, payment or other adjustment of the matter in controversy has been made between the parties subsequently to the decree ;
- (f) whether any, and (if any) what, previous applications have been made for the execution of the decree, the dates of such application and their results ;

- (h) the amount of the costs (if any) awarded ;
- (i) the name of the person against whom execution of the decree is sought ; and
- (j) the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required, whether—
 - (i) by the delivery of any property specifically decreed ;
 - (ii) by the attachment and sale, or by the sale without attachment, of any property ;
 - (iii) by the arrest and detention in prison of any person ;
 - (iv) by the appointment of a receiver ;
 - (v) otherwise, as the nature of the relief granted may require.

(3) The Court to which an application is made under sub-rule (2) may require the applicant to produce a certified copy of the decree.

Sub-rule (1) corresponds with s. 256 of the Code of 1882, and sub-rule (2) with s. 235.

Difference between old section 256 and sub-rule (1).—Section 256 of the Code of 1882 ran as follows :—

“ When a decree is passed for a sum of money only, and the amount decreed does not exceed the sum of one thousand rupees, the Court may, when passing the decree, on the oral application of the decree-holder, order immediate execution thereof by the issue of a warrant directed either against the person of the judgment-debtor if he is within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court or against his movable property within the same limits.”

Sub-rule (1) differs from s. 256 in the following particulars :—

1. Under s. 256 immediate execution could only be issued if the amount of the decree did not exceed Rs. 1,000. Under the present rule there is no limit to the amount of the decree. But the decree must be one for the payment of money.

2. As a general rule, a decree-holder seeking to arrest the judgment-debtor must present an application in writing to the Court, and the Court may then direct a warrant to issue for the arrest of the judgment-debtor who, as a rule, cannot be arrested without a warrant. S. 256 of the Code of 1882 dispensed with a written application, and enabled the Court to issue a warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor on an oral application. Sub-rule (1) goes further, and empowers the Court to order immediate arrest of the judgment-debtor prior to the preparation of a warrant, if he is within the precincts of the Court. O. 21,
rr. 11, 12.

3. Execution can no longer issue against the movable property of the judgment-debtor on an oral application as it could under s. 256.

Privilege from arrest.—The privilege from arrest under civil process conferred by s. 135 of this Code does not extend to a judgment-debtor against whom an order has been made for immediate arrest under this sub-rule. See r. 135, sub-s. (3).

Alterations in sub-rule (a).—Sub-rule (2) corresponds with s. 235 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars:—

1. In cl. (g), the words, “together with particulars of any cross-decree, whether passed before or after the date of the decree sought to be executed,” are new.
2. In cl. (j), sub-cl. (ii), the words “or by the sale without attachment,” are new.
3. Cl. (j), sub-cl. (iv), is new.

The application shall be verified.—An application for execution may be verified by any person acquainted with the facts of the case. It may therefore be verified by a person who holds a general power of attorney from the decree-holder, notwithstanding that the decree-holder may be residing within the jurisdiction of the Court (z).

The application shall state the date of the decree.—The date of the decree means the date on which the judgment was pronounced (a). See O. 20, r. 7.

The application shall specify the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required.—Where an application did not specify the mode in which the assistance of the Court was required, it was rejected (b). See r. 17 below.

Sub-rule (3).—This sub-rule is new. The Court may under this sub-rule require the applicant to produce a certified copy of the decree. Such copy, however, is not a necessary annexure to an application for execution. An application, therefore, which is not accompanied by a copy of the decree, cannot be said to be an application not “in accordance with law” within the meaning of art. 132 (5) of sch. I of the Limitation Act (c).

12. [S. 236.] Where an application is made for the attachment of any movable property belonging to a judgment-debtor but not in his possession, the decree-holder shall annex to the application an inventory of the

(a) a description of such property sufficient to identify the same and in case such property can be identified by boundaries or numbers in a record of settlement or survey, a specification of such boundaries or numbers; and

(b) a specification of the judgment-debtor's share or interest in such property to the best of the belief of the applicant, and so far as he has been able to ascertain the same.

In cl. (a), the words “and, in case such property can be identified . . . or numbers,” are new.

14. [S. 238.] Where an application is made for the attachment of any land which is registered in the office of the Collector, the Court may require the applicant to produce a certified extract from the register of such office, specifying the persons registered as proprietors of, or as possessing, any transferable interest in, the land, or its revenue, or as liable to pay revenue for the land, and the shares of the registered proprietors.

Power to require certified extract from Collector's register in certain cases.

Alteration in the rule.—Under the old section it was necessary, where the application was for the attachment of land registered in the Collector's Office, that the application should, in each case, be accompanied by a certified extract from the register of such office. Under the present rule, the Court may at its option require the applicant to produce such extract. The object is to save costs to the applicant of procuring such extract.

in favour of more persons than one, any one or more of such persons may, unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary, apply for the execution of the whole decree for the benefit of them all, or, where any of them has died, for the benefit of the survivors and the legal representatives of the deceased.

(2) Where the Court sees sufficient cause for allowing the decree to be executed on an application made under this rule, it shall make such order as it deems necessary for protecting the interests of the persons who have not joined in the application.

Alterations in the rule.—This rule corresponds with s. 231 of the Code of 1682 except in the following particulars:—

1. The words ‘or his or their representatives’ which occurred in s. 231 after the words ‘one or more of such persons,’ have been omitted in view of the provisions of s. 146. See notes below under the head ‘Any one or more of such persons.’
2. The words ‘unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary’ in sub-rule (1) are new. See notes below under the same words.

What is a joint decree.—A decree jointly passed in favour of more persons than one is a joint decree. A and B obtain a decree against C for Rs. 5,000; this is a joint decree. It is not the less a joint decree, because the shares of A and B in the decretal amount have been determined by the decree. Thus if it is determined by the decree that the share of A is Rs. 2,000, and the share of B is Rs. 3,000, the decree is still a joint decree. But though the decree in such a case is a joint decree, the interest of A and B being determined by the decree, either of them may apply for execution to the extent of his interest (e).

Application by one of several decree-holders for execution of the whole decree.—Ordinarily all the decree-holders in a joint decree must join in an application for execution of the decree. The present rule provides for the case in which all decree-holders are unable or are unwilling to join in the application, and in such case enables one or more of such decree-holders to apply for execution of the whole decree ‘for the benefit of them all.’ Where an application is made under this rule by some only of several joint decree-holders, the Court may, in its discretion, grant or refuse the application (f). Similarly, it is in the discretion of the Court whether or not to give notice to the other decree-holders or to the judgment-debtor before making an order for execution under this rule: it is not obligatory upon the Court to do so (g). If the application is allowed, the Court will under sub-r. (2) make such order as it deems necessary for protecting the interests of the other decree-holders and of the judgment-debtor (h).

O.21, r. 15. "Unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary."—The provisions of this rule do not apply where by the terms of the decree execution has been made dependent on all the decree-holders joining in the application (i).

Application by one of several decree-holders for execution in respect of his share of the decree.—The application under this rule by one of several holders of a joint decree must be for the execution of the whole decree and further, it must be for the benefit of himself and the other decree-holders. A joint decree cannot be executed by one of several joint holders in respect of what the applicant considers his share in the decree (j). Thus, if a decree is passed for A and B for Rs. 5,000, the decree is joint, and neither A nor B can apply for execution of his proportionate share of the decree. But one of several holders of a joint decree may apply for execution of the decree to the extent of his interest therein, if the extent of such interest is determined by the decree. Thus, if in a suit for possession of land by A and B against C, the Court has declared each of the plaintiffs to be entitled to a moiety of the land, the Court may allow either plaintiff to execute the decree to the extent of his one half share, though the decree is a joint decree (k).

The rule set forth above that one of several holders of a joint decree is not entitled to execution in respect of his share of the decree, but that he must apply for execution of the whole decree, applies only in those cases where the whole decree has remained unsatisfied. That rule does not apply where a joint decree has been satisfied in part before the date of the application for execution. In such a case, execution cannot issue for the whole decree, but only for so much thereof as has remained unsatisfied. This subject is considered in the next following paragraph.

Payment by judgment-debtor out of Court to one of several holders of a joint decree.—A obtains a decree against C for Rs. 5,000. In such a case the safest course for C is to pay the amount of the decree into Court (r. 1). The Court will then pay the amount to A on his application. If C does not adopt that course, and pays the amount to A out of Court (r. 1), C must see that A, the decree-holder, certifies the payment to the Court. If A fails to certify the payment, C must apply to the Court to record the payment as certified. If C also fails to do so, the Court executing the decree will not recognise the payment. Hence if A, notwithstanding the payment to him of the amount of the decree, applies for execution of the decree against C, the Court will direct execution to issue (r. 2).

Suppose now that there are two or more decree-holders, and the payment is made by the judgment-debtor to one of them. What are the rights of the other decree-holders to execute the decree? We proceed to answer this question.

- I. (1) A and B obtain a decree against C for Rs. 5,000. C pays B his (B's) share of the decretal amount out of Court, and the payment is certified to the Court. A then applies under this rule for execution of the whole decree. A cannot execute for more than his own share, as the decree has been satisfied as to B's share (l).
- (2) Suppose that in the above case, the payment is not certified to the Court but B admits the payment. The result will be the same as in ill. (1) (m).

 (l) Tarruk v. Divendro (1883) 9 Cal. 831.
 (m) Sultan v. Savalayammal (1892) 15 Mad. 348.

But if B does not admit the payment, the Court may allow execution O.21, r. 15. to issue for the whole decree.

II. A and B obtain a decree against C for Rs. 5,000. C pays the whole amount of the decree to B out of Court, and the payment is certified to the Court. A then applies for execution of the decree to the extent of his own share. Is A entitled to execute the decree to the extent of his share, regard being had to the fact that B has certified satisfaction of the whole decree? It has been held that he is, for one of two joint decree-holders cannot alone certify satisfaction of the whole decree so as to bind the other decree holders, though he may certify satisfaction in respect of his own share therein (n). In the case put above, A has another remedy besides proceeding in execution against C. That remedy is by way of suit against B to recover his share from him, B having certified to the Court that he has received payment from C of the whole amount of the decree, thus admitting receipt of the whole amount (o).

Amendment.—An application for execution of a joint decree by one only of the decree-holders should state that the application is made on behalf of all the decree-holders. If the application contains no such statement, it should be rejected. It cannot be allowed to be amended, for O. 21, r. 17, while it empowers the Court to allow a defect in the requirements of rr. 11 to 14 to be amended, does not include the present rule in it (q).

Appeal.—An order determining any question mentioned or referred to in s. 47 is a “decree” (s. 2), and is therefore appealable under s. 96. The questions referred to in s. 47 are questions arising between a decree-holder on the one hand and the judgment-debtor on the other, and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. Hence orders determining such questions are appealable as decrees under s. 96. Bearing this in mind, we proceed to note the following cases :—

(1) A and B obtain a decree against C. A alone applies for execution of the whole decree. C (the judgment-debtor) contends that A alone should not be allowed to execute the whole decree. Here the question being one between the decree-holder on the one hand and the judgment-debtor on the other, any order made upon the application is appealable as a decree. If A’s application is allowed, C may appeal from the order, and if the application is disallowed, A may appeal from the order (r).

(2) Suppose that in the above case, the objection to execution was raised not by C, the judgment-debtor, but by B, the other decree-holder. In such a case, the question being between the decree-holders inter se, no appeal will lie from any order made upon the application whether the application is allowed or refused (s).

O.21, r. 16. 16. [S. 232.] Where a decree, or, if a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons, the interest of any decree-holder in the decree, is transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law, the transferee may apply for execution of the decree to the Court which passed it, and the decree may be executed in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as if the application were made by such decree-holder :

by transferee of decree.

Provided that, where the decree, or such interest as aforesaid, has been transferred by assignment, notice of such application shall be given to the transferor and the judgment-debtor, and the decree shall not be executed until the Court has heard their objections (if any) to its execution :

Provided also that, where a decree for the payment of money against two or more persons has been transferred to one of them, it shall not be executed against the others.

Alterations in the rule:—

- 1 The words "or if a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons, the interest of any decree-holder in the decree," have been added into the first paragraph to make it clear that the rule is not confined in its application to a transferee of the whole decree, but extends to a transferee of the interest of any holder of a joint decree. This was, in fact, the interpretation put upon the old section (t).
2. The words, "if that Court thinks fit," which occurred in the old section in the first paragraph before the words "the decree may be executed" have been omitted. See notes below under the head "Right to execution does not depend upon discretion of Court."

Application for execution by transferee of decree.—No order should be made under this rule for the execution of a decree on the application of a transferee of the decree unless—

- I. the decree has been transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law; [an oral assignment is not sufficient (u)];
- II. the application for execution is made to the Court which passed the decree; and
- III. where the decree has been transferred by assignment, notice of the application has been given to the transferor and the judgment-debtor.

No application by the transferees necessary for recognition as transferee. The rule does not provide for any such application. All that the rule requires is that where the decree has been transferred by assignment, the transferee should give notice of the application for execution to the transferor and the judgment-debtor (v). See notes below, "Transfer of O. 21, r. 16 decree against a company in liquidation."

We proceed to consider the above conditions in order.

I. Who may apply for execution under this rule.—The following persons, and no others, may apply for execution under this rule :—

- (a) The transferee of a decree under an assignment in writing. [A transferee under an oral assignment has no locus standi to apply for execution under this rule (w)].
- (b) The transferee of a decree by operation of law, e.g., the legal representative of a deceased decree-holder, or the Official Assignee in the case of an insolvent decree-holder, or the purchaser of a decree at a Court-sale in execution of a decree against the decree-holder (r. 53) (x).
- (c) A transferee under an assignment in writing or by operation of law from the transferee mentioned in cls. (a) and (b), whether by immediate or mesne assignment (y).

Explanation I.—The expression "transferee" in cls. (a), (b) and (c), is not confined to a transferee of the whole decree, but includes a transferee of a portion of the decree (z), or, where the decree is a joint one, the transferee of the interest of any one of the decree-holders in the decree (a).

Illustrations of Explanation I.

1. A, who holds a decree against B for Rs. 5,000, transfers his interest in the decree to the extent of Rs. 2,000 to X. The application for execution may be made by X as assignee of a portion of the decree, or it may be made by A, the decree-holder, or by A and X both together. In any case the application must be for execution of the whole decree, Kishore v. Gisborne & Coy. (1890) 17 Cal. 341; Gyamonee v. Radha (1880) 5 Cal. 592, and not merely for the portion transferred: Ramchandra v. Abdul (1913) 35 All. 204.

2. A and B obtain a decree against C for Rs. 5,000. A assigns his interest in the decree to X. Here X occupies the double character of a transferee within the meaning of this rule and of a transferee of an interest in a joint decree within the meaning of r. 15. Hence any application that X may make for execution will be governed by the provisions both of this and the preceding rule: Dwar Bux v. Fatik (1899) 26 Cal. 250.

Explanation II.—A person to whom a party to a suit agrees to transfer any decree that may be passed in the suit is not a transferee within the meaning of this rule.

Illustration.

A sues B to recover Rs. 5,000. During the pendency of the suit, A agrees with C to transfer to him any decree that may be passed in his favour in the suit. A decree is subsequently passed for A. C is not a transferee within the meaning of this rule, and he is not entitled to execute the decree against B. The word "decree-holder" in this rule means a person in whose favour a decree has actually been passed. When

O. 21, r. 16. the assignment was made, there was no decree in existence: Basroorvittil v. Ramchandra (1907) 17 Mad. L. J. 391.

Explanation III.—A person to whom the holder of a decree for possession of immovable property sells a portion of the property is not a transferee of the decree within the meaning of this rule, and he is not therefore entitled to execute the decree. A transfer of property is not the same thing as a transfer of a decree (b).

Explanation IV.—A transferee of a decree awarding maintenance is entitled to execution under this section. The reason is though it may be that a right to future maintenance cannot be transferred having regard to the provisions of s. 6, cl. (d) of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, there is no objection to a transfer of such right when it is awarded by a decree. The transferee therefore of such a decree is entitled to recover by execution maintenance that has fallen due. He cannot, of course, attach maintenance before it has fallen due (c). See s. 60, sub-s. (1), cl. (n), and notes thereto on p. 167 above.

Benamidar.—A obtains a decree against B. C purchases the decree from A in the name of D. Here C is the real transferee, and D is benamidar or ostensible transferee. Is D entitled to take out execution of the decree? Yes, according to the High Court of Allahabad (d). No, according to the High Court of Calcutta; but if he has succeeded in taking out execution (as where it is not brought to the notice of the Court that he is a benamidar), the application for execution made by him will save a subsequent application by C from the bar of limitation (e).

Where the alleged transferee of a decree is found to be the benamidar of a judgment-debtor, the Court is bound by the second proviso to this rule to refuse to allow the decree to be executed against the other judgment-debtors in favour of the alleged transferee (f).

The mere fact that an order for execution has been made on the application of a benamidar does not preclude the real transferee from applying under this rule to conduct the further execution of the decree himself. But the proceedings in execution up to that date are binding upon the real transferee (g).

II. Application for execution by a transferee should be made to the Court which passed the decree.—A transferee of a decree must apply for execution to the Court which passed the decree, though the decree has been sent for execution to another Court (h). The Court to which a decree has been transmitted for execution has no jurisdiction to make an order for execution on the application of a transferee of the decree. If such an order is made, it is illegal, and will be set aside in appeal (i).

As to the definition of "Court which passed the decree," see s. 37 and notes thereto.

III. Notice shall be given to the transferor and the judgment-debtor. If no notice is given, the Court has no power to execute (j). And even after notice has been given, the Court should not direct execution until it has heard the objections of the judgment-debtor. If the property of the judgment-debtor is attached before the Court has heard his objections, the attachment is illegal, even if the Court subsequently hears his objections and confirms the attachment after such hearing (k).

(k) Kasum Goolam v. Dayabhai (1911) 36 Bom. 58.

Where the judgment-debtor is dead, the notice required by this rule should be given to O. 21, r. 16, his legal representative (l).

Where on an application by the transferee of a decree to have his name substituted as decree-holder, no objection is taken by the judgment-debtor as to the validity of the transfer, the judgment-debtor will be precluded from questioning the validity of the transfer on an application by the transferee for execution of the decree (m).

There is nothing to preclude a transferee of a decree from applying under s. 39 to the Court which passed the decree to send the decree for execution to another Court (n). But the notice required by this rule must be issued by the Court which passed the decree, and not by the Court to which the decree is sent for execution (o).

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that the mere issue of a notice under this rule does not operate as a revivor within the meaning of arts. 182 and 183 of the limitation Act (p). The contrary has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad and Madras. According to these Courts a mere application by the transferee for substituting his name for that of the decree-holder operates as a revivor of the decree and gives a fresh starting point of limitation for executing the decree (q). And it has been held by the Madras Court that an application by the transferee to bring the representative of the deceased judgment-debtor on the record to serve him with notice under this rule has the same effect (r).

Right to execution does not depend upon the discretion of the Court.—

In the old section, the words were “and if that Court thinks fit, the decree may be executed,” &c. It was accordingly held under that section that the Court had a discretion to grant or refuse an application for execution made by a transferee (s). The word “if that Court thinks fit” have been omitted in this rule. The result is that where the conditions specified in this rule are satisfied, a transferee of a decree is entitled to execution as of right like the original decree-holder.

Transfer of decree for the payment of money against two or more persons to one of them.—This subject may be considered under the following two heads :—

1. Where the whole decree has been transferred.
2. Where the decree is a joint one, and part only of the decree has been transferred.

First, as regards transfer of the whole decree.—Where a decree for the payment of money has been transferred by assignment or by operation of law to one of several judgment-debtors, the decree is wholly extinguished. Hence the transferee cannot execute the decree against the other judgment-debtors, but his remedy against them is by a regular suit for contribution, as if the decree had been satisfied by him. The object of the second proviso to the rule is not to deprive the transferee of a decree, who might happen to be one of the judgment-debtors, of all relief, but to impose upon him the duty of proceeding by what was considered a more appropriate procedure, that is, a suit for contribution (t). The provisions of this rule cannot be evaded by the judgment-debtor who satisfies the decree by taking a transfer of the decree in the name of a benamidar (u).

O. 21, r. 16. (a) A obtains a decree against B and C for Rs. 5,000. B satisfies the decree by paying Rs. 5,000 to A. In such a case C is bound to pay to B his (C's) share of the judgment-debt. If C fails to contribute his share, B's remedy is by way of suit against C to recover the amount. [This illustration is merely introductory].

(b) A obtains a decree against B and C for Rs. 5,000. B purchases the decree from A. Here B's position is exactly the same as in ill. (a); that is to say, the decree must be taken as having been satisfied by B. B cannot therefore execute the decree against C, and his only remedy is to bring a suit against C for contribution: Sreenath Doss v. Juggadanund (1886) 9 W. R. 230.

(c) A obtains a decree against B and C for Rs. 5,000. A dies, and on his death the decree passes to B as his heir. The position is the same as in ill. (b): Banarsi v. Maharani (1883) 5 All. 27.

(d) A obtains a decree against B and C for Rs. 5,000. B pays the amount of the decree to A. At B's request A transfers the decree to F. F, being merely a benamidar for B, is not entitled to execute the decree against C. It is competent to C in such a case to show that B, and not F, paid the amount of the decree to A, and such payment may be proved even if it has not been certified under O. 21, r. 2: Ramayya v. Krishnamurti (1917) 40 Mad. 296.

Next, as regards transfer of a portion of a joint decree.—Where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons, and the interest of any decree-holder in such decree has been transferred by assignment or by operation of law to one of several judgment-debtors, the decree is extinguished to the extent of the interest so transferred, and execution can only issue for the rest of the decree.

Illustration.

A and B obtain a decree against C and D for Rs. 5,000. A's share of the decree is Rs. 2,000. A dies, and on his death his interest in the decree passes to C as his heir. The decree is extinguished to the extent of Rs. 2,000, and neither B (as decree-holder) nor C (as transferee of A's interest in the decree) can execute the decree against D for more than Rs. 3,000: Pogose v. Fukurooddeen (1878) 25 W. R. 343; Banarsi v. Maharani (1883) 5 All. 27. The same principle has been held to apply to mortgage-decrees: Kudhai v. Sheo Dayal (1888) 10 All. 570.

“Decree for the payment of money against two or more persons.”—The expression “a decree for the payment of money against two or more persons” in the second proviso to the rule means a personal decree for the payment of money against two or more defendants. Hence the proviso does not apply where the decree is not against the defendants personally. A obtains a decree against B as the legal representative of X and against C as the legal representative of Y for Rs. 20,000 to be paid out of the estates of X and Y. A dies leaving B as his heir, and on his death the decree passes to him by operation of law. The decree not being a personal decree against B and C, B is entitled, as transferee of A's decree, to have the decree executed against the estate of Y (v).

Further, the expression “decree for the payment of money against two or more persons” means a decree against two or more persons jointly. Hence the rule laid down in the second proviso does not apply where the decree is not passed against the defendants jointly. In a suit by A against B and C, A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 90 and against C for Rs. 30. A then assigns the decree to C. The decree not being a joint decree, C may execute the decree passed against B for Rs. 90 (w). O. 21,

rr. 16,17.

Appeal.—An order determining any question between the judgment-debtor and the representative of the decree-holder (s. 47) is a decree (s. 2), and is therefore appealable as such (s. 96). A transferee of a decree is a “representative” of the decree-holder within the meaning of s. 47. Therefore an order refusing to recognize the transferee of a decree or dismissing his application for execution on the objection of the judgment-debtor is a decree, and appealable as such (x).

Suit by transferee.—A transferee of a decree, whose application is rejected under this rule on the ground that the transfer is not a valid one, is not precluded from instituting a regular suit for a declaration as to the validity of the transfer. Such a suit is not barred by the provisions of s. 47 (y).

Equities enforceable against original decree-holder.—See s. 49 and notes thereto.

Transfer of decree against a company in liquidation.—Where a decree against a company in liquidation is transferred pending the winding up proceedings, and the liquidator refuses to recognize the transferee, the transferee may apply to the executing Court under s. 47 (3) to be substituted for the original decree-holder to enable him to prove his claim before the liquidator. S. 171 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, is no bar to the granting of such an application (z).

17. [S. 245.] (1) On receiving an application for the execution of a decree as provided by rule 11, sub-rule (2), the Court shall ascertain whether such of the requirements of rules 11 to 14 as may be applicable to the case have been complied with; and, if they have not been complied with, the Court may reject the application, or may allow the defect to be remedied then and there or within a time to be fixed by it.

(2) Where an application is amended under the provisions of sub-rule (1), it shall be deemed to have been an application in accordance with law and presented on the date when it was first presented.

(3) Every amendment made under this rule shall be signed or initialled by the Judge.

(4) When the application is admitted, the Court shall enter in the proper register a note of the application and the date on which it was made, and shall, subject to the provisions

O. 21, r. 17. hereinafter contained, order execution of the decree according to the nature of the application :

Provided that in the case of a decree for the payment of money, the value of the property attached shall, as nearly as may be, correspond with the amount due under the decree.

Alterations in the rule.—This rule corresponds with s. 245 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars :—

1. The words “ may allow the defect to be remedied ” in sub-rule (1), have been substituted for the words “ may allow it [application] to be remedied ” as being more comprehensive and covering the case of omission to produce a copy of the decree as now required by sub-r. (3) of r. 11.
2. Sub-rule (2) is new. See notes below under the head “ Sub-rule (2) : limitation.”

Scope of the rule.—This rule lays down the procedure to be adopted by the Courts on receiving an application for execution.

Sub-rule 2 : limitation.—Article 182 of the Limitation Act provides inter alia that the first application for execution must be made within three years from the date of the decree. If the decree has not been executed, and it is necessary to make further applications, each successive application must be made within three years from the date of the “ last application.” But the “ last application ” in each case must have been one “ in accordance with law ; ” otherwise it cannot give a fresh starting point for limitation. An application which does not comply with the requirements of rules 11 to 14 of this Order is not one “ in accordance with law ” (a). With these observations, we proceed to consider the bearing of sub-rule (2) on the provisions of the Limitation Act. Sub-rule (1) provides that where an application is made for execution, but it does not comply with the requirements of rr. 11 to 14, the Court may allow the applicant to amend it within a time to be fixed by the Court. If the application is amended within the time fixed or within such further time as may be allowed by the Court (s. 148), it will be deemed by virtue of sub-rule (2) to have been an application “ in accordance with law,” and presented on the date when it was first presented. Under the old section it was held that where an order was made for amending an application for execution, and the amendment was made, the application should be deemed to have been presented not on the date when it was first presented, but on the date when it was amended. The result was that if the amendment was not made until after the expiration of the period of limitation, the application was held to be time-barred, though the amendment was made within the time fixed by the Court (b). Those decisions are no longer law. Compare s. 149.

Illustration.

The last day for presenting an application for execution is 31st July 1908. The decree-holder presents the application on that day. The application does not comply with the requirements of O. 21, r. 11 (2). The Court may, under this rule, return the application for amendment and fix a date within which it should be amended. If the application is amended within the time fixed by the Court, it will be deemed to have been presented on 31st July 1908. Further, it will be deemed to have been an application "in accordance with law" within the meaning of art. 182 of the Limitation Act 1908, so as to give a fresh starting point of limitation. O. 21,

Where on an application for execution presented by an agent it is objected that the agent is not duly authorized, and the agent thereupon files a power-of-attorney, the Court should not dismiss the application but treat it as having been filed on the date on which the power-of-attorney was filed (c).

18. [S. 246.] (1) Where applications are made to a Court for the execution of cross-decrees in separate suits for the payment of two sums of money passed between the same parties and capable of execution at the same time by such Court, then—

Execution in case of cross decrees.

(a) if the two sums are equal, satisfaction shall be entered upon both decrees; and

(b) if the two sums are unequal, execution may be taken out only by the holder of the decree for the larger sum and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered on the decree for the larger sum as well as satisfaction on the decree for the smaller sum.

(2) This rule shall be deemed to apply where either party is an assignee of one of the decrees and as well in respect of judgment-debts due by the original assignor as in respect of judgment-debts due by the assignee himself.

(3) This rule shall not be deemed to apply unless—

(a) the decree-holder in one of the suits in which the decrees have been made is the judgment-debtor in the other and each party fills the same character in both suits; and

(b) the sums due under the decrees are definite.

(4) The holder of a decree passed against several persons jointly and severally may treat it as a cross-decree in relation 0.21, r. 18. to a decree passed against him singly in favour of one or more of such persons.

Illustrations.

(a) A holds a decree against B for Rs. 1,000. B holds a decree against A for the payment of Rs. 1,000 in case A fails to deliver certain goods at a future day. B cannot treat his decree as a cross-decree under this rule.

(b) A and B, co-plaintiffs, obtain a decree for Rs. 1,000 against C, and C obtains a decree for Rs. 1,000 against B. C cannot treat his decree as a cross-decree under this rule.

(c) A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 1,000. C, who is a trustee for B, obtains a decree on behalf of B against A for Rs. 1,000. B cannot treat C's decree as a cross-decree under this rule.

(d) A, B, C, D, and E are jointly and severally liable for Rs. 1,000 under a decree obtained by F. A obtains a decree for Rs. 100 against F singly and applies for execution to the Court in which the joint-decree is being executed. F may treat his joint decree as a cross decree under this rule.

Alterations in the rule.

1. The words "where applications are made to a Court for the execution of cross-decrees" in sub-rule (1) are new. They give effect to certain decisions noted below under the head "Application of the rule."
2. The words "separate suits" in sub-rule (1) are new. They have been added to show that, for the purposes of execution, a counter-claim is not a separate suit (d).
3. Sub-rule (4) and the illustration thereto, that is, ill. (d), are both new. This sub-rule gives effect to the decisions noted under the head "Sub-rule (4)."

Application of the rule—The meaning of sub-rule (1) may be explained by the following illustration: A holds a decree against B for Rs. 5,000. B holds a decree against A for Rs. 3,000. A and B each applies for execution of his decree to Court X which has jurisdiction to execute both decrees. The decrees being cross-decrees they will be set off against each other. Hence B, who is the holder of the decree for the smaller amount, will not be allowed to take out execution of his decree. Execution will only be allowed of A's decree to the extent of Rs. 2,000, being the difference between the amount of his and B's decree. If in the case put above, the decree held by B was also for Rs. 5,000, neither party should be allowed to take out execution, and satisfaction should be entered upon both decrees.

This rule does not apply unless—

- (1) the cross-decrees are for the payment of two sums of money;
- (2) the decrees have been obtained in separate suits [see notes above under the head "Alterations in the rule"];
- (3) both the decrees are capable of execution at the same time [ill. (1)], and by the same Court, and

- (4) the decree-holder in one of the suits in which the decrees have been passed O. 21, r. 18 is the judgment-debtor in the other, and each party fills the same character in both the suits [ills. (b) and (c)].

If the cross-decrees are of the character specified above, it is further necessary, before the provisions of this rule can apply, that both decrees must be before the executing Court for execution, and applications should have been made for execution of both decrees. If either decree-holder omits to apply for execution of his decree, the other decree-holder may take out execution of his decree for its full amount (e). Note the words with which the rule begins.

"Cross-decrees for the payment of two sums of money."—A sues B on a mortgage, and obtains a decree for Rs. 1,800, to be realized by sale of the mortgaged property. B obtains a decree against A for Rs. 2,000. Here A's decree, though it is one for sale in enforcement of a mortgage, and not strictly for the payment of money, may be set-off against B's decree, by virtue of the provisions of r. 20 of this order (f).

Where execution is taken out for the smaller sum.—This rule provides that where applications are made for the execution of cross-decrees, one for a larger amount and the other for a smaller amount, execution should be taken out only for the difference. This means that the decree for the smaller amount cannot be executed at all, and no separate execution should issue of that decree (g). It is to be noted, however, that if the Court, in contravention of the provisions of this rule, allows execution to issue of the decree for the smaller sum, and a sale is made in such execution, the sale is not void, the reason being that "a purchaser under a sale in execution is not bound to inquire whether the judgment-debtor had a cross-judgment of a higher amount" (h).

Same character in both suits.—The provisions of this rule do not apply unless the decree-holder in one suit is the judgment-debtor in the other, and each party fills the same character in both suits. A holds a money decree against B. B holds a decree for sale passed in a suit brought by him as mortgagee against C, the mortgagor, and against A, a purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged property from C. A applies for execution of his decree against B. B is not entitled to set off his decree against A's decree. The reason is that A does not fill the same character in both the suits. The decree held by A is in his favour personally which he may execute against B by the arrest of his person or the attachment of his property. This cannot be said of B's decree against A, for B is not ordered by the decree personally to pay any sum of money, but is only given an option to pay if he likes to save from sale the property in which he is interested (i). If in the case put above C, the mortgagor, was the holder of the money decree against B instead of A, and C applied, for execution against B, B (the mortgagee) could have set off his decree against C (j).

Assignment of decree.—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that a decree obtained against the assignor in a suit pending at the date of the assignment may be set-off against the decree assigned, if the assignee had notice of such suit (k). A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 5,000. B then sues A for Rs. 2,000. Pending B's suit C obtains a transfer of A's decree with notice of the suit. A decree is then passed for B in his suit against A. C applies for execution against B of the whole decree for

O. 21, Rs. 5,000. He is not entitled to execute for more than Rs. 3,000, as the transfer was taken with notice of B's suit. See notes to s. 49.

Sub-rule (4).—This sub-rule gives effect to the decisions in the undermentioned cases, where it was held that the holder of a decree passed jointly and severally against several judgment-debtors, one of whom holds a decree against such decree-holder singly may treat his joint decree as a cross-decree (l). See ill. (l) to the sub-rule.

19. [S. 247.] Where application is made to a Court for the execution of a decree under which two parties are entitled to recover sums of money from each other, then,— Execution in case of cross-claims under same decree.

- (a) if the two sums are equal, satisfaction for both shall be entered upon the decree; and,
- (b) if the two sums are unequal, execution may be taken out only by the party entitled to the larger sum and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered upon the decree.

Object of the rule.—The object of this rule is to prevent each side executing a decree in respect of sums due, whether for costs or otherwise, under the same decree (m).

Application of the rule.—This rule is not limited in its application to cases in which the remedy of each party against the other is of precisely the same nature. A, a mortgagor, sues B, the mortgagee, for redemption. A decree is passed in the suit ordering that upon A paying to B Rs. 1,000 (mortgage-debt) on a day fixed by the Court B should reconvey the mortgaged property to A, and that if such payment is not made within the time fixed by the Court the property should be sold. At the same time A is awarded costs, Rs. 100, to be paid by B. Here both the sums being payable under the same decree, the provisions of the present rule apply, though B's remedy, if A failed to pay the mortgage-debt, would be by sale of the mortgaged property, and A's remedy, if B failed to pay the costs, would be against B personally. Hence A, being entitled to the smaller amount (Rs. 100), cannot take out execution at all against B, (n). B, being entitled to the larger amount (Rs. 1,000), is alone entitled to take out execution. But he cannot take out execution for more than Rs. 900, which is the same thing as saying that he must reconvey the property to A, if A paid Rs. 900, and he cannot insist on payment of the full sum of Rs. 1,000 as a condition of reconveyance (o). The point to be noted is that in the case of cross-claims under the same decree, execution may be taken out only by the party entitled to the larger sum. The party entitled to the smaller sum is not entitled to take out execution. It follows from this that if A is entitled to recover from B mesne profits amounting to Rs. 445 under a decree, and B entitled to recover from A under the same decree costs amounting to Rs. 855, A being entitled to the smaller sum cannot take out execution against B, though B's claim to execute his decree for costs is barred by limitation (p).

Cross-decrees and cross-claims in mortgage suits.

20. [New.] The provisions contained in rules 18 and 19 shall apply to decrees for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge. O. 21, rr. 20-22.

Object of the rule.—This rule is new. It is inserted in order to make it clear that the provisions as to cross-decrees and cross-claims apply to these of mortgage-decrees. The rule also makes it clear that the expression “decree for the payment of money” and other similar expressions in the Code do not include a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge. See in particular s. 34, s. 73, and O. 21, r. 53.

It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that a simple decree for recovery of money can be set off against a decree for recovery of money by enforcement of a mortgage or charge (q). See notes to r. 18 above, “Cross-decrees for the payment, etc.”

21. S. [230, 2nd para.] The Court may, in its discretion, refuse execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor.

Simultaneous execution.

Simultaneous execution against person and property.—An order refusing execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor amounts to a decree under s. 2, cl. (2), read with s. 47, and it is therefore appealable (r).

Notice to show cause against execution in certain cases.

22. [S. 248.] (1) Where an application for execution is made—

- (a) more than one year after the date of the decree, or
- (b) against the legal representative of a party to the decree, the Court executing the decree shall issue a notice to the person against whom execution is applied for requiring him to show cause, on a date to be fixed, why the decree should not be executed against him:

Provided that no such notice shall be necessary in consequence of more than one year having elapsed between the date of the decree and the application for execution if the application is made within one year from the date of the last order against the party against whom execution is applied for, made on any previous application for execution, or in consequence of the application being made against the legal representative

O.21, r.22. of the judgment-debtor, if upon a previous application for execution against the same person the Court has ordered execution to issue against him.

(2) Nothing in the foregoing sub-rule shall be deemed to preclude the Court from issuing any process in execution of a decree without issuing the notice thereby prescribed, if, for reasons to be recorded, it considers that the issue of such notice would cause unreasonable delay or would defeat the ends of justice.

Alterations in the rule.—Sub-rule (2) is new. It enables the Court to issue execution without issuing a notice in cases where the issue of a notice may involve an unreasonable delay or defeat the ends of justice.

Consequence of omission to give notice.—This rule provides that, except where notice is dispensed with under sub-r. (2) the Court executing the decree shall issue a notice to the person against whom execution is applied for, where the application for execution is made more than one year after the date of the decree, or it is made against the legal representative of the judgment-debtor. This gives rise to the question whether the omission to give notice as required by this rule renders a sale absolutely void for want of jurisdiction, or whether the omission is a mere irregularity, in which case the sale is not void, but voidable, that is, valid until it is set aside. In Gopal Chunder v. Gunamoni Dasi (s), the High Court of Calcutta held that a notice under this rule is necessary in order that the Court should obtain jurisdiction to sell the property by way of execution, and that the omission to give the notice is by itself sufficient to render the sale void. This decision has since been approved by the Privy Council in Raghunath Das v. Sunder Das (t), and it has been followed in numerous cases (u). Since the notice under this rule affords the very foundation of the jurisdiction, it follows that where execution is issued without previously issuing a notice in a case where notice is required to be given under sub-r. (1), and property belonging to the judgment-debtor is sold in execution the sale is a nullity, not only where the property is purchased by the decree-holder [O. 21, r. 72] (v), but also where it is purchased by a third party (w). It does not make any difference whether the property sold is movable or immovable (x).

Notice to wrong person.—The principle laid down above applies to cases where no notice as required by this rule is given at all. We now turn to cases where a notice is served, but, as it turns out subsequently, upon a wrong person. The leading case upon the subject is Malkarjun v. Narhari (y). In that case a decree had been passed against a debtor, who afterwards died, and in executing the decree against his estate, a person was served as his legal representative with notice as required by this rule. The person served objected that he was not the legal representative of the deceased. The executing Court decided, and as it turned out subsequently, decided erroneously, that he was to be treated as such representative [see s. 47]. After that the execution proceedings went on with the result that certain property belonging to the deceased judgment-debtor was sold and purchased by a third party. The question arose whether the sale was void as made without jurisdiction, or whether it was merely voidable. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that a notice having been served in fact, though upon a wrong person, the Court had jurisdiction to sell the property, and the sale was not void. Their Lordships further held that the omission to give notice to the right person constituted a serious irregularity, and that the sale was therefore voidable, that is to say, it was valid until it was set aside under O. 21, r. 90, or by independent suit brought within a year as provided by art. 12, cl. (a) of the Limitation Act. Their Lordships said: "He (the person served) contended that he was not the right person, but the Court, having received his protest, decided that he was the right person and so proceeded with the execution. In doing so the Court was exercising its jurisdiction. It made a sad mistake, it is true, but a Court has jurisdiction to decide wrong as well as right (z)." See notes to s. 65, "Sale when void and when voidable," p. 181.

In some recent cases where no notice was given at all to the legal representative, the High Court of Calcutta, purporting to follow the decision in Malkarjun's case, held that the sale was not void, but voidable under O. 21, r. 90, on proof of substantial injury (a). These decisions, it is submitted, are not good law. They proceed upon a misconception of what was actually decided in Malkarjun's case. In that case a notice had been served, and the Court had determined, as it had power to do for the purpose of the execution proceedings, that the party served with the notice was in fact the legal representative [see s. 47]. It had therefore jurisdiction to sell, though the decision as to who was the legal representative was erroneous. There being jurisdiction to sell, and the purchasers having no notice of any irregularity, the sale held good until it was set aside by appropriate proceedings for the purpose. The Calcutta cases above referred to were of a wholly different character. In those cases no notice was served upon the legal representative at all.

More than one year after the date of the decree.—The term 'decree' in sub-r. (1), cl. (a), means the decree capable of execution. Thus where an appeal is preferred from a decree, and the appeal is dismissed for default under O. 41, r. 11, the decree of the lower Court is the decree capable of execution, and the period of one year is to be calculated from the date of that decree (b). See notes to s. 36, "What decree may be executed."

Sub-rule (a).—This sub-rule is new. See notes above, "Alterations in the rule."

Decree against two or more persons jointly.—Art. 182 of the Limitation Act, 1908, applies to decrees of Courts other than Chartered High Courts. By Explanation I to that article it is provided that when a decree has been passed jointly against

The result is that an order of revivor of a joint decree made under this rule against one or more of the judgment-debtor will operate against the other judgment-debtors, though no notice is given to them under this rule. No such Explanation is appended to art. 183 which applies to decrees of Chartered High Courts. The result is that where a joint decree is passed by a Chartered High Court, an order of revivor of such decree made against one of several judgment-debtors does not operate against other judgment-debtors to whom no notice is given under this rule (c).

Limitation.—Art. 182 of the Limitation Act, 1908, which applies to decrees of Courts other than Chartered High Courts, provides inter alia that a decree of such Court must be enforced within three years from the date thereof, unless a notice has been issued under this rule, in which case the application may be made within three years from the “date of issue of notice” under that section. It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that “the date of issue of notice” referred to in art. 182 means the date when the notice is actually issued and not the date when the Court passes the order for issuing the notice (d). On the other hand, it has been held by the High Courts of Bombay and Allahabad that “the date of issue of notice” means the date when the Court passes the order for issuing the notice, and not the date on which the notice is actually issued (e). But if no notice is issued at all, the mere order for issuing a notice will not give a fresh starting point for limitation (f). It is not, however, necessary that the notice must have been actually served (g).

Art. 183 of the Limitation Act, which applies to decrees of Chartered High Courts, provides inter alia that a decree of such Court must be enforced within twelve years from the date thereof, unless the decree has been revived. It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta, that an order for execution operates as a revivor within the meaning of this article (h), but the mere issue of a notice under this rule does not (i).

23. [s. 249.] (1) Where the person to whom notice is issued under the last preceding rule does not appear or does not show cause to the satisfaction of the Court why the decree should not be executed, the Court shall order the decree to be executed.

(2) Where such person offers any objection to the execution of the decree, the Court shall consider such objection and make such order as it thinks fit.

24. [Ss. 250, 251.] (1) When the preliminary measures (if any) required by the foregoing rules have been taken, the Court shall, unless it sees cause to the contrary, issue its process for the execution of the decree.

rr. 24, 25.

(3) In every such process a day shall be specified on or before which it shall be executed.

Delegation of authority to execute.—The officer to whom a warrant is delivered for execution under this rule may deliver it to his subordinate for execution. It is not necessary that the “proper officer” should himself execute all warrants sent to him (j). But a warrant addressed to the peon of a Court cannot be executed by a Nazir (k).

Arrest without warrant.—Where an officer of the Court arrests a judgment-debtor without having in his possession the warrant of arrest at the time of arresting, the arrest is illegal (l).

“Shall be sealed”.—The provisions of this rule being mandatory, the omission of the Court’s seal on the warrant renders the attachment illegal (m).

Specification of day on or before which warrant should be executed.—The warrant should specify the date on or before which it is to be executed. Resistance to the execution of a warrant which does not specify such date is not illegal (n). Further, a warrant cannot be executed after the expiration of the date specified in the warrant for its execution (o). If the warrant is extended, the date to which it is extended must be specified on the warrant. If this is not done, the warrant is not a good warrant, and resistance to its execution after the date originally specified in it cannot amount to an offence under s. 186 of the Indian Penal Code (p).

in the process for the return thereof has been exceeded, the reason of the delay, or, if it was not executed, the reason why it was not executed, and shall return the process with such endorsement to the Court.

(2) Where the endorsement is to the effect that such officer is unable to execute the process, the Court shall examine him touching his alleged inability, and may, if it thinks fit, summon and examine witnesses as to such inability and shall record the result.

Stay of execution.

26. [Ss. 239, 240.] (1) The Court to which a decree has been sent for execution shall, upon sufficient cause being shown, stay the execution of such decree for a reasonable time, to enable the judgment-debtor to apply to the Court by which the decree was passed, or to any Court having appellate jurisdiction in respect of the decree or the execution thereof, for an order to stay execution, or for any other order relating to the decree or execution which might have been made by such Court of first instance or appellate Court if execution had been issued thereby, or if application for execution had been made thereto.

When Court may stay execution.

(2) Where the property or person of the judgment-debtor has been seized under an execution, the Court which issued the execution may order the restitution of such property or the discharge of such person pending the result of the application.

(3) Before making an order to stay execution or for the restitution of property or the discharge of the judgment-debtor, the Court may require such security from, or impose such conditions upon, the judgment-debtor as it thinks fit.

Power to require security from, or impose conditions upon, judgment-debtor.

See notes to s. 47, "Changes introduced by the section."

27. [S. 241.] No order of restitution or discharge under rule 26 shall prevent the property or person of a judgment-debtor from being retaken in execution of the decree sent for execution.

Liability of judgment-debtor discharged.

Contrast with this the provisions of s. 58, sub-s. (2).

28. [S. 242.] Any order of the Court by which the decree was passed, or of such Court of appeal as aforesaid, in relation to the execution of such decree, shall be binding upon the Court to which the decree was sent for execution.

Order of Court which passed decree or of appellate Court to be binding upon Court applied to.

29. [S. 243.] Where a suit is pending in any Court against the holder of a decree of such Court, on the part of the person against whom the decree was passed, the Court may, on such terms as to security or otherwise, as it thinks fit, stay execution of the decree until the pending suit has been decided.

Stay of execution pending suit between decree-holder and judgment-debtor.

"Decree."—An award filed in Court under s. 11 of the Indian Arbitration Act 10 of 1899 is not a decree, although it is enforceable, as provided by s. 15 of that Act as if it were a decree. The execution therefore of such an award cannot be stayed under this rule (g). O. 21.
rr. 29-31.

Inherent power to stay execution.—A Court may under this rule stay execution of a decree obtained by A against B pending the decision of a suit brought by B against A. If B's suit is dismissed and an appeal is preferred by B from the decree, the Court may under s. 151 stay execution of A's decree pending the decision of B's appeal (r).

Appeal.—See s. 47, notes under the head "Changes introduced by the section," p. 121 above.

Mode of execution.

30. [S. 254.] Every decree for the payment of money, including a decree for the payment of money as the alternative to some other relief, may be executed by the detention in the civil prison of the judgment-debtor or by the attachment and sale of his property, or by both.

Decree for payment of money.

Alternative to some other relief.—See O. 20, r. 10.

31. [S. 259.] (1) Where the decree is for any specific moveable, or for any share in a specific moveable, it may be executed by the seizure, if practicable, of the moveable or share, and by the delivery thereof to the party to whom it has been adjudged, or to such person as he appoints to receive delivery on his behalf, or by the detention in the civil prison of the judgment-debtor, or by the attachment of his property, or by both.

Decree for specific moveable property.

(2) Where any attachment under sub-rule (1) has remained in force for six months, if the judgment-debtor has not obeyed the decree and the decree-holder has applied to have the attached property sold, such property may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award to the decree-holder, in cases where any amount has been fixed by the decree to be paid as an alternative to delivery of moveable property, such amount, and, in other cases, such compensation as it thinks fit, and shall pay the balance (if any) to the judgment-debtor on his application.

(3) Where the judgment-debtor has obeyed the decree and paid all costs of executing the same which he is bound to

O. 21, pay, or where, at the end of six months from the date of the
rr. 31,32. attachment, no application to have the property sold has been made, or, if made, has been refused, the attachment shall cease.

Alterations in the rule.—The words “or for the recovery of a wife,” which occurred in the corresponding sec. 259 of the Code of 1882 after the words “share in a specific movable,” have been omitted, for there can be no decree under the law for the recovery of a wife, as a wife cannot be treated as a chattel to be delivered over to the husband. Where any third person prevents the wife from returning to her husband, the latter may obtain an injunction against him which may be enforced in case of disobedience either by the imprisonment of the defendant, or by the attachment of his property, or by both, under r. 32.

Decree for specific movable property.—As to the cases in which a decree may be passed for the delivery of specific movable property, see Specific Relief Act I of 1877, s. 11.

Rule when not applicable.—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that this rule does not apply where the property sought to be attached is not in the possession of the judgment-debtor (s).

22. [S. 260, R. S. C., O. 42, r. 30.] (1) Where the party against whom a decree for the specific performance of a contract, or for restitution of conjugal rights, or for an injunction, has been passed, has had an opportunity of obeying the decree and has wilfully failed to obey it, the decree may be enforced by his detention in the civil prison, or by the attachment of his property, or by both.

Decree for specific performance, for restitution of conjugal rights, or for an injunction.

(2) Where the party against whom a decree for specific performance or for an injunction has been passed is a corporation, the decree may be enforced by the attachment of the property of the corporation, or, with the leave of the Court, by the detention in the civil prison of the directors or other principal officers thereof, or by both attachment and detention.

(3) Where any attachment under sub-rule (1) or sub-rule (2) has remained in force for one year, if the judgment-debtor has not obeyed the decree and the decree-holder has applied to have the attached property sold, such property may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award to the decree-holder such compensation as he thinks fit, and shall pay the balance (if any) to the judgment-debtor on his application.

(4) Where the judgment-debtor has obeyed the decree Q. 21, r.32. and paid all costs of executing the same, which he is bound to pay, or where, at the end of the one year from the date of the attachment, no application to have the property sold has been made, or if made has been refused, the attachment shall cease.

(5) Where a decree for the specific performance of a contract or for an injunction has not been obeyed, the Court may, in lieu of or in addition to all or any of the processes aforesaid, direct that the act required to be done may be done so far as practicable by the decree-holder or some other person appointed by the Court, at the cost of the judgment-debtor, and upon the act being done the expenses incurred may be ascertained in such manner as the Court may direct and may be recovered as if they were included in the decree.

Illustration.

A, a person of little substance, erects a building which renders uninhabitable a family mansion belonging to B. A in spite of his detention in prison and the attachment of his property, declines to obey a decree obtained against him by B and directing him to remove the building. The Court is of opinion that no sum realizable by the sale of A's property would adequately compensate B for the depreciation in the value of his mansion. B may apply to the Court to remove the building and may recover the cost of such removal from A in the execution proceedings.

Alterations in the rule.—Sub-rules (2) and (5) are new. See notes below under the head "Sub-rule (5)."

The words "or for an order requiring the performance of, or abstinence from, any other particular act" which occurred in s. 260 of the Code of 1882 have been omitted, and in lieu thereof the words "or for an injunction" have been substituted. See notes below under the head "sub-rule (1) : decree for injunction."

Specific performance.—As to specific performance of contracts, see Specific Relief Act I of 1877, ss. 12-30.

Injunctions.—As to perpetual injunctions, see Specific Relief Act I of 1877, ss. 54-57.

Sub-rule (1): decree for injunction.—Sub-rule (1) applies to both prohibitory and mandatory injunctions (t). Where an injunction has been granted, on each successive breach of it, the decree may be enforced under this rule by an application made within three years of such breach under art. 181 of the Limitation Act (u). A separate suit to enforce the injunction is barred by the provisions of s. 47 (v). If the decree is enforced by the imprisonment of the defendant, the period of imprisonment should not at any one time exceed six months : see s. 58.

O. 21, r. 32. Where a woman, who had been directed by a decree to refrain from preventing her daughter returning to her husband, permitted the daughter, who was of age, to reside in her house, it was held that such conduct did not constitute a breach of the direction under the decree so as to render it punishable under this rule (w).

It was held under the old section that an order directing a defendant to render accounts within a specified time was an "order requiring the performance of a particular act" within the meaning of that section, and that disobedience to the order was punishable under that section (x). The words "performance of or abstention from any other particular act" which occurred in the old section were held to have a very wide general meaning, and they have been omitted from this rule, and in lieu thereof the word "injunction" has been substituted. The result is that disobedience to an order directing a party to render accounts can no longer be punished under this rule, as such an order cannot be said to be an "injunction" within the meaning of this rule (y).

Opportunity of obeying the decree.—All that the Court has to see before directing execution to issue under this rule is whether the party bound by the decree has had an opportunity of obeying the decree or injunction and has wilfully failed to obey it. If the party has had the opportunity and has wilfully failed to obey the decree, the Court may order execution to issue under this rule without giving him any further opportunity, and it is not obligatory upon the Court in such a case to serve a notice upon the party calling upon him to obey the decree or injunction (z).

Where an application is made under this rule, but the party bound by the decree has had no opportunity of obeying the decree, the application will be dismissed. But the dismissal of the application is no bar to another application made after an opportunity has been afforded to the party of obeying the decree. Thus if a decree is made directing the defendant to deliver certain articles necessary for the performance of the duties of priest in a temple to the plaintiff, the plaintiff is not entitled to execute the decree under this rule unless it is proved that he went to the temple after notice to the defendant to receive the articles from him (and thereby afforded an opportunity to the defendant to comply with the decree), and that the defendant failed to deliver the articles. If such an opportunity has not been afforded, the plaintiff's application will be dismissed, but its dismissal will be no bar to a subsequent application after such opportunity has been afforded (a).

"Party against whom a decree for injunction has been passed."—See notes to s. 50 under the head "Decree for injunction," p. 147 above.

Sub-rule (5).—This sub-rule is new. It corresponds to O. 42, r. 30, of the English Rules. In the absence of any provision in the old section similar to the one contained in this sub-rule, it was held that where a decree directed the defendant to remove an obstruction, such as pulling down a wall or opening a path-way, and the defendant failed to obey the decree, it was not competent to the Court to depute any of its officers to remove the obstruction, as that was not one of the modes of execution sanctioned under that section (b). Under the present rule, the Court may direct the act to be done so far as practicable by the decree-holder or some other person appointed by the Court (c). But the Court has no power under this rule to order the police to see that its decree is carried out. Thus where a decree is passed declaring the plaintiff's right to perform certain ceremonies in a temple and restraining the defendants from obstructing the plaintiffs from performing the ceremonies, the Court has no power under this rule to order the police to see that the plaintiffs performed the ceremonies without interference on the part of the defendants (d). O. 21,

rr. 32,33.

The expression "the act required to be done" means what has to be done to enforce the injunction (e).

In a recent Calcutta case (f), Richardson, J., expressed the opinion that sub-r. (5) applies to prohibitory as well as mandatory injunctions.

33. [New.] (1) Notwithstanding anything in rule 32, the Court, either at the time of passing a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights or at any time afterwards, may order that the decree shall not be executed by detention in prison.

Discretion of Court in executing decrees for restitution of conjugal rights.

(2) Where the Court has made an order under sub-rule (1), and the decree-holder is the wife, it may order that, in the event of the decree not being obeyed within such period as may be fixed in this behalf, the judgment-debtor shall make to the decree-holder such periodical payments as may be just, and if it thinks fit require that the judgment-debtor shall, to its satisfaction, secure to the decree-holder such periodical payments.

(3) The Court may from time to time vary or modify any order made under sub-rule (2) for the periodical payment of money, either by altering the times of payment or by increasing or diminishing the amount, or may temporarily suspend the same as to the whole or any part of the money so ordered to be paid, and again revive the same, either wholly or in part as it may think just.

(4) Any money ordered to be paid under this rule may be recovered as though it were payable under a decree for the payment of money.

34. [Ss. 211, 262.] (1) Where a decree is for the execution of a document or for the endorsement of a negotiable instrument and the judgment-debtor neglects or refuses to obey the decree, the decree-holder may prepare a draft of the document or endorsement in accordance with the terms of the decree and deliver the same to the Court.

Decree for execution of document or endorsement of negotiable instrument.

(2) The Court shall thereupon cause the draft to be served on the judgment-debtor together with a notice requiring his objections (if any) to be made within such time as the Court fixes in this behalf.

(3) Where the judgment-debtor objects to the draft, his objections shall be stated in writing within such time, and the Court shall make such order approving or altering the draft, as it thinks fit.

(4) The decree-holder shall deliver to the Court a copy of the draft with such alterations (if any) as the Court may have directed upon the proper stamp-paper if a stamp is required by the law for the time being in force; and the Judge or such officer as may be appointed in this behalf shall execute the document so delivered.

(5) The execution of a document or the endorsement of a negotiable instrument under this rule may be in the following form, namely :—

“ C. D., Judge of the Court of

(or as the case may be), for A. B., in a suit by E. F. against A. B.,” and shall have the same effect as the execution of the document or the endorsement of the negotiable instrument by the party ordered to execute or endorse the same.

(6) The Court, or such officer as it may appoint in this behalf, shall cause the document to be registered if its registration is required by the law for the time being in force or the decree-holder desires to have it registered, and may make such order as it thinks fit as to the payment of the expenses of the registration.

Sub-rule (6) : registration.—This sub-rule is new. It gives effect to a decision of the Allahabad High Court that where a document requires registration, it must be registered, though it may be executed by the Court (g). At the same time provision is made for the registration of documents, though their registration is optional, if the decree-holder desires to have them registered. O. 21, rr. 34, 35.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule on an objection to the draft of a document ~~or of an~~ endorsement [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (i)].

35. [S. 263.] (1) Where a decree is for the delivery of any immovable property, possession thereof shall be delivered to the party to whom it has been adjudged, or to such person as he may appoint to receive delivery on his behalf, and, if necessary, by removing any person bound by the decree who refuses to vacate the property.

(2) Where a decree is for the joint possession of immovable property, such possession shall be delivered by affixing a copy of the warrant in some conspicuous place on the property and proclaiming by beat of drum, or other customary mode, at some convenient place, the substance of the decree.

(3) Where possession of any building or enclosure is to be delivered and the person in possession, being bound by the decree, does not afford free access, the Court through its officers, may, after giving reasonable warning and facility to any woman not appearing in public according to the customs of the country to withdraw, remove or open any lock or bolt or break open any door or do any other act necessary for putting the decree-holder in possession.

Alterations in the rule.—Sub-rules (2) and (3) are new. See notes below.

Sub-rule (2).—A plaintiff who is entitled to possession jointly with other persons could be granted a decree for joint possession, whether the plaintiff was originally in possession and was subsequently dispossessed (h), or whether he had never been in possession (i). Sub-rule (2), which is new, has been inserted to remove the difficulty felt in executing decrees obtained by the owner of an undivided share in immovable property for joint possession as against his co-sharers and persons holding under them, as also the difficulty felt in executing decrees obtained by a purchaser of the rights of a co-sharer for joint possession of the property with the other co-sharers.

Resistance to delivery of possession to decree-holder.—Where the holder of a decree for the possession of immovable property is resisted or obstructed by any person in obtaining possession of the property, the procedure to be followed is that prescribed by rr. 97-103 of this order.

Actual and formal possession.—The delivery of possession directed to be given by sub-rules (1) and (3) contemplates the decree-holder being placed in khas or actual possession of the property, while that directed to be given by sub-r. (2) and by r. 36

(g) Kanahia Lal v. Kali Dhin (1880) 2 All. 392.
(h) Bhatrow Rai v. Saran Rai (1904) 26 All. 588.

(i) Jagannath v. Ram Phai (1911) 34 All. 150.

O. 21 r. 35. contemplates the decree-holder being placed in formal or symbolical possession. Formal or symbolical possession is delivered by affixing a copy of the warrant in some conspicuous place on the property and proclaiming by beat of drum or other customary mode, at some convenient place, the substance of the decree.

Rules 35 and 36 refer to cases where a suit is brought for possession of immovable property, and a decree is passed in the suit for the delivery of the property to the decree-holder. Rules 95 and 96 refer to cases where immovable property belonging to a judgment-debtor is sold in execution of the decree against him, and possession of the property is sought by the auction-purchaser. In considering the distinction between actual and symbolical possession, it is desirable to consider both these sets of rules together, for they are both governed by the same principles. Where the immovable property of which possession is directed by the decree to be delivered to the decree-holder is in the possession of the judgment-debtor, actual possession must be delivered of the decree-holder under r. 35 (1). Where it is in the possession of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same, symbolical possession only can be delivered, and that is to be done under r. 36. Likewise, where immovable property is sold in execution of a decree, and possession is sought by the auction-purchaser, actual possession must be delivered to him under r. 95, if the property is in the possession of the judgment-debtor. But if the property is in the possession of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same, symbolical possession only can be delivered, and that is to be done under r. 96.

It is clear from what is stated above that there are only three cases in which the law allows symbolical possession to be given, namely, the cases contemplated (1) by sub-rule (2) of the present rule, (2) by r. 36, and (3) by r. 96 of this Order. Symbolical possession given in such cases operates as actual possession against the judgment-debtor, but not against third persons who were not parties to the decree (j). In other words, symbolical possession is no possession at all as against third parties. This distinction is of great importance in the law of limitation. The rule to be deduced from the cases on the subject is that where in execution of a decree symbolical possession is delivered of immovable property to the person entitled to possession thereof, and such person subsequently institutes a suit for actual possession, the symbolical possession is to be treated as actual possession where the suit is against the judgment-debtor or his representatives and the period of 12 years allowed for such a suit is to be calculated not from the date of sale, but from the date of the subsequent dispossession [ill. (2)]. But where the suit for actual possession is instituted against a third party claiming to be in possession of the property adversely to the judgment-debtor, no regard is to be had at all to the symbolical possession of the plaintiff in determining the period of limitation; and the 12 years are to be calculated, not from the date on which symbolical possession was delivered to the plaintiff, but from the date on which the possession of such third party became adverse as against the judgment-debtor [ill. (1)].

(1) P obtains a decree against D. In execution of the decree certain property alleged to belong to D is sold, and it is purchased by A. A applies for possession, and he is placed in symbolical possession of the property. C has been in possession of the property adversely to D for 10 years prior to the date on which A is placed in symbolical possession. C continues to be in possession of the property as before. After three years O. 21, r. 35. A sues C for possession. The defence is that C has been in adverse possession for more than twelve years, and the suit is therefore barred under art. 144 of the Limitation Act. A contends that his symbolical possession operated to break the continuity of the adverse possession of C, and that the period of twelve years allowed by art. 144 for a suit for possession should be calculated from the date on which symbolical possession was delivered to him. The suit is barred, for A's possession, being merely symbolical, did not operate at all as possession as against C who was not a party to the suit, and it could not therefore break the continuity of C's possession (k). In other words, delivery of symbolical possession to A did not amount to a dispossession of C.

(2) A obtains a decree against B for possession of certain immovable property. The property being in the occupancy of B's tenants, symbolical possession is delivered to A under r. 36. Subsequently B dispossesses A by receiving the rents and profits. A thereupon sues B for actual possession. The period of limitation for such a suit is twelve years from the date of dispossession (l). The same principles apply where a person is placed in symbolical possession under sub-rule (2) of this rule in cases where the decree is one for joint possession, and also where he is placed, in symbolical possession under r. 96 of this Order (m).

Note.—It will be observed that in ill. (2) the suit is against the judgment-debtor, and in ill. (1) it is against a third person who was not a party to the suit. Symbolical possession operates as actual possession against the judgment-debtor, that being the only means by which, as between the parties, the Court could effectuate and carry out its object. But it does not operate as actual possession against third persons who were not parties to the suit, and the reason for this is very plain. A suit might be brought, and a decree obtained, by a person who has neither title nor possession, against another person who has neither title nor possession; and if the delivery of symbolical possession in such a suit were to constitute actual possession as against the true owner who had been in actual possession for many years, and who was no party to the suit, it would operate most unjustly (n).

It has been stated above that where a judgment-debtor himself is in possession, actual possession must be delivered to the person entitled to possession under sub-r. (1) of this rule or under r. 95, as the case may be. Suppose now that symbolical possession is delivered in a case where actual possession ought to have been delivered. Does symbolical possession given under these circumstances operate as actual possession against the judgment-debtor? It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras that it does, exactly as if symbolical possession were rightly delivered. Symbolical possession given in circumstances in which actual possession ought to have been delivered is not a nullity according to those Courts. The delivery of symbolical possession even erroneously operates as actual possession against the judgment-debtor and his representatives, for it is said that after all it is possession obtained through an officer of the Court and by process of law, and the judgment-debtor must be taken to be a party to the proceeding relating to the taking of possession. From this point of view, a suit for actual possession may be brought at any time within 12 years from the date on which symbolical possession is given (o). On the other hand, it has been held by a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court that symbolical possession given in circumstances in which actual

The reason given by the High Court of Bombay is that symbolical possession is not actual possession nor is it equivalent to actual possession except where the Code expressly or by implication provides that it shall have that effect, and there is no section of the Code by which it is provided that where symbolical possession is given in a case in which actual possession ought to have been given, such possession should be treated as equivalent to actual possession (p).

In execution of a decree obtained by A against B certain property belonging to B is sold, and it is purchased by C in the year 1895. B is in possession of the property at the date of sale. C applies for possession, but instead of actual possession being delivered to him under r. 95, symbolical possession is given to him in the year 1905. C subsequently sues B for actual possession in the year 1908, that is, more than 12 years after the date of sale, but within 12 years from the date of delivery of symbolical possession. According to the Bombay High Court, the suit is barred by limitation; according to the Calcutta and Madras High Courts, it is not barred.

36. [S. 264.] Where a decree is for the delivery of any immoveable property in the occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same and not bound by the decree to relinquish such occupancy, the Court shall order delivery to be made by affixing a copy of the warrant in some conspicuous place on the property, and proclaiming to the occupant by beat of drum or other customary mode, at some convenient place, the substance of the decree in regard to the property.

Arrest and detention in the civil prison.

37. [S. 245 B.] (1) Notwithstanding anything in these rules, where an application is for the execution of a decree for the payment of money by the arrest and detention in the civil prison of a judgment-debtor who is liable to be arrested in pursuance of the application, the Court may, instead of issuing a warrant for his arrest, issue a notice calling upon him to appear before the Court on a day to be specified in the notice and show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison.

Discretionary power to permit judgment-debtor to show cause against detention in prison.

(2) Where appearance is not made in obedience to the notice, the Court shall, if the decree-holder so requires, issue a warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor. O. 21.
rr. 37-39.

Discretionary power to issue notice.—When a decree is for the payment of money, and execution is applied for against the person of the judgment-debtor, the Court may issue a notice to the judgment-debtor calling upon him to show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison in execution of the decree. As to the procedure to be followed when the judgment-debtor appears in pursuance of the notice, see r. 40 below.

Privilege from arrest.—See s. 135, sub-section (2).

38. [s. 337.] Every warrant for the arrest of a judgment-debtor shall direct the officer entrusted with its execution to bring him before the Court with all convenient speed, unless the amount which he has been ordered to pay, together with the interest thereon and the costs (if any) to which he is liable, be sooner paid.

Warrant for arrest to direct judgment-debtor to be brought up.

39. [Ss. 339, 340.] (1) No judgment-debtor shall be arrested in execution of a decree, unless and until the decree-holder pays into Court such sum as the Judge thinks sufficient for the subsistence of the judgment-debtor from the time of his arrest until he can be brought before the Court.

Subsistence allowance.

(2) Where a judgment-debtor is committed to the civil prison in execution of a decree, the Court shall fix for his subsistence such monthly allowance as he may be entitled to according to the scales fixed under section 57 or, where no such scales have been fixed, as it considers sufficient with reference to the class to which he belongs.

(3) The monthly allowance fixed by the Court shall be supplied by the party on whose application the judgment-debtor has been arrested by monthly payments in advance before the first day of each month.

(4) The first payments shall be made to the proper officer of the Court for such portion of the current month as remains unexpired before the judgment-debtor is committed to the civil prison, and the subsequent payments (if any) shall be made to the officer in charge of the civil prison.

O. 21,
rr. 39, 40. (5) Sums disbursed by the decree-holder for the subsistence of the judgment-debtor in the civil prison shall be deemed to be costs in the suit :

Provided that the judgment-debtor shall not be detained in the civil prison or arrested on account of any sum so disbursed.

40. [s. 37 A.] (1) Where a judgment-debtor appears before the Court in obedience to a notice issued under rule 37, or is brought before the Court after being arrested in execution of a decree for the payment of money, and it appears to the Court that the judgment-debtor is unable from poverty or other sufficient cause to pay the amount of the decree or, if that amount is payable by instalments, the amount of any instalment thereof, the Court may, upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit, make an order disallowing the application for his arrest and detention, or directing his release, as the case may be.

Proceedings on appearance of judgment-debtor in obedience to notice or after arrest.

(2) Before making an order under sub-rule (1), the Court may take into consideration any allegation of the decree-holder touching any of the following matters, namely :—

- (a) the decree being for a sum for which the judgment-debtor was bound in any fiduciary capacity to account ;
- (b) the transfer, concealment or removal by the judgment-debtor of any part of his property after the date of the institution of the suit in which the decree was passed, or the commission by him after that date of any other act of bad faith in relation to his property, with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the decree-holder in the execution of the decree ;
- (c) any undue preference given by the judgment-debtor to any of his other creditors ;
- (d) refusal or neglect on the part of the judgment-debtor to pay the amount of the decree or some part thereof when he has, or since the date of the decree has had, the means of paying it ;

- (e) the likelihood of the judgment-debtor absconding or leaving the jurisdiction of the Court with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the decree-holder in the execution of the decree. O. 21,
rr. 40, 41.

(3) While any of the matters mentioned in sub-rule (2) are being considered, the Court may, in its discretion, order the judgment-debtor to be detained in the civil prison, or leave him in the custody of an officer of the Court, or release him on his furnishing security, to the satisfaction of the Court, for his appearance when required by the Court.

(4) A judgment-debtor released under this rule may be re-arrested.

(5) Where the Court does not make an order under sub-rule (1), it shall cause the judgment-debtor to be arrested if he has not already been arrested and, subject to the other provisions of this Code, commit him to the civil prison.

Attachment of Property.

41. [Cf. S. 267.] Where a decree is for the payment of money the decree-holder may apply to the Court for an order that—

Examination of judgment-debtor as to his property.

- (a) the judgment-debtor, or
- (b) in the case of a corporation, any officer thereof,
or
- (c) any other person.

be orally examined as to whether any or what debts are owing to the judgment-debtor and whether the judgment-debtor has any and what other property or means of satisfying the decree; and the Court may make an order for the attendance and examination of such judgment-debtor, or officer or other person, and for the production of any books or documents.

Object of the rule.—The object of this rule is to obtain discovery for purposes of execution to avoid unnecessary trouble in obtaining satisfaction of money decrees. It is a useful rule, but orders for discovery may operate harshly against the party directed to give discovery and must not be lightly made (q).

rr. 41-43.

"Any and what other property."—This refers to property which is liable to attachment and sale under the decree against the judgment-debtor. Property of a judgment-debtor which he has mortgaged is prima facie liable to be seized in execution of a decree against him, and the fact that he has mortgaged it will not prevent its being attached and sold in execution of the decree subject to the mortgage-debt (see s. 73). If the mortgagee claims that he is in possession as mortgagee, he may be examined under this rule (r). See note to r. 62 below.

What property may not be attached.—See s. 60.

42. [S. 255.] Where a decree directs an inquiry as to rent or mesne profits or any other matter, the property of the judgment-debtor may, before the amount due from him has been ascertained, be attached, as in the case of an ordinary decree for the payment of money.

Attachment in case of decree for rent or mesne profits or other matter, amount of which to be subsequently determined.

Attachment under a preliminary decree.—In a suit by A against B for the recovery of possession of immovable property and for mesne profits, a preliminary decree is passed against B for the delivery of the property to A, and an inquiry is directed as to the mesne profits due by B to A. B delivers possession of the property to A. Subsequently, while the inquiry as to mesne profits is yet pending, A applies for attachment of certain property belonging to B. The attachment may be allowed under this rule (s). See O. 20, r. 12.

Death of defendant before determination of amount of mesne profits.—A sues B for possession of certain immovable property and for mesne profits. The decree awards possession of the property to A, and directs an inquiry as to mesne profits. B dies pending the inquiry, but his legal representative is not brought on the record. The amount of mesne profits is subsequently determined and a final decree is passed for the amount. In execution of the decree certain property forming part of the estate of B is attached in the hands of his legal representative. The legal representative contends that the attachment ought to be set aside on the ground that the final decree was passed after the death of B, and it could not therefore bind the estate of B, as the estate was not represented during the inquiry as to mesne profits. This contention is valid, and the attachment must be set aside (t). See notes to s. 47, "Claim by legal representative," &c., p. 123, Contrast, O. 22, r. 6.

43. [S. 269.] Where the property to be attached is moveable property, other than agricultural produce, in the possession of the judgment-debtor, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the attaching officer shall keep the property in his own custody or in the custody of one of his subordinates, and shall be responsible for the due custody thereof:

Provided that, when the property seized is subject to speedy and natural decay, or when the expense of keeping it in custody is likely to exceed its value, the attaching officer may sell it at once. O. 21,
rr. 43, 44.

Attachment by actual seizure.—Where a warrant of attachment is executed by affixing it to the outer door of the warehouse in which goods belonging to the judgment-debtor are stored, it amounts to “actual seizure” within the meaning of the present rule (u).

Rateable distribution.—See notes to s. 73, “Assets held by a Court,” case H, p. 201, above.

44. [New.] Where the property to be attached is agricultural produce, the attachment shall be made by affixing a copy of the warrant of attachment.—

Attachment of agricultural produce.

- (a) where such produce is a growing crop, on the land on which such crop has grown, or
- (b) where such produce has been cut or gathered, on the threshing-floor or place for treading out grain or the like or fodder-stack on or in which it is deposited.

and another copy on the outer door or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the judgment-debtor ordinarily resides or, with the leave of the Court, on the outer door or on some other conspicuous part of the house in which he carries on business or personally works for gain or in which he is known to have last resided or carried on business or personally worked for gain; and the produce shall thereupon be deemed to have passed into the possession of the Court.

Attachment of agricultural produce.—This and the following rule provide for the attachment of agricultural produce. Both these rules are new. “Growing crops” are under this Code included in the category of movable property [see s. 2, cl (13)]. But the procedure relating to the actual seizure of movables cannot be applied in its entirety to growing crops, for considerable injury would result to both parties if such crops were allowed to be removed on attachment like other movable property. With a view to prevent such injury, and to secure to both parties the fullest value from

O. 21, the property attached, it is enacted by the next following rule that where agricultural
 rr. 44, 45. produce is attached, the Court should make such arrangements for the custody thereof as it may deem sufficient, and subject to such conditions as may be imposed by the Court, the judgment-debtor should be allowed to continue to perform all acts of husbandry and if he endeavours to defeat the attachment by neglecting the crop, the decree-holder should be allowed to intervene and protect his interests.

45. [New.] (1) Where agricultural produce is attached, the Court shall make such arrangements for the custody thereof as it may deem sufficient and, for the purpose of enabling the Court to make such arrangements, every application for the attachment of a growing crop shall specify the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered.

Provisions as to agricultural produce under attachment.

(2) Subject to such conditions as may be imposed by the Court in this behalf either in the order of attachment or in any subsequent order, the judgment-debtor may tend, cut, gather and store the produce and do any other act necessary for maturing or preserving it; and if the judgment-debtor fails to do all or any of such acts, the decree-holder may, with the permission of the Court and subject to the like conditions, do all or any of them either by himself or by any person appointed by him in this behalf, and the costs incurred by the decree-holder shall be recoverable from the judgment-debtor as if they were included in, or formed part of, the decree.

(3) Agricultural produce attached as a growing crop shall not be deemed to have ceased to be under attachment or to require re-attachment merely because it has been severed from the soil.

(4) Where an order for the attachment of a growing crop has been made at a considerable time before the crop is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered, the Court may suspend the execution of the order for such time as it thinks fit, and may, in its discretion, make a further order prohibiting the removal of the crop pending the execution of the order of attachment.

(5) A growing crop which from its nature does not admit of being stored shall not be attached under this rule at any time less than twenty days before the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered.

Time at which the crop is likely to be cut or gathered.—The decree holder should specify in the application for attachment the time at which the crop is likely to be cut or gathered. The object is to enable the Court to make necessary arrangements for the custody of the crop [sub-r. (1)]. If the application is presented within twenty days before the maturity of a crop not lending itself to storage, it should be refused [sub-r. (5)].

O. 21,
rr. 45, 46.

See notes to r. 44 above.

Attachment of debt, share and other property not in possession of judgmentdebtor.

46. [S. 268.] (1) In the case of—

- (a) a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument,
- (b) a share in the capital of a corporation,
- (c) other moveable property not in the possession of the judgment-debtor, except property deposited in, or in the custody of, any Court, the attachment shall be made by a written order prohibiting,—

- (i) in the case of the debt, the creditor from recovering the debt and the debtor from making payment thereof until the further order of the Court;
- (ii) in the case of the share, the person in whose name the share may be standing from transferring the same or receiving any dividend thereon;
- (iii) in the case of the other moveable property except as aforesaid, the person in possession of the same from giving it over to the judgment-debtor.

(2) A copy of such order shall be fixed on some conspicuous part of the Court-house, and another copy shall be sent in the case of the debt, to the debtor, in the case of the share, to the proper officer of the corporation, and, in the case of the other moveable property (except as aforesaid), to the person in possession of the same.

(3) A debtor prohibited under clause (i) of sub-rule (1) may pay the amount of his debt into Court, and such payment shall discharge him as effectually as payment to the party entitled to receive the same.

Attachment of debt.—A debt to be attached must be actually due from the garnishee (judgment-debtor's debtor) to the judgment-debtor; it may be either presently

O. 21, r. 46. payable, or payable in the future by reason of a present obligation (v). As stated by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the undermentioned case (w), "an existing debt, though payable at a future day, may be attached." But only such debts can be attached as the judgment-debtor could deal with properly and without violation of the rights of third persons (x). For instances of attachable debts, see notes to s. 60 under the head "Debts," p. 163 above.

The following are some of the important rules relating to the attachment of debts:—

1. It is not necessary for the purpose of attaching a debt that the exact amount of the debt should be stated, provided there is a debt actually due at the time of attachment. B delivers certain goods to his agent C for sale. The goods are sold by C and the sale-proceeds received by him. In execution of a decree obtained by A against B, A may attach the sale-proceeds in the hands of C, though the exact amount due to B may not then have been ascertained (y).

2. The attachment of a debt does not prevent the judgment-debtor from suing his debtor for it, and from taking any other step necessary for the recovery thereof, but he is not entitled to receive payment thereof from his debtor unless the claim in respect of which the debt is attached is first satisfied. C owes a debt to B. The debt is attached in execution of a decree obtained by A against B. This does not preclude B from suing C to recover the debt, or from prosecuting the suit if a suit has already been instituted; but he cannot receive payment of the debt from C unless he first satisfies A's decree (z). See sub-rule (1), cl. (i).

Attachment of mortgage-debt.—A executes a mortgage of his land to B to secure re-payment of Rs. 5,000 lent and advanced to him by B. It is provided by the mortgage-bond that if A fails to pay the mortgage-debt on the due date, B should have the right to sue A personally for the debt, and also to realise the debt by the sale of the mortgaged property. In such a case B's interest in the mortgage bond comprises (1) the right to sue A personally for the mortgage-debt, and (2) the right to realise the debt by a sale of the mortgaged property. Suppose now that X obtains a decree against B, the mortgagee, for Rs. 5,000, and that in execution of the decree he seeks to attach the mortgage-debt due to B. Is the mortgage-debt a "debt" within the meaning of this rule, or, because it is secured by a mortgage of immoveable property, is it "immoveable property" within the meaning of r. 54, and attachable in the mode proscribed by that rule? The answer afforded by the decisions on the subject, eliminating what are merely obiter dicta (a), is that a mortgage-debt is a "debt" within the meaning of this rule, and it is therefore to be attached in the manner prescribed by this rule (b). Suppose now that the mortgage-debt due to B is attached under this rule in execution of X's decree, and that it is sold in execution and purchased by P. What are the rights of P? The answer is that they are entirely the same as those of B, the mortgagee. P may sue A for a personal decree against him; he can also sue him for a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property (c).

As regards attachment of the interest of a usufructuary mortgagee, if there is a debt O. 21, r. 46. which the mortgagee is entitled to recover from the mortgagor at the time of the attachment, the attachment is to be made in the manner prescribed by this rule (d). But if there is no debt payable by the mortgagor, all that can be attached is the mortgagee's interest in the immoveable property mortgaged to him, and the attachment is to be made in the manner prescribed by r. 54 of this Order for attachment of immoveable property (e).

Attachment of debt after the same is paid by a cheque.—A gave a cheque to B for work done. Before the cheque was presented by B for payment, X, who had obtained a decree against B, attached in A's hands the amount due by him to B: held that A having handed over the cheque to B, the payment was complete, and there were therefore no funds of B in A's hands which could be attached (f).

Procedure where garnishee denies debt.—Where the garnishee denies the debt, the decree-holder may have it sold, or he may have a receiver appointed under s. 51 with power to him to sue the garnishee to recover the debt from him (g). As to release of debt from attachment, see notes to O. 21, r. 58, under the head "Rules 58 to 63 apply to 'debts' also."

Garnishee's right of set-off.—If a cross debt is due to the garnishee from the judgment-debtor at the date of the attachment, the garnishee is entitled to set it off against the amount due by him (h).

Procedure where garnishee resides outside jurisdiction and debt also is payable outside jurisdiction.—It is not competent to a Court under this rule to issue a prohibitory order upon a person resident outside the limits of its jurisdiction in respect of property also beyond such limits. Thus where A obtains a decree in the Court of Bardwan against B residing in Bardwan, and there is a debt due to B from C who resides in Calcutta, the debt being also payable in Calcutta, the proper course for A to adopt, if he seeks to attach the debt, is to apply to the Bardwan Court to issue a prohibitory order upon B prohibiting him from recovering the debt, and also to apply to that Court to transfer the decree for execution to the Calcutta Court, and, after the decree is so transferred, to apply to the Calcutta Court to issue a prohibitory order upon C prohibiting C from paying the debt to B (i).

Claims over which Courts in British India have no jurisdiction, as where a debt is due to the judgment-debtor from a non-resident foreigner in respect of which no suit could be brought by the judgment-debtor in a British Indian Court, are not debts liable to be attached under this rule (j).

Sub-rule (3): payment into Court.—A obtains a decree against B. In execution of the decree, A attaches a debt due ostensibly from C to D, but alleged by A to be in reality due from C to B. In such a case, if the Court orders the amount of the debt to be paid into Court, it is incumbent upon the Court to provide by its order that the money when deposited should not be paid to the decree-holder [A] until adjudication of the question as to who is entitled to the money, B or D (k).

47. [New.] Where the property to be attached consists of the share or interest of the judgment-debtor in moveable property belonging to him and another as co-owners, the attachment shall be made by a notice to the judgment-debtor prohibiting him from transferring the share or interest or charging it in any way.

Attachment of share in moveables.

Attachment of share in moveables.—This rule is new. It provides for the attachment of a share or interest in moveable property belonging to the judgment-debtor and others in co-ownership. Such a share or interest is obviously incapable of actual seizure, and provision has therefore been made for the issue to the judgment-debtor of a notice prohibiting him from transferring his share or interest in any way.

48. [New.] (1) Where the property to be attached is the salary or allowances of a public officer or of a servant of a railway company or local authority, the Court, whether the judgment-debtor or the disbursing officer is or is not within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction, may order that the amount shall, subject to the provisions of section 60, be withheld from such salary or allowances either in one payment or by monthly instalments as the Court may direct; and, upon notice of the order to such officer as the Government may, by notification in the Gazette of India or in the local official Gazette, as the case may be appoint in this behalf, the officer or other person whose duty it is to disburse such salary or allowances shall withhold and remit to the Court the amount due under the order, or the monthly instalments, as the case may be.

Attachment of salary or allowances of public officer or servant of railway company or local authority.

(2) Where the attachable proportion of such salary or allowances is already being withheld and remitted to a Court in pursuance of a previous and unsatisfied order of attachment, the officer appointed by the Government in this behalf shall forthwith return the subsequent order to the Court issuing it with a full statement of all the particulars of the existing attachment.

(3) Every order made under this rule, unless it is returned in accordance with the provisions of sub-rule (2), shall, without further notice or other process, bind the Government or the railway company or local authority, as the case may be, while the judgment-debtor is within the local limits to which this Code for the time being extends and while he is beyond those limits if he is in receipt of any salary or allowances payable out of His Majesty's Indian revenues or the funds of a railway company carrying on business in any part of British India or local authority in British India ; and the Government or the railway company or local authority, as the case may be, shall be liable for any sum paid in contravention of this rule. O. 21,

rr. 48, 49.

Attachment of salary of public officer, etc.—This rule is new. It provides a special procedure for the attachment of the salary of public officers, railway servants and servants of local authorities. The rule follows upon the lines of section 151, sub-section (3), of the Army Act (44 and 45 Vict., c. 58) which, it may be observed, applied only to officers of the army. Under the Code of 1882 the salary of a public officer or railway servant could not be attached unless the disbursing officer was within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree (1). This led to considerable inconvenience in the execution of decrees, and put the decree-holder in many cases to an enormous expense. The present rule substitutes a less expensive, and at the same time more effective machinery for the execution of decrees against this class of judgment-debtors. Under it the salary of public officer or a railway servant or a servant of local authority may be attached, whether the judgment-debtor or the disbursing officer is or is not within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree. As to the extent to which the salary of such persons may be attached, see s. 60, cl. (h) and (i).

Sub-rule (3) ; Liability of Government.—Sub-r. (3) provides that if an attachment order is not returned in accordance with the provisions of sub-r. (2), the Government shall be liable for such sum as should have been stopped out of the judgment-debtor's pay. But no order can be made against the Government unless the Government is on the record (m).

(3) The other partner or partners shall be at liberty at any time to redeem the interest charged or, in the case of a sale being directed, to purchase the same.

(4) Every application for an order under sub-rule (2) shall be served on the judgment-debtor and on his partners or such of them as are within British India.

(5) Every application made by any partner of the judgment-debtor under sub-rule (3) shall be served on the decree-holder and on the judgment-debtor, and on such of the other partners as do not join in the application and as are within British India.

(6) Service under sub-rule (4) or sub-rule (5) shall be deemed to be service on all the partners, and all orders made on such applications shall be similarly served.

Attachment of partnership property.—This rule is new. The first three sub-rules are a reproduction of the English Partnership Act, 1890 [53 and 54 Vict., c. 39] s. 23. The last three rules correspond to O. 46, rr. 1A and 1B of the English Rules. As to suits by and against firms, see O. 30 below.

This rule provides that no execution can issue against any partnership property except on a decree passed against the firm or against the partners in the firm as such (n), but a judgment-creditor of a partner in a firm may apply for an order charging that partner's interest, and for a receiver. The share of a partner in a partnership business is liable to attachment under s. 60 (o). See notes to r. 50 under the head "Where decree has been passed against a firm."

"Against the partners in the firm as such."—These words in sub-r. (1) do not occur in s. 23 of the English Partnership Act. They have been added to show that the operation of this rule is not ousted by the mere circumstance that the decree is passed, not against the firm, but against the partners constituting it, where those partners have been sued as such.

"Direct accounts."—It has been held in England under the Partnership Act, s. 23, sub-s. 2, of which sub-r. (2) is a reproduction, that the discretion given to direct accounts should only be exercised under special circumstances, as for instance, with a view to a dissolution. The decision is based upon the words "if a charge had been made in favour of the decree-holder by such partner." These words, it has been said, should be read with s. 31, sub-s. 1, of the English Partnership Act, which provides that an assignment by a partner of his share in the partnership either absolute or by way of charge, does not, as against the other partners, entitle the assignee, during the continuance of the partnership, to require any accounts of the partnership transactions, but entitles the assignee only to receive the share of the profits of the assigning partner and the assignee must accept the account of profits agreed to by the partners. Relying upon these provisions, Rigby, L.J., said: "I think it plain that the intention of the legislature was that under ordinary circumstances, in dealing with a case under sub-s. 2 of s. 23 [sub-r. (2) of this rule], the analogy of an assignment by a partner of his share should be adhered to" (p). Before the passing of the Partnership Act there was some doubt in England as to whether the assignee of a share in a partnership had a right to compel the other partners to come to an account with him during the continuance of the partnership. Whetham v. Davey (q) and Glyn v. Hood (r) favoured the view that he had. But the better opinion seemed to be the other way (s), and it is the one adopted in the Partnership Act. There is no provision in the Indian Contract Act corresponding to that contained in s. 31 of the English Partnership Act. If the decision in Whetham's case be adopted in India as the law governing the rights of an assignee, the Court may under sub-r. (2) direct accounts to be taken whether the circumstances of the case are special or ordinary, so that the amount of the share attached may be determined, and it may be handed over to the decree-holder. But if what is called the better opinion above is adopted as the law in this country,—and it is probably the view that would be adopted here,—the Court should not direct accounts to be taken under sub-r (2) except under special circumstances.

Where a decree has been passed against a firm, execution may be granted—

- (a) against any property of the partnership;
- (b) against any person who has appeared in his own name under rule 6 or rule 7 of Order XXX, or who has admitted on the pleadings that he is, or who has been adjudged to be, a partner;
- (c) against any person who has been individually served as a partner with a summons and has failed to appear:

21, r. 50. (2) Where the decree-holder claims to be entitled to cause the decree to be executed against any person other than such a person as is referred to in sub-rule (1), clauses (b) and (c) as being a partner in the firm, he may apply to the Court which passed the decree for leave, and where the liability is not disputed, such Court may grant such leave, or, where such liability is disputed, may order that the liability of such person be tried and determined in any manner in which any issue in a suit may be tried and determined.

(3) Where the liability of any person has been tried and determined under sub-rule (2), the order made thereon shall have the same force and be subject to the same conditions as to appeal or otherwise as if it were a decree.

(4) Save as against any property of the partnership, a decree against a firm shall not release, render liable or otherwise affect any partner therein unless he has been served with a summons to appear and answer.

Scope of the rule.—This rule is new. It is a reproduction of O. 48A, r. 8, of the English Rules. Execution under this rule can only be granted where a decree has been passed against a firm. A decree passed against a firm must perforce be in the firm's name. Under this rule execution may be granted against the partnership property. It may also be granted against the partners, in which case the decree-holder may proceed against the separate property of the partners. It is not to be supposed, however, that where a decree has been passed against a firm, execution will be granted as a matter of course against all the partners: In certain cases, special leave is necessary to issue execution against a partner. It is only when execution is applied for against a person referred to in sub-r. (1), cls. (b) and (c), that it will be granted as of course. But where execution is sought against any other person alleged to be a partner, the decree-holder must apply to the Court which passed the decree for leave to execute the decree against him. Thus if in a suit against a firm a person has been individually served as a partner with the writ of summons, but fails to appear at the hearing, and a decree is passed against the firm, the decree-holder is entitled to execution against him as of course: see cl. (c) of sub-r. (1). But a decree-holder is not entitled to execution as of course against a person who is sought to be made liable as a partner, but who was not served with the summons and who did not appear at the hearing. In such a case the decree-holder must apply for leave to execute the decree against such person. If such person admits the liability, the leave applied for will be granted at once. But if he disputes the liability, the Court may direct an issue to determine whether he was a partner or held himself out to be a partner in the defendant firm (d). These rules follow from the peculiar nature of a suit against a firm and from the special rules as to service of summons in such a suit. To understand the present rule, it is necessary to peruse rules 3, 6 and 7 of Order 30. The important point to note is that where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm, it is not necessary that the summons should be served upon each one of them or for the matter of that upon any one of them: it may be served upon any one or more of the partners, or at the principal place of the firm's business upon any person having the control or management of the business though he may not be a partner. O. 21, rr. 50, 51.

"Where a decree has been passed against a firm."—Execution under this rule can only be granted where a decree has been passed against the firm in the firm's name. A decree cannot be passed against a firm, unless the suit is against partners in the name of their firm. And, conversely, where a suit is against partners in the name of their firm, the decree must be against the firm in the firm's name. See O. 30, r. 6, and notes thereto.

"Against any property of the partnership."—"Property belonging to a partnership shall not be attached or sold in execution of a decree other than a decree passed against the firm or against the partners in the firm as such." See r. 49, sub-r. (1).

"Against any person who has appeared."—See O. 30, rr. 3, 6 and 7, and notes thereto.

Leave to issue execution.—Order 30 deals with the mode of suing firms. Rule 1 provides that two or more persons being liable as co-partners may be sued in the firm's name. It does not matter that the firm is dissolved at the date of the suit, so long as the claim in respect of which the suit is brought arose during the partnership (u). Rule 3 of Order 30 provides that where the firm is dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit, the summons should be served upon every partner within British India whom it is sought to be made liable; if some only of several partners are served, and a decree is passed against the firm, the decree-holder is not entitled to issue execution against a partner who was not served, not even if the decree-holder applies for leave under sub-r. (2). The reason is that rule 3 of Order 30 overrides sub-r. (2) of this rule. Sub-r. (2) only applies where there has been no dissolution, or none to the knowledge of the plaintiff. In order to be entitled to obtain leave under sub-r. (2), the decree-holder must have served him with the summons in accordance with the proviso to rule 3 of Order 30 (v).

Issue to determine liability.—See notes above, "Scope of the rule."

Minor partner.—The proviso to sub-r. (1) declares that nothing in that sub-rule should be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the provisions of section 247 of the Contract Act. The combined effect of that section and the present rule is that where a decree has been passed against a firm containing a minor partner, execution may be granted against the property of the firm, including the minor's share therein, but it cannot be granted against the separate property of the minor.

52. [S. 272.] Where the property to be attached is in the custody of any Court or public officer, the attachment shall be made by a notice to such Court or Officer, requesting that such property, and any interest or dividend becoming payable thereon, may be held subject to the further orders of the Court from which the notice is issued:

Attachment of property
in custody of Court or public officer.

Provided that, where such property is in the custody of a Court, any question of title or priority arising between the decree-holder and any other person, not being the judgment-debtor, claiming to be interested in such property by virtue of any assignment, attachment or otherwise, shall be determined by such Court.

Attachment of property in the hands of a receiver.—A receiver is an officer of the Court. An attachment therefore of money in the hands of a receiver made without previous permission or sanction of the Court for such attachment is improper and irregular, and cannot be recognized by the Court (w).

Anticipatory attachment.—This rule does not allow of an anticipatory attachment of money expected to reach the hands of a public officer, but applies only to money actually in his hands. An attachment made before the money has reached the hands of the officer is invalid (x).

Priority.—There is a conflict of decisions as to whether where a fund in Court is attached by several decree-holders, they are entitled to share rateably (y), or whether they are to be paid in the order of their attachments (z). The former view, it is submitted, is correct; an attachment does not confer any title upon the attaching creditor; it merely prevents and avoids any private alienation [see notes to s. 64, "Effect of attachment," p. 177].

(2) Where a Court makes an order under clause (a) of sub-rule (1), or receives an application under sub-head (ii) of clause (b) of the said sub-rule, it shall, on the application of the creditor who has attached the decree of his judgment-debtor, proceed to execute the attached decree and apply the net proceeds in satisfaction of the decree sought to be executed.

(3) The holder of a decree sought to be executed by the attachment of another decree of the nature specified in sub-rule (1) shall be deemed to be the representative of the holder of the attached decree and to be entitled to execute such attached decree in any manner lawful for the holder thereof.

(4) Where the property to be attached in the execution of a decree is a decree other than a decree of the nature referred to in sub-rule (1), the attachment shall be made, by a notice by the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed, to the holder of the decree sought to be attached, prohibiting him from transferring or charging the same in any way; and, where such decree has been passed by any other Court, also by sending to such other Court a notice to abstain from executing the decree sought to be attached until such notice is cancelled by the Court from which it was sent.

(5) The holder of a decree attached under this rule shall give the Court executing the decree such information and aid as may reasonably be required.

(6) On the application of the holder of a decree sought to be executed by the attachment of another decree, the Court making an order of attachment under this rule shall give notice of such order to the judgment-debtor bound by the decree attached; and no payment or adjustment of the attached decree made by the judgment-debtor in contravention of such

O.21r, 53. order after receipt of notice thereof, either through the Court or otherwise, shall be recognized by any Court so long as the attachment remains in force.

Alterations in the rule.—This rule corresponds with s. 273 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars :—

1. The words “or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge” in sub-r. (1) are new. See notes below “Attachment and realization of decrees”.
2. The words “or his judgment-debtor” in sub-r. (1), cl. (b), sub-head (ii) are new. The said words give effect to the opinion expressed by Maclean, C.J., in the undermentioned case (a).
3. Sub-rules (3) and (6) are also new. See notes below under these sub-rules.

Attachment and realization of decrees.—For the purpose of this rule decrees have been divided into two classes, namely :—

- (1) decrees for the payment of money or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge, and
- (2) other decrees.

First, as to attachment of decrees.—Decrees of the first class are to be attached in the manner prescribed by sub-r. (1). Decrees of the second class are to be attached in the manner prescribed by sub-r. (4).

Next, as to realization of attached decrees.—Decrees of the first class are to be realized in the manner prescribed by sub-r. (2). There is no provision made in this rule for the realization of decrees of the 2nd class, e.g., a decree for partition (b), or for foreclosure of a mortgage (c), or a decree for specific performance. These decrees are to be realized by a sale thereof. But decrees of the first class, that is, money-decrees (d) and mortgage-decrees, are not to be realized by sale. They can only be realized in the manner prescribed by sub-r. (2). The reason of this distinction is as follows :—

“Decrees” are not expressly mentioned in s. 60 as property liable to attachment and sale. Hence they are attachable and saleable as comprised in the expression “all other saleable property” which occurs in that section. Being liable to attachment as saleable property, they can be sold in execution of another decree. But money-decrees and mortgage-decrees must not be sold, because the present rule prescribes special procedure for the realization of such decrees [sub-r. (2)]. But for this provision, money-decrees and mortgage-decrees would have to be realized by sale like other decrees. The special procedure prescribed by sub-r. (2) is an exception to the general rule that property when attached can only be realized by a sale thereof.

Under the old section, decrees were divided into two classes, namely :—

- (1) decrees for the payment of money, and
- (2) other decrees.

(a) Adhur Chandra v. Lal Mohun (1897) 24 Cal. 778, 779. The decision in Umt Koya v. Umma (1911) 35 Mad. 622 would have been different if the case was governed by the present Code.
(b) Gopal v. Joharimal (1892) 16 Bom. 522.

(c) Barhma Din v. Baji Lal (1904) 26 All. 91.
(d) Sultan Kuar v. Gulzari Lal (1880) 2 All. 290 ;
Tiruvengada v. Vythilinga (1893) 6 Mad. 418 ; Jotindro Nath v. Dwarka Nath (1898) 20 Cal. 111 ; Siddalingappa v. Shankarappa (1908) 27 Bom. 556.

There was no specific provision for decrees for sale in enforcement of a mortgage. Hence the question arose whether such decrees belonged to the first class or the second class. The decisions on the subject were conflicting (e). To remove this doubt, the words "or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge" have been inserted in sub-r. (1). These words make it clear that mortgage-decrees are to be attached and realized in the same manner as money-decrees [see sub-rules (1) and (2)].

O.21, r.53.

Decrees other than money-decrees and mortgage-decrees.—D1 holds a decree against J for partition of certain property passed in Court X. D2 obtains a decree against D1 for Rs. 6,000 in Court Y. If D1 fails to satisfy the decree obtained against him by D2, D2 may apply to Court Y to execute his decree by attachment and sale of the decree held by D1 against J. The decree held by D1, being neither a money-decree nor a mortgage-decree, the only mode of realizing it in execution of D2's decree is by attachment and sale thereof.

Money-decrees and mortgage-decrees.—Where the decree attached is a money-decree or a mortgage-decree, it can only be realized by execution, it cannot be sold in execution. For this purpose, two applications must be made, one for attachment of the decree, and the other for its execution. The application for attachment must be made by the holder of the decree sought to be executed to the Court which passed it. But the application for execution of the attached decree must be made to the Court which passed the decree attached, and it may be made either by the holder of the decree sought to be executed or by the holder of the decree attached. We proceed to give illustrations.

(a) Where the decree sought to be executed and the decree sought to be attached are passed by the same Court.—D1 holds a decree against J for Rs. 5,000 passed by Court X. This is a money-decree. D2 obtains a decree against D1 also in Court X for Rs. 6,000. If D2 seeks to attach D1's decree in execution of his decree, he should apply to Court X for attachment, and either he or D1 may then apply to that Court for execution of the decree held by D1 against J. D can apply for execution, for he is deemed to be the representative of D1 [see sub-r. (3)].

(b) Where the decree sought to be executed and the decree sought to be attached are passed by different Courts.—D1 sues J on a mortgage, and obtains a decree for sale of the mortgaged property under O. 34, r. 5, in Court X. This is a mortgage-decree. D2 obtains a decree against D1 for Rs. 6,000 in Court Y, and in execution of his decree applies to Court Y for attachment of the mortgage-decree held by D1 against J. The attachment is to be made by the issue to Court X of a notice by Court Y requesting Court X to stay execution of D1's decree against J unless and until—

- (i) the notice is cancelled by Court Y, or
- (ii) an application is made to Court X by D2 or D1 to execute the decree held by D1 against J.

If an application is made by D2 or D1 to Court X to execute the decree held by D1 against J, Court X will proceed to execute the decree and the nett proceeds that may be realized in execution will be applied in satisfaction of D2's decree.

If in the case put above, Court X does not stay execution of D1's decree on receiving the notice from Court Y, and proceeds with the execution in spite of the notice, the

O. 21, proceedings will be deemed to be ultra vires, and a sale held in execution of that decree rr. 53, 54. will be set aside as void (f).

Sub-rule (3): representative.—This sub-rule is new. It gives effect to the undermentioned decisions (g) under the Code of 1882. It declares in effect that one who attaches a decree is a representative of the decree-holder within the meaning of s. 47. Thus in the cases put above D2 is the representative of D1.

Sub-rule (6): Adjustment of attached decree.—This sub-rule is new. The latter part of the rule gives effect to a Bombay decision that where a decree is attached, no adjustment of the decree subsequent to the attachment can be recognized by the Court (h). See r. 2 of this Order.

"Decree."—A decree, whereby B was compelled to deliver up possession of certain lands to C, is reversed in appeal, and B is declared to be entitled to recover back possession from C with mesne profits. A obtains a decree against B, and applies in execution of his decree to attach B's right to recover mesne profits from C. The right is not attachable, for it is not a decree. "The language of [this rule] seems to apply only to cases where the right attached is a right expressly settled by the decree, and not a right arising from the decree by way of restitution" (i).

54. [S. 274.] (1) Where the property is immovable, the attachment shall be made by an order prohibiting the judgment-debtor from transferring or charging the property in any way, and all persons from taking any benefit from such transfer or charge.

Attachment of immovable property.

(2) The order shall be proclaimed at some place on or adjacent to such property by beat of drum or other customary mode, and a copy of the order shall be fixed on a conspicuous part of the property and then upon a conspicuous part of the Court-house, and also, where the property is land paying revenue to the Government, in the office of the Collector of the district in which the land is situate.

Immoveable property.—The equity of redemption of a mortgagor is "immoveable" property within the meaning of this rule (j). The life-interest taken by a Parsi widow under her husband's will in the income of his immoveable property is not moveable but immoveable property, and is attachable under this rule (k).

Mortgage-debt.—The sale of a mortgage-debt in execution of a decree carries with it the security without attaching the mortgaged property under this rule: see notes to r. 46, "Attachment of mortgage-debt," p. 594 above.

Omission to beat the drum.—Such an omission is a "material irregularity" within the meaning of r. 90 of this Order (l).

Proclamation of sale.—See r. 64 below and notes thereto.

Removal of attachment
after satisfaction of decree.

55. [S. 275.] Where—

O. 21,
rr. 55, 56.

- (a) the amount decreed with costs and all charges and expenses resulting from the attachment of any property are paid into Court, or
- (b) satisfaction of the decree is otherwise made through the Court or certified to the Court, or
- (c) the decree is set aside or reversed, the attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn, and, in the case of immoveable property, the withdrawal shall, if the judgment-debtor so desires, be proclaimed at his expense, and a copy of the proclamation shall be affixed in the manner prescribed by the last preceding rule.

Alterations in the rule:—

1. The words “or certified to the Court” in cl. (b) are new. The effect of these words is to place satisfaction certified under r. 2 of this Order on the same footing as satisfaction made through the Court.
2. The latter part of the rule commencing with the words “the attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn,” etc., is new. Under the old section, an express order was necessary for the withdrawal of the attachment. No such order is necessary under the present rule. The attachment is to be deemed to be withdrawn on the happening of any of the events specified in cls. (a), (b) and (c).

Bearing of this rule on s. 73.—See notes to s. 73 under the head “Assets held by a Court,” beginning with case A, p. 197.

“The attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn.”—A’s property is attached in execution of a decree obtained by him against B. C, another judgment-creditor of A, applies for execution of his decree, but no attachment is issued upon his application. On the date fixed for the sale A pays into Court the amount payable under B’s decree. The next day C applies for sale of the property. C is not entitled to have the property sold because the effect of the payment into Court was the withdrawal of the attachment under this rule, and there being no attachment under C’s decree no sale can be ordered in execution of his decree (m).

56. [S. 27.]

Order for payment of coin or currency notes to party entitled under decree.

Where the property attached is current coin or currency notes, the Court may, at any time during the continuance of the attachment, direct that such coin or notes, or a part thereof sufficient to satisfy the decree, be paid over to the party entitled under the decree to receive the same.

57. [New.] Where any property has been attached in execution of a decree,* but by reason of the decree-holder's default the Court is unable to proceed further with the application for execution, it shall either dismiss the application or for any sufficient reason adjourn the proceedings to a future date. Upon the dismissal of such application the attachment shall cease.

Determination of attachment.

Object of the rule.—The object of the rule is to put an end to doubts which have arisen from time to time as to the continuance of an attachment by reason of the practice of "striking off proceedings" or "removing proceedings from the file" for which there was no justification under any of the earlier Codes (n). This subject has already been discussed in the notes to s. 64 under the head "Effect of striking off execution proceedings or of removing them from the file," p. 176.

By reason of the decree-holder's default.—The provisions of this rule that the attachment should cease upon the dismissal of the application for execution do not apply unless the dismissal was on the ground of "default" on the part of the decree-holder (o). The word "default" is not confined to default in appearance or in payment of process fees or in production of documents, but includes failure to do what the decree-holder is bound to do, that is, to proceed with his application for execution. Failure, therefore, to give notice to the judgment-debtor prior to the drawing up of the proclamation as required by r. 66 of this Order, is default within the meaning of this rule (p). Where a sale in execution of a decree is set aside for any reason other than default on the part of the decree-holder, the antecedent attachment is revived so as to support a second application for execution of the decree by sale of the same property and no fresh attachment is necessary (q).

Attachment before judgment.—This rule does not apply to attachments before judgment. Hence an attachment before judgment does not cease to have effect because of the dismissal of the application for execution for default of prosecution. A sues B and obtains an order for attachment before judgment. A then obtains a decree in the suit against B. Thereafter A applies for execution of the decree, but the application is dismissed for default of prosecution. The dismissal of the application has not the effect of putting an end to the attachment before judgment (r).

Investigation of Claims and Objections.

58. [S. 278.] (1) Where any claim is preferred to or any objection is made to the attachment of, any property attached in execution of a decree on the ground that such property is not liable to such attachment, the Court shall proceed to investigate the claim or Postponement of sale.

Rules 58 to 63.—These rules deal with investigation of claims preferred to property attached in execution of a decree and of objections to the attachment of such property.

Scope of the rule.—Objections to attachment raised by a party to the suit in which the decree under execution was passed or his representative fall within the scope of s. 47. Objections to attachment raised by a third party come under the present rule. This distinction is important in two ways :—

1. Where an objection to attachment is made by a party to the suit or his representative, the objector should proceed by an application under s. 47 : a separate suit for the purpose is barred. But where an objection to attachment is made by a third party the objector may either proceed by an application under this rule or he may bring a regular suit to establish his objection ; failure to proceed by an application under this rule is no bar to a separate suit. The object of this rule is to give a claimant a speedy and summary remedy, but the rule does not deprive him of his remedy by suit. The summary remedy given by this rule is alternative to the remedy by way of suit (s). See notes to r. 63 below, " Payment by claimant under protest."

2. An order made under s. 47 allowing or disallowing an objection to attachment is a " decree " (s. 2), and is therefore appealable. But orders under r. 60, 61 or 62 made upon an application under this rule are not appealable under the Code (t), and the remedy of the party against whom the order is made is by a regular suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute (r. 63). Such suit must be brought within one year from the date of the order [Limitation Act, art. 11] (u), but subject to such suit, the order is conclusive (v) ; see r. 63.

The following illustration shows the operation of rr. 58-62. In execution of a decree obtained by A against B certain property alleged to belong to B is attached. If the property attached is claimed by C, C may bring a regular suit for a declaration that the property attached belongs to him and for removal of the attachment. Or, if he desires to avail himself of the speedy remedy provided by this rule, he may present an

And if C's claim is disallowed (r. 61), he may bring a suit for a declaration that the property attached belongs to him, and is therefore not liable to attachment. If no such suit is brought within one year from the date of the order under r. 60 or 61, the order will be conclusive.

Objections to attachment, though made by parties to a suit or their representatives, come within the scope of this rule if the objection is based on the ground that the property attached is held by them on behalf of a third party as a trustee, guardian, or in other fiduciary capacity. See notes to s. 47 under the heads "Parties to the suit," p. 129 above, and "objection by party or his representative that property attached is not liable to attachment," p. 135 above.

Mortgage-decree.—This rule does not apply where the property in dispute is directed to be sold under a mortgage decree. The reason is that the property directed to be sold under a mortgage-decree does not require to be attached by way of execution (w) and the benefit of the summary procedure afforded by the present rule is limited to claims and objections arising in respect of an attachment. A obtains a decree against B for sale of certain property mortgaged to him, and applies in execution for the sale thereof. If the property is claimed by C, the procedure is by suit for a declaration that the property belongs to him, and not by application under this rule (x).

Rules 58 to 63 apply to "debts" also.—A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 5,000, and attaches in execution of the decree a debt alleged to be due by C to B. Can C apply under this rule to have the attachment removed? Yes; and if the attachment is not removed, he may institute a suit for a declaration that no debt is due from him to B within a year from the date of the order against him. If no such suit is filed, the order will be conclusive against him (y). In an earlier Bombay case, the opinion was expressed that the procedure laid down in the sections of the Code of 1882 corresponding to rr. 58 to 63 did not apply to a debt attached in execution of a decree, the reason given being that a debt was not property capable of possession within the meaning of rr. 60 and 61, and that if C alleged that no debt was due, the proper course was for the Court to satisfy itself as to its existence (r. 66), and if it was satisfied that no debt existed, it should abstain from proceeding to sell the debt (z). But this view has since been dissented from, and it has been held that the words "possessed of" in rr. 60 and 61 are not restricted to objects capable of physical possession, but apply also to objects capable of constructive possession, such as a debt. Moreover, the word "property" in the present rule is wide enough to include a debt. As to a garnishee's right to set-off, see notes to r. 46 above.

Appeal.—No appeal lies under the Code from an order made in a claim case [see notes to s. 47, "Objection by party or his representative that property attached is not liable to attachment," p. 135 above]. But it has been held by the High Court of Madras, that an appeal lies from such an order under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. It follows from this that where an appeal is preferred from the order, the period of limitation for the suit contemplated by r. 63 below is to be calculated from the date of the order made on appeal (a).

O. 21,
rr. 58-60.

59. [S. 279.] The claimant or objector must adduce evidence to show that at the date of the attachment he had some interest in, or was possessed of, the property attached.

Evidence to be adduced by claimant.

"Some interest."—These words means "such an interest as would render the possession of the judgment-debtor possession not on his own account but on account of or in trust for the claimant" (b).

"Or was possessed of."—These words mean "was possessed of for himself, and not as trustee for the judgment-debtor." See the next rule and the notes thereto.

Limits of inquiry.—Rules 58 to 62 provide for a summary investigation into possession. Hence in an investigation under these rules what the Court has to determine is merely the question of possession, and it cannot go into the question of title with respect to the property taken in attachment. In execution of a decree obtained by A against B three pieces of Government securities are attached. The securities stand in the name of C. C applies for removal of the attachment under r. 58, alleging that the securities belong to him and they are held by him on his own account. A alleges that the securities are held by C benami for B. It is not open to the Court under these circumstances to inquire whether C, in whose name the securities stand, is merely the benamidar. The property must therefore be released from attachment (c). The question whether C is merely the benamidar is a question of title, and it can only be gone into in a suit under r. 63.

60. [S. 280.] Where upon the said investigation the Court is satisfied that for the reason stated in the claim or objection such property was not, when attached, in the possession of the judgment-debtor or of some person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of a tenant or other person paying rent to him, or that, being in the possession of the judgment-debtor at such time, it was so in his possession, not on his own account or as his own property, but on account of or in trust for some other person, or partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person, the Court shall make an order releasing the property, wholly or to such extent as it thinks fit, from attachment.

O. 21, rr. 60, 61. of C due to the estate of the deceased. Previously to the date of the decree an order had been made by the High Court under ss. 17 and 18 of the Administrator-General's Act 2 of 1874, authorising the Administrator-General to collect the assets of the deceased. It was held on the application of the Administrator-General that the attachment should be removed. As the order under the Administrator-General's Act authorised the Administrator-General to realize the debt from C as part of the assets of the deceased, the amount in the hands of C could not be said to be property in the possession of a third person in trust for the judgment-debtor (B) (d). See Notes to r. 62 below.

Property in possession of a judgment-debtor not on his own account but on account of or in trust for some other persons.—Such property, if attached, should be released from attachment under this rule. Thus where goods consigned by railway by A to B for sale against which B had made specific advances were attached, while they were yet in the hands of the railway company, in execution of a decree against A, it was held that though the goods were in the possession of A (judgment-debtor) by the railway company, they were in his possession not on his own account, but "on account of or in trust for" B, and should therefore be released from attachment on B's application (e).

Effect of order of release.—An order made under this rule releasing the property attached from attachment is only provisional and liable to be set aside by a regular suit (r. 63). "It is not conclusive; a suit may be brought to claim the property, notwithstanding the order" (f). It has not the effect therefore of putting an end to an attachment duly made, so as to leave the claimant free to deal with the property as he likes. If a suit is brought by the decree-holder to establish his right to attach the property, and a decree is passed for him, the effect of the decree is to set aside the order of release and to maintain the attachment originally made. The result is that any private transfer of the property by the claimant, though made after an order under this rule releasing the property from attachment, will be void under s. 64, if the right to attach is subsequently established by suit under r. 63 (g). In execution of a decree obtained by A against B certain property standing in the name of C (B's son) is attached. C objects to the attachment, and the property is released from attachment under this rule. C then mortgages the property to M. A then sues B and C for a declaration that B, and not C, is the real owner of the property, and that the property is therefore liable to be sold in execution of his decree against B, and a decree is passed in his favour. The property is then re-attached and sold in execution of A's decree, and purchased by P. The mortgage to M is a transfer contrary to the attachment within the meaning of s. 64, and P takes the property free from the mortgage.

61. [S. 281.] Where the Court is satisfied that the property was, at the time it was attached, in the possession of the judgment-debtor as his own property and not on account of any other person, or was in the possession of some other person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of a tenant or other person paying rent to him, the Court shall disallow the claim. O. 21,

rr. 61, 62

Effect of order under this rule.—An order in favour of a decree-holder made under this rule does not enure for the benefit of the other decree-holders who are not parties to the proceedings (h).

Disallowance of claim.—An order disallowing a claim under this rule is not a nullity and cannot be said to have been made without jurisdiction merely because the Court erroneously does not go into the question of possession, but disallows the claim on some other ground. Such an order, therefore, is conclusive unless a suit is filed by the claimant as provided by r. 63 of this Order (i).

62. [s. 282.] Where the Court is satisfied that the property is subject to a mortgage or charge in favour of some person not in possession, and thinks fit to continue the attachment, it may do so, subject to such mortgage or charge.

Continuance of attachment subject to claim of incumbrancer.

Scope of the rule.—This rule is an enabling rule, empowering the Court to pass a certain specified order on the fulfilment of two specified conditions. The conditions are (1) that the Court is satisfied that the property attached is subject to a mortgage or lien in favour of some person not in possession; and (2) that the Court in its discretion thinks fit to continue the attachment. Where those two conditions are satisfied then the rule empowers the Court to continue the attachment subject to the mortgage or lien. An order which refuses to acknowledge a mortgage or lien, and directs the continuance of the attachment free from such mortgage or lien cannot be referred to this rule. It is rather an order in proceedings under r. 66 below (j).

“Subject to a mortgage.”—The Code clearly makes a distinction between the case in which property is expressly sold subject to a mortgage and the case in which notice of an alleged mortgage is given in the proclamation of sale. The former is provided for by the present rule, and the latter by r. 66 below. In the former case the Court after being satisfied of the existence of the mortgage sells only the judgment-debtor's equity of redemption, that is to say, the purchaser buys the property subject to the mortgage. In the latter case he buys the property with notice of the mortgage and subject to such risk as the notice might involve; the executing Court does not decide whether the mortgage subsist or not. If there is in reality a subsisting mortgage, the purchaser has to redeem it. If, on the other hand, the mortgage specified in the proclamation of sale turns out invalid, the purchaser acquires the property free from liability for the mortgage. The point to be noted is that mere notice of an alleged mortgage in the proclamation of sale does not preclude the purchaser from proving the real nature of the mortgage when a claim is set up by the alleged mortgagee against the property (k). And it is also to be noted that if the mortgage specified in the proclamation turns out invalid, the

O. 21, judgment-debtor is not entitled to claim from the purchaser the amount alleged to have
rr. 62, 63. been due on the mortgage (l).

"Mortgage in favour of some person not in possession".—Where a mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged property at the time of attachment, he can claim to have the attachment removed under r. 60 (m). See notes to r. 41 above. In such a case it is only the equity of redemption that can be attached and sold. But if mortgagee is not in possession, either the equity of redemption may be attached and sold or the mortgaged property itself may be attached and sold subject to the mortgage. As to the position of the mortgagee in the latter case, see s. 73.

63. [S. 283.] Where a claim or an objection is preferred, the party against whom an order is made may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute, but subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive.

Saving of suits to establish right to attached property.

Alterations in the rule.—S. 283 of the Code of 1882 ran as follows: "The party against whom an order under sections 280, 281 or 282 [now rr. 60, 61 or 62] is passed may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims," etc. The present rule, on the other hand, says that "where a claim or an objection is preferred, the party against whom an order is made may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims," etc. The specific reference to the previous sections or rules has been omitted. A corresponding change has also been made in the Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, art 11. See notes below, "Order against party to a claim or objection."

Parties to suits under this rule.—This rule provides that unless the party against whom an order is made institutes a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute [within the period of a year from the date of the order as provided by art. 11 of the Limitation Act, 1908], the order made against him shall be conclusive. Now the party against whom an order may be made may be the decree-holder (r. 60), or the claimant including an incumbrancer (r. 61), or even the judgment-debtor. The result, therefore, is as follows:—

1. The decree-holder against whom an order is made under r. 60 may sue the successful claimant for a declaration of his right to attach and sell the property released from attachment (n). To such a suit the judgment-debtor is not a necessary party (o). See notes below under the head "Res judicata."

2. The claimant whose claim has been disallowed under r. 61 may sue the decree-holder to establish his right to the property attached (p). To such a suit the judgment-debtor is a necessary party (q). The claimant may in his suit under this rule ask also for any further or consequential relief to which he claims to be entitled (r), e.g., damages for wrongful seizure (s), but he is not bound to do so (t). And since the right conferred by this rule is not a personal one confined to the original claimant, a purchaser of the interest of the original claimant can also bring a declaratory suit under this rule (u). O. 21, r. 63.

3. A attaches a house in execution of a decree against B. The property is claimed by C. The Court allows C's claim, and the property is released from attachment. This is an order against A, the decree-holder (r. 60). Does it also amount to an order against the judgment-debtor? In other words, can it be said by reason of the fact that C's claim to the property is allowed that the order operates also against B, the judgment-debtor? Assuming that the order does operate against B, it can only be if B is deemed to be a "party against whom an order is made" within the meaning of this rule. If so, B must bring a declaratory suit against C within a year from the date of the order, otherwise the order against him would be conclusive. But it has been held that a judgment-debtor who is not in fact a party to the claim proceedings does not in the eye of the law become such by reason solely of his being the judgment-debtor. Unless therefore he is a party in fact, the order is not binding upon him, and he may institute a suit even after the lapse of one year from the date of the order provided he does so within the ordinary period of limitation applicable to the suit, to establish his title to, and recover possession of, the property from the claimant [C] (v). But if he was a party in fact, the order would be binding on him unless he brought the suit within the period of one year.

Period of limitation for suit under this rule.—The period of limitation for a suit under this rule is one year from the date of the order [Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, art. 11]. In Sardhari Lal v. Ambika Pershad (w), the Judicial Committee said: "It [that is, the order] is not conclusive; a suit may be brought to claim the property notwithstanding the order; but then the law of limitation says that the plaintiff must be prompt in bringing the suit. The policy of the Act evidently is to secure the speedy settlement of questions of title raised at execution sales and for that reason a year is fixed as this time within which the suit must be brought." Where an appeal is preferred from the order, the period of one year is to be calculated from the date of the appellate order (x).

Character of suit under this rule.—This rule provides that a party against whom the order referred to in this rule is made may institute a suit "to establish his right to the property in dispute". The words "to establish his right to the property" are, it has been held, wide enough to cover a suit not only for a declaration, but a suit for a declaration and consequential relief. Thus a plaintiff may under this rule sue for a declaration of his right to moveables and for a direction also that the defendant at whose instance they were attached be ordered to pay to him the value of the moveables (y).

"Subject to the result of such suit, the order shall be conclusive."—This means that unless the suit is brought as provided by this rule, the party against whom the order is made cannot assert, either as plaintiff or as defendant in any other suit or as a party to any other proceedings, the right denied to him by the order (z). A obtains a decree against B, and in execution of the decree attaches certain property alleged to belong to B. C claims that he is in possession of the property under a sale from B of a date prior to the attachment, and applies that the property be released from

O. 21, r 63. attachment. The executing Court finds that C was in possession at the date of the attachment, but that the sale to him was fictitious and disallows C's claim. No suit is brought by C within the period of a year to establish his right to the property. The property is then sold in execution, and purchased by P. P then sues C for possession. C is precluded in this suit from again asserting his right as purchaser from B. No suit having been brought by him within the period of limitation, the order disallowing his claim became conclusive against him under this rule.

The order is conclusive as against the party against whom it is made.—A obtains a decree against B, and attaches B's property in execution of his decree. C claiming to be a mortgagee of the property puts in a claim under r. 58. A contends that the mortgage is not valid but his contention is disallowed. No suit is instituted by A, as required by the present rule, and the order becomes conclusive against him. The property is then sold subject to C's mortgage, and it is purchased by A. Subsequently C sues A (purchaser) and B (mortgagor) to recover the mortgage debt by sale of the mortgaged property. B, not being a party to the claim proceedings, may contend in C's suit that the mortgage is not valid, but A cannot raise that contention for the order has become conclusive against him. The fact that B, the judgment-debtor, can impeach the validity of the mortgage, and that the property purchased by A is the property which belonged to B, does not entitle A to be placed in B's position so as to give him the same right to attach the mortgage as B has (a). See notes above, "Parties to suits under this rule," para. 3.

It is also to be noted that an order in a claim case is conclusive only as regards the particular property in dispute (b).

Order "against" party to a claim or objection:—

1. Order dismissing a claim for default. Section 283 of the Code of 1882 ran as follows: "The party against whom an order under sections 280, 281, or 282 is passed may institute a suit," etc. It was accordingly held in some cases that the order referred to in s. 283 must be one made after investigation of the claim as contemplated by sections 280, 281 and 282, and that an order dismissing a claim for default and without investigation did not come under that section. Such being the case, it was held that an order dismissing a claim for default did not become "conclusive" against the party against whom it was made so as to preclude him from instituting a suit more than one year after the date of the order, provided the suit was within the ordinary period of limitation (c). The language of the present rule is more comprehensive than the language of s. 283. There is no reference made to the previous rules, namely, rules 60, 61 and 62, and a corresponding change has also been made in art. 11 of the Limitation Act. The result is that the rule applies to every order made against a party to a claim preferred or an objection made under r. 58, even if the order was made for default and without investigation (d).

2. Order refusing to investigate a claim.—Where a claim or objection is preferred under r. 58, and the Court rejects it under the proviso to that rule on the ground that it was designedly or unnecessarily delayed, the order is one made "against" the claimant or objector within the meaning of this rule (e).

3. An order on a claim petition stating that as it was filed late it will be notified to the bidders, is in effect an order rejecting the claim. Such an order is one made "against" the claimant within the meaning of this rule (j). O. 21, r. 63.

Orders in proceedings for attachment before judgment.—This rule applies to orders on claims preferred to property attached before judgment (g).

Payment by claimant under protest.—If the claimant fails, and the attachment is not removed, he is not compelled to bring a suit under this rule for a declaration of his title to the property: he may prevent the sale of the property by paying the decretal amount to the decree-holder, and then sue for it as money paid under compulsion of law, i.e., under pressure of execution proceedings (h). Further, the claimant is not bound to take proceedings at all under the Code to set aside the attachment. He may pay the amount of the decree under protest, and then sue as stated above (i).

Jurisdiction.—In a suit for a declaration that property is not liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree, where the value of the property is in excess of the amount claimed in execution of the decree, the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is not the value of the property, but the decretal amount (j). But where the plaintiff seeks not only for a declaration that the property is not attachable, but for a declaration of his title to the property as against the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is the value of the property (k).

Burden of proof.—The burden of proof in a suit under this rule lies on the plaintiff as in other cases, and not on the defendant (l).

Fraudulent transfer by judgment-debtor.—In execution of a decree obtained by A against B, B's property is attached. C claims the property as having been purchased by him from B before A obtained the decree against B, but the claim is disallowed. C then sues A and B under this rule to establish his right to the property. A pleads in defence that the transfer by B to C was made with intent to defraud B's creditors. It has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court that it is not open to an attaching creditor [A] in a suit under this rule to plead in defence the fraudulent character of the alienation. The alienation, being merely fraudulent (as distinguished from 'sham'), must be held to continue in force until it is set aside in proceedings properly instituted for the purpose (m). According to the Calcutta High Court, the attaching-creditor [A] is entitled to plead the fraudulent character of the alienation in defence to the suit (n). But it has been held by the Madras High Court, that if in the case put above C's claim is allowed and the attachment is raised, it is competent to A, the attaching creditor, to sue C, the transferee, under this rule to establish his right to attach the property, and to allege and prove in such suit that the transfer by B to C was fraudulent (o).

rr. 64, 66.

Sale generally.

64. [S. 284.] Any Court executing a decree may order that any property attached by it and liable to sale, or such portion thereof as may seem necessary to satisfy the decree, shall be sold, and that the proceeds of such sale, or a sufficient portion thereof, shall be paid to the party entitled under the decree to receive the same.

Power to order property attached to be sold and proceeds to be paid to person entitled.

Sale of goods not belonging to judgment-debtor.—A obtains a decree against B. In execution of the decree A points out to the sheriff's agent goods belonging to C as the property of B. C's goods are thereupon attached by the sheriff's agent, and sold in execution. C is entitled to claim from A the market value of his goods as on the date of attachment. The sheriff is not liable in such a case (p).

65. [S. 286.] Save as otherwise prescribed, every sale in execution of a decree shall be conducted by an officer of the Court or by such other person as the Court may appoint in this behalf, and shall be made by public auction in manner prescribed.

Sales by whom conducted and how made.

"Save as otherwise prescribed."—See r. 76 below.

66. [S. 287.] (1) Where any property is ordered to be sold by public auction in execution of a decree, the Court shall cause a proclamation of the intended sale to be made in the language of such Court.

Proclamation of sales by public auction.

(2) Such proclamation shall be drawn up after notice to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor and shall state the time and place of sale, and specify as fairly and accurately as possible—

- (a) the property to be sold;
- (b) the revenue assessed upon the estate or part of the estate, where the property to be sold is an interest in an estate or in part of an estate paying revenue to the Government;
- (c) any incumbrance to which the property is liable;

(d) the amount for the recovery of which the sale is O. 21, r. 66. ordered ;

(e) every other thing which the Court considers material for a purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property.

(3) Every application for an order for sale under this rule shall be accompanied by a statement signed and verified in the manner hereinbefore prescribed for the signing and verification of pleadings and containing, so far as they are known to or can be ascertained by the person making the verification, the matters required by sub-rule (2) to be specified in the proclamation.

(4) For the purpose of ascertaining the matters to be specified in the proclamation, the Court may summon any person whom it thinks necessary to summon and may examine him in respect to any such matters and require him to produce any document in his possession or power relating thereto.

Alterations in the rule :—

1. The provision in sub-r. (2) for notice to be given to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor is new.
2. Sub-r. (3) is also new.

Incumbrances to which the property is liable.—See notes to r. 62 of this order.

Value of the property.—Clause (e) of the rule provides that the proclamation shall specify as fairly and accurately as possible “every other thing which the Court considers material for a purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property”. There can hardly be any doubt that the value of the property to be put up for sale is a material fact within the meaning of cl. (e).⁹ As stated by the Judicial Committee in Saadatmand Mohan v. Hurruk Chand (g), “Whatever material fact is stated in the proclamation (and the value of the property is a very material fact) must be considered as one of these things ‘which the Court considers material for a purchaser to know,’ and it is enacted in terms (though express enactment is hardly necessary for such an object) that those things shall be stated ‘as fairly and accurately as possible’”. If any enquiry into the value of the property is necessary, the Court should hold an enquiry (r). If the value is understated in the proclamation, and the understatement is such as is calculated to mislead bidders and to prevent them from offering adequate prices, and the sale results in a price altogether inadequate, the sale must be set aside on the ground of material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale within the meaning of r. 90 below (s). In a Calcutta case it was said that the Court was not bound to investigate the value of the property (t), but these remarks were obiter dicta (u), and it was held in a later case that the Court is bound under this clause to investigate the value and insert it in the sale proclamation (v). In view of the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case cited above, there is no doubt that the value of the property should be stated as fairly and accurately as possible in the sale proclamation.

Specification of incumbrances.—See notes to r. 90 below, "Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale," No. 1.

Sale by Court—Duty of Court.—In a case in which the terms of the proclamation were not clearly explained by the officer of the Court conducting the sale to a person present at the sale who asked that the terms be explained, and such person was thereupon misled into buying property which was subject to mortgages amounting to more than its value, the Judicial Committee in setting aside the sale observed: "In sales under the direction of the Court it is incumbent of the Court to be scrupulous in the extreme and very careful to see that no taint or touch of fraud or deceit or misrepresentation is found in the conduct of its ministers. It would be disastrous, it would be absolutely shocking, if the Court were to enforce against a purchaser misled by its duly accredited agents a bargain so illusory and so unconscientious as this" (w).

Irregularity in publishing sale.—See notes to r. 90 below, "Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale."

Appeal.—An order fixing a valuation of the judgment-debtor's property under this rule is not an order relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of a decree within the meaning of s. 47, and no appeal lies from it (x).

67. [S. 289.] (1) Every proclamation shall be made and published, as nearly as may be, in the manner prescribed by rule 54, sub-rule (2).

Mode of making proclamation.

(2) Where the Court so directs, such proclamation shall also be published in the local official Gazette or in a local newspaper, or in both, and the costs of such publication shall be deemed to be costs of the sale.

(3) Where property is divided into lots for the purpose of being sold separately, it shall not be necessary to make a separate proclamation for each lot, unless proper notice of the sale cannot, in the opinion of the Court, otherwise be given.

Sub-rule (3): property divided into lots for separate sale.—This sub-rule is new. It incorporates the decision in the undermentioned case (y).

O. 21,
rr. 67-69.

Non-compliance with the provisions of this rule.—Omission to carry out the provisions of this rule does not render the sale ipso facto void. But such omission amounts to a "material irregularity within the meaning of r. 90 below, and the sale will be set aside if the Court is satisfied that substantial injury has resulted from the irregularity (z). [The reader is advised to read r. 90 at this stage, and note particularly the proviso to that rule].

Sub-r. (2).—Note that under this sub-rule the Court may direct publication of the proclamation; there is no obligation on its part to do so. (zz).

in writing of the judgment-debtor, take place until after the expiration of at least thirty days in the case of immoveable property, and of at least fifteen days in the case of moveable property, calculated from the date on which the copy of the proclamation has been affixed on the Court-house of the Judge ordering the sale.

Non-compliance with the provisions of this rule.—If a sale is held before the expiration of the period prescribed by this rule, it is not void, but the case is one of material irregularity within the meaning of r. 90, and the sale will be set aside if the Court is satisfied that substantial injury has resulted from the irregularity (a).

69. [S. 291.] (1) The Court may, in its discretion, adjourn any sale hereunder to a specified day and hour, and the officer conducting any such sale may in his discretion adjourn the sale, recording his reason for such adjournment.

Adjournment or stoppage of sale.

Provided that, where the sale is made in, or within the precincts of, the Court-house, no such adjournment shall be made without the leave of the Court.

(2) Where a sale is adjourned under sub-rule (1) for a longer period than seven days, a fresh proclamation under rule 67 shall be made, unless the judgment-debtor consents to waive it.

(3) Every sale shall be stopped if, before the lot is knocked down, the debt and costs (including the costs of the sale) are tendered to the officer conducting the sale, or proof is given to his satisfaction that the amount of such debt and costs has been paid into the Court which ordered the sale.

Omission to issue fresh proclamation.—Such an omission amounts to a “material irregularity” within the meaning of r. 90 below (c).

Sale in execution of a mortgage-decree.—A mortgagor judgment-debtor is entitled to stop the sale of the mortgaged property in execution of a mortgage-decree by payment of the debt before the sale actually takes place even after a final decree for sale has been passed (d).

Rateable distribution.—Money paid into Court under sub-r. (3) to stop a sale is an asset available for rateable distribution (e); see s. 73.

70. [Cf. S. 287, last para.] Nothing in rules 66 to 69 shall be deemed to apply to any case in which the execution of a decree has been transferred to the Collector.

Saving of certain sales.

Execution of decrees by Collector.—See ss. 68 to 72, and the third Schedule.

71. [S. 293.] Any deficiency of price which may happen on a re-sale by reason of the purchaser's default, and all expenses attending such re-sale, shall be certified to the Court or to the Collector or subordinate of the Collector, as the case may be, by the officer or other person holding the sale, and shall, at the instance of either the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor, be recoverable from the defaulting purchaser under the provisions relating to the execution of a decree for the payment of money.

Defaulting

Application of the rule.—This rule extends to all sales, whether of moveable or of immoveable property, and also to re-sales made under the Code, whether made in consequence of default of payment of deposit under r. 81 or of purchase money under rr. 85 and 86 (f). But the re-sale should only cover the property sold at the prior sale, and any substantial difference of description at the sale and re-sale in any of the matters required by r. 66 will disentitle the decree-holder to recover the deficiency of price under this rule. Thus where the defaulting purchaser had been induced to bid for the property as unincumbered by reason of the fact that the incumbrances were not mentioned in the proclamation of sale and the re-sale was on a proclamation in which the incumbrances were mentioned, it was held that he could not be made liable for the deficiency on re-sale under this rule (g). The same was held where the property was described as that of A in the first sale and as that of B in the second (h). It is different, however, if the property re-sold is substantially the same as that put up for sale at the first sale ; in such a case the defaulting purchaser is liable, for the deficiency on re-sale (i) referred to in this rule is not a condition precedent to the recovery of the deficiency ; the deficiency may be recovered though the certificate is not issued (j). O. 21,

r. 71, 72.

It is to be noted that on the happening of any of the events that render a re-sale necessary, the decree-holder is not bound to have the same property re-sold ; he may proceed against any other property of the judgment-debtor, leaving the latter to his remedy against the defaulting purchaser (k).

Purchaser's default.—At a Court-sale A bids Rs. 5,000, B bids Rs. 6,000, and C bids Rs. 7,000. C dies before his bid is accepted by the Court. Can B be said in the circumstances to be the highest bidder ? No. C's bid was revoked by his death before acceptance by the Court. B's bid lapsed on the making of the subsequent higher bid of Rs. 7,000, and so did A's bid. The property should therefore be put up afresh for sale (l).

Appeal.—An order under this rule allowing or disallowing an application for recovery of the loss by re-sale is appealable as a decree according to the Madras (m) and Calcutta (n) decisions, but not according to the Allahabad decisions (o).

72. [S. 294.] (1) No holder of a decree in execution of which property is sold shall, without the express permission of the Court, bid for or purchase the property.

Decree-holder not to bid for or buy property without permission.

(2) Where a decree-holder purchases with such permission, the purchase-money and the amount due on the decree may, subject to the provisions of section 73, be set off against one another, and the Court executing the decree shall enter up satisfaction of the decree in whole or in part accordingly.

Where purchases, amount of decree may be taken as payment.

(3) Where a decree-holder purchases, by himself or through another person, without such permission, the Court may, if it thinks fit, on the application of the judgment-debtor or any other person whose interests are affected by the sale, by order set aside the sale ; and the costs of such application and order, and any deficiency of price which may happen on the re-sale and all expenses attending it, shall be paid by the decree-holder.

Alterations in the rule :—

1. The words "subject to the provisions of section 73" are new. See notes below under the head "Amount due on the decree."

O.21, r.72.

2. The words "any other person whose interests are affected by the sale" in sub-r. (3) have been substituted for the words "any other person interested in the sale." This is merely a verbal alteration.

No separate suit.—Where a decree-holder without leave of the Court buys the property of the judgment-debtor at a Court sale, the remedy of the latter is by application under this rule and s. 47, and not by a separate suit: a separate suit is barred under s. 47. The question whether the sale should be set aside or not is a question between the "parties to the suit" relating to the "execution" of the decree within the meaning of s. 47, and it must therefore be decided by the Court executing the decree, and not by a separate suit (p). Note the words "may by order set aside the sale" in sub-r. (3).

"The Court may, if it thinks fit, set aside the sale."—Where a decree-holder purchases without the permission of the Court, the sale is not a nullity for want of jurisdiction: the case is one merely of irregularity in procedure (q). The words "the Court may, if it thinks fit, set aside the sale" clearly show that a purchase by a decree-holder without permission is not ipso facto void; such purchase is valid until it is set aside under this rule (r). In determining whether the sale should be set aside, the Court should take into consideration whether the property has been sold at an adequate or inadequate price (s). The sale may be set aside even after confirmation (t).

Setting off decretal amount against purchase money.—It may be one of the terms on which the permission to bid is granted that there should not be this right of set-off. In such a case no set-off can be directed (u).

Effect of leave to bid.—A decree-holder who has obtained leave to bid at a judicial sale is in the same position as any other purchaser; he is not bound more than any other person to disclose circumstances within his knowledge and bearing on the sale (v). Similarly, a mortgagee purchaser who has obtained leave to bid is in the same position as an independent purchaser (w); that is to say, he does not stand in the position of a trustee for the mortgagor, and he is only bound to give credit to the mortgagor for the actual amount of his bid, and not for what may be the actual value of the property (x). It may here be noted that if the decree-holder himself is the purchaser, and the decree is subsequently reversed, the sale to him will be set aside (y); but the sale cannot be set aside against a bona fide purchaser who is not a party to the suit (z). See notes to s. 65, "Effect of reversal of decree upon sale," etc., p. 182 above.

"Amount due on the decree."—When more than one decree-holder has applied or execution, the amount due on the decree to the decree-holder purchaser is the amount to which he would be entitled on a rateable distribution under s. 73 (a). This is now made clear by the addition of the words "subject to the provisions of s. 73" in sub-r. (2).

Interest.—A decree, the satisfaction of which has resulted from the decree-holder himself bidding the full amount of the decree at the execution sale, is not actually satisfied until the sale has been confirmed under r. 92 below (b). If, therefore, the decree carries interest, the decree-holder is entitled to claim interest between the date of the sale and the date of its confirmation (c).

rr. 72-74.

Procedure.—Where a decree-holder purchases property in contravention of the provisions of this rule, and sues the judgment-debtor and transferees from him for possession, it is open to the judgment-debtor to have the sale set aside in the suit by way of answer to the plaintiff's claim. It is not necessary that the judgment-debtor should have previously applied to the Court under this rule and s. 47 to set aside the sale. The written statement of the judgment-debtor may be treated as an application to set aside the sale under s. 47 (d).

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order refusing to give a decree-holder permission to purchase at the Court sale (c). But an appeal lies from an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale under this rule [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (j)].

73. [S. 292.] No officer or other person having any duty to perform in connection with any sale shall, either directly or indirectly, bid for, acquire or attempt to acquire any interest in the property sold.

75. [New.] (1) Where the property to be sold is a growing crop and the crop from its nature admits of being stored but has not yet been stored, the day of the sale shall be so fixed as to admit of its being made ready for storing before the arrival of such day, and the sale shall not be held until the crop has been cut or gathered and is ready for storing.

Special provisions relating to growing crops.

(2) Where the crop from its nature does not admit of being stored, it may be sold before it is cut and gathered, and the purchaser shall be entitled to enter on the land, and to do all that is necessary for the purpose of tending and cutting or gathering it.

76. [s. 296.] Where the property to be sold is a negotiable instrument or a share in a corporation, the Court may, instead of directing the sale to be made by public auction, authorize the sale of such instrument or share through a broker.

Negotiable instruments and shares in corporations.

77. [s. 297.] (1) Where moveable property is sold by public auction the price of each lot shall be paid at the time of sale or as soon after as the officer or other person holding the sale directs, and in default of payment the property shall forthwith be re-sold.

Sale by public auction.

(2) On payment of the purchase-money, the officer or other person holding the sale shall grant a receipt for the same and the sale shall become absolute.

(3) Where the moveable property to be sold is a share in goods belonging to the judgment-debtor and a co-owner, and two or more persons, of whom one is such co-owner, respectively bid the same sum for such property or for any lot, the bidding shall be deemed to be the bidding of the co-owner. O. 21, rr. 77-79.

Sub-rule (3).—This sub-rule is new. It gives a right of pre-emption to the co-owner. See as to immoveable property, r. 88 below.

78. [s. 298.] No irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale of moveable property shall vitiate the sale; but any person sustaining any injury by reason of such irregularity at the hand of any other person may institute a suit against him for compensation or (if such other person is the purchaser) for the recovery of the specific property and for compensation in default of such recovery.

Irregularity not to vitiate sale, but any person injured may sue.

Scope of the rule.—This rule provides for the case of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale of moveable property. Rule 90 deals with irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale of immoveable property.

79. [Ss. 299, 300, 301.] (1) Where the property sold is moveable property of which actual seizure has been made, it shall be delivered to the purchaser.

Delivery of moveable property, debts and shares.

(2) Where the property sold is moveable property in the possession of some person other than the judgment-debtor, the delivery thereof to the purchaser shall be made by giving notice to the person in possession prohibiting him from delivering possession of the property to any person except the purchaser.

(3) Where the property sold is a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument, or is a share in a corporation, the delivery thereof shall be made by a written order of the Court prohibiting the creditor from receiving the debt or any interest thereon, and the debtor from making payment thereof to any person except the purchaser, or prohibiting the person in whose name the share may be standing from making any transfer of the share to any person except the purchaser, or receiving payment of any dividend or interest thereon, and the manager, secretary or other proper officer of the corporation from permitting any such transfer or making any such payment to any person except the purchaser.

rr. 80-83.

80. [S. 302.] (1)^{*} Where the execution of a document or the endorsement of the party in whose name a negotiable instrument or a share in a corporation is standing is required to transfer such negotiable instrument or share, the Judge or such officer as he may appoint in this behalf may execute such document or make such endorsement as may be necessary, and such execution or endorsement shall have the same effect as an execution or endorsement by the party.

(2) Such execution or endorsement may be in the following form, namely :—

A. B. by C. D., Judge of the Court of (or as the case may be), in a suit by E. F. against A. B.

(3) Until the transfer of such negotiable instrument or share, the Court may, by order, appoint some person to receive any interest or dividend due thereon and to sign a receipt for the same; and any receipt so signed shall be as valid and effectual for all purposes as if the same had been signed by the party himself.

81. [S. 303.] In the case of any moveable property not hereinbefore provided for, the Court may make an order vesting such property in the purchaser or as he may direct: and such property shall vest accordingly.

Sale of immoveable property.

82. [S. 304.] Sales of immoveable property in execution of decrees may be ordered by any Court other than a Court of Small Causes.

What Courts may order sales.

83. [S. 305.] (1) Where an order for the sale of immoveable property has been made, if the judgment-debtor can satisfy the Court that there is reason to believe that the amount of the decree may be raised by the mortgage or lease or private sale of such property, or some part thereof, or of any other immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, the Court may, on his application, postpone the sale of the property comprised in the order for sale on such terms and for such period as it thinks proper, to enable him to raise the amount. O.21,r.83.

(2) In such case the Court shall grant a certificate to the judgment-debtor authorizing him within a period to be mentioned therein, and notwithstanding anything contained in section 64, to make the proposed mortgage, lease or sale :

Provided that all monies payable under such mortgage, lease or sale shall be paid, not to the judgment-debtor, but, save in so far as a decree-holder is entitled to set off such money under the provisions of rule 72, into Court:

Provided also that no mortgage, lease or sale under this rule shall become absolute until it has been confirmed by the Court.

(3) Nothing in this rule shall be deemed to apply to a sale of property directed to be sold in execution of a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage of, or charge on, such property.

Alterations in the rule :—

1. The words, " save in so far as a decree-holder is entitled to set off such money under the provisions of rule 72 " in sub-r. (2), have been added to make it clear that where a decree-holder is entitled to a set-off under r. 72, he should not be required to pay in the monies. A similar saving has been introduced into r. 84, sub-r. 2, and r. 85.

Confirmation of sale by Court.—Where permission to raise the amount of decree by private sale has been granted to the judgment-debtor by two Courts in each of which there has been a decree passed against him, it is enough if the sale is confirmed by one Court : it is superfluous to apply to the other Court for confirmation of the same sale (f).

Guardian and Wards Act 8 of 1890, s. 29.—A private alienation of property, though confirmed by the executing Court under this rule, is not valid, if such alienation is made by a guardian and the sale is not confirmed by the Court by which the guardian was appointed (g).

Decree for the enforcement of a mortgage.—This rule does not apply to a sale of property directed to be sold in execution of a decree for the enforcement of a mortgage. The reason is that in the case of a mortgage-decree, the right of sale does not depend upon the attachment in execution, but is conferred by the decree itself (h).

Rateable distribution.—Money paid into Court under the proviso to sub-r. (2) is liable to rateable distribution under s. 73, as it is paid under a pending execution application (i).

84. [S. 306.] (1) On every sale of ~~immovable~~ property the person declared to be the purchaser shall pay immediately after such declaration a deposit of twenty-five per cent. on the amount of his purchase-money to the officer or other person conducting the sale and, in default of such deposit, the property shall forthwith be re-sold.

Deposit by purchaser and re-sale on default.

(2), Where the decree-holder is the purchaser and is entitled to set off the purchase-money under rule 72, the Court may dispense with the requirements of this rule.

Material irregularity.—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that if the deposit of 25 per cent. is not made immediately, there is no sale, and that the property should be forthwith put up again and sold (j). On the other hand, it has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras that failure to deposit the 25 per cent. as required by this rule is no more than a “material irregularity” within the meaning of r. 90, which would render the sale voidable if substantial injury has resulted by reason of such irregularity (k).

Sub-rule (2).—This sub-rule is new. See notes to r. 83, “Alterations in the rule.”

85. [S. 307.] The full amount of purchase-money payable shall be paid by the purchaser into Court before the Court closes on the fifteenth day from the sale of the property:

Time for payment in full of purchase-money.

Provided that, in calculating the amount to be so paid into Court, the purchaser shall have the advantage of any set-off to which he may be entitled under rule 72.

“Shall be paid by the purchaser.”—The purchaser is bound to see that the money reaches the Court in time to satisfy the requirements of this rule. If the purchase-money is not received by the Court in time, it will not avail him to say that he had posted the money in time, for the Post Office is not the agent of the Court (l).

Where the Court or office is closed on the fifteenth day.—In such a case the payment may be made on the next day on which the Court or office is open. See General Clauses Act 10 of 1897, s. 10.

forfeited to the Government, and the property shall be re-sold, and the defaulting purchaser shall forfeit all claim to the property or to any part of the sum for which it may subsequently be sold. O. 21, rr. 86-89.

Alteration in the rule.—The words “ may, if the Court thinks fit,” have been substituted for the word “ shall.” See notes below.

Forfeiture of deposit to Government.—The old section provided that the deposit “ shall be forfeited to Government.” This provision led to hardship in certain cases (m). To obviate any hardship that may arise, the words “ may, if the Court thinks fit,” have been substituted for the word “ shall.” It is no longer obligatory upon the Court to forfeit the deposit in every case.

87. [S. 309.] Every re-sale of immoveable property, in default of payment of the purchase-money within the period allowed for such payment, shall be made after the issue of a fresh proclamation in the manner and for the period hereinbefore prescribed for the sale.

Notification on re-sale.

Fresh notification.—A fresh notification is only necessary where the re-sale is in default of payment of the purchase-money within the time allowed by r. 85. No fresh notification is necessary for a re-sale in default of payment of the 25 per cent. deposit required by r. 84 (n).

88. [S. 310.] Where the property sold is a share of undivided immoveable property and two or more persons, of whom one is a co-sharer, respectively bid the same sum for such property or for any lot, the bid shall be deemed to be the bid of the co-sharer.

Bid of co-sharer to have preference.

See as to moveable property, r. 77, sub-r. (3) above.

Co-sharer.—A defeasible title to a share is not sufficient to support a claim for pre-emption under this rule (o).

89. [S. 310A.] (1) Where immoveable property has been sold in execution of a decree, any person, either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale, may apply to have the sale set aside on his depositing in Court,—

- (b) for payment to the decree-holder, the amount specified in the proclamation of sale as that for the recovery of which the sale was ordered, less any amount which may, since the date of such proclamation of sale, have been received by the decree-holder.

(2) Where a person applies under rule 90 to set aside the sale of his immoveable property, he shall not, unless he withdraws his application, be entitled to make or prosecute an application under this rule.

(3) Nothing in this rule shall relieve the judgment-debtor from any liability he may be under in respect of costs and interest not covered by the proclamation of sale.

Alterations in the rule :—

1. The words, "any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale," have been substituted for the words, "any person whose immoveable property has been sold." See notes below, "Who may apply under this rule."
2. The words, "unless he withdraws his application," and the words, "or prosecute," in sub-r. (2) are new. See notes below under the head, "Sub-rule (2)."

Application of rule to mortgage-decrees.—The transfer into this Code (see O. 34) of the sections of the Transfer of Property Act relating to decrees in suits on mortgage shows clearly that the provisions of the present rule apply to mortgage-decrees as well. Hence a mortgagor whose immoveable property has been sold in execution of a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property passed under O. 34, r. 5, may apply under this rule to set aside the sale. As to the old section it was doubtful whether its provisions applied to mortgage decrees, the High Court of Calcutta holding that they did not (p), while the other Courts holding that they did (q). The Calcutta decisions are no longer law.

Who may apply under this rule.—Under the old section, the application to set aside a sale could only be made by "any person whose immoveable property has been sold" under the chapter relating to execution. Those words, it was held, included—

- (1) the judgment-debtor, and
- (2) any person though not a party to the suit or decree (r) whose interests were affected by the sale.

(p) Kedar Nath v. Kali Churn (1898) 25 Cal. 703.
 (q) Raja Ram v. Ohunni Lal (1897) 19 All. 205;

Mallickarjunadu v. Lingamurti (1902) 25 Mad. 244.
 (r) Suchand v. Balaram (1910) 38 Cal. 1, 6.

A person whose interests were not affected by the sale could not apply under that O. 21, r.89. section (s).

Under the present rule, the application to set aside a sale of immoveable property held in execution of a decree may be made by—

- (1) any person owning the property, or
- (2) any person holding an interest in such property by virtue of a title acquired before the sale.

It is not a necessary condition that the interests of the applicant should be affected by the sale.

“Any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale”.—Under the old section the application to set aside a sale on deposit could be made by “any person whose immoveable property has been sold.” Under the present rule the application may be made by “any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale.” There is no doubt that a judgment-debtor who has not transferred his interest in the property sold in execution of the decree against him may apply under this rule as a “person owning such property.” But the judgment-debtor may have transferred his interest in the property, and such transfer may have been made either before the Court-sale or after the Court-sale. This gives rise to the question whether a judgment-debtor who has transferred his interest in the property is entitled to apply under this rule either as a person “owning the property” or as a person “holding any interest therein.”

A—if the transfer was made before the Court-sale ;

B—if the transfer was made after the Court-sale.

A.—First, as regards transfer before Court-sale.—Under the old section there was a conflict of decisions whether, if the judgment-debtor had transferred his interest in the property before the Court-sale, the transferee could apply under that section to have the same set aside. In Srinivasa v. Ayyathurai (t), for instance, it was held that the transferee could apply, whereas, the contrary view was taken in Ramchandra v. Rakhmabai (u). Under the present rule it is clear that a transferee acquiring title before the Court-sale is competent to apply to have the sale set aside.

B.—Next, as regards transfer after Court-sale.—A obtains a decree against J. In execution of the decree certain immoveable property belonging to J is sold to C for Rs. 166. Subsequently, but before the sale to C is confirmed under r. 92, J sells the property to P for Rs. 500. It is clear that if J could apply under this rule to have the sale set aside on payment of the amount mentioned in the rule, the pecuniary benefit to him would be great, for while the property was sold at the Court-sale for Rs. 166, it realized Rs. 500 at the subsequent private sale. Is J, the judgment-debtor, entitled to apply under this rule to have the sale set aside ? Is P, the purchaser at the private sale, entitled to apply under this rule ? It has been held by the Allahabad High Court (v), that neither the judgment-debtor nor the subsequent purchaser is entitled to apply under this rule. The ground of the Allahabad decision is that the present rule gives judgment-debtors a last chance of saving the property for themselves and that it was no part of the Legislature's intention that the property should be saved for persons to whom it might be privately sold after the Court-sale had taken place. The Madras

O. 21, r. 89. High Court has held that the judgment-debtor is not entitled to apply (w), but that the subsequent purchaser is entitled to apply (x). The ground of the Madras decisions is that the judgment-debtor having parted with his interest in the property before the application under this rule and so having no interest in the property at the date of the application, he is not entitled to apply under this rule, unless the sale to the subsequent purchaser was by an unregistered document in which case the judgment-debtor would continue to be the owner of the property and could as such owner apply under this rule (y). On the other hand, it has been held by the High Court of Bombay that the judgment-debtor is entitled to apply under this rule, but that the subsequent purchaser is not so entitled (z). The ground of the Bombay decision is that the sale to the auction purchaser being still unconfirmed, the judgment-debtor remains the owner of the property, and that he is therefore entitled to apply as a "person owning the property" within the meaning of this rule. As regards the ground of decision of the Allahabad High Court, the Bombay Court said that the object of the present rule was not only to preserve the property in the hands of the judgment-debtor, but also to save the judgment-debtor from monetary loss that might be occasioned to him if the property was sold at the auction-sale at an inadequate price. As regards the ground of decision of the Madras High Court, the Bombay Court observed that it was not necessary for the purposes of this rule that the judgment-debtor should own or have an interest in the property at the date of the application under this rule, and that it was sufficient if he owned the property or had an interest in it at the date of the Court-sale. The High Court of Patna has followed the Bombay decision (a). It is submitted that the view taken by the High Court of Bombay is the correct one.

The present rule is not confined to transferees from the judgment-debtor. The words of the rule are "any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale." Therefore a co-heir (b) or a co-sharer (c) may apply under this rule. A person who has obtained a mortgage of the property before the Court-sale may also apply under this rule. But a person who has merely agreed to purchase the property cannot apply under this rule for a mere agreement for sale of immoveable property does not of itself create any interest in the property (d). Similarly a person who is out of possession of the property, and is litigating to establish his right thereto, is not entitled to apply under this rule (e).

Deposit of five per cent.—This deposit must be made though the decree-holder may himself be the purchaser. The five per cent. is intended as a compensation to the purchaser for his trouble and disappointment for the loss of that which was, perhaps, a good bargain (f).

Mistake in calculating amount to be deposited.—No sale will be set aside under this rule unless the whole amount specified in sub-r. (1) is deposited by the applicant within thirty days from the date of sale. If the full amount is not deposited within the aforesaid period, though it may be owing to a mistake on the part of an officer of the Court in calculating the amount, the sale cannot be set aside under this rule unless the officer was charged by the Court to make the calculation O.21,r.89. and to inform the parties as to the amount to be deposited (g).

Less amount "received" by decree-holder.—The term "received" contemplates an actual receipt of the amount by the decree-holder. A mere payment into Court of the sale-proceeds does not constitute receipt within the meaning of this rule (h).

In determining what amount has been "received" by the decree-holder, the Court should not give credit to the judgment-debtor for any amount paid by a co-judgment-debtor who has not joined in the application under this rule (i).

"For payment to the decree-holder"—Rateable distribution.—The expression "decree holder" in cl. (b) of sub-sec. (1) refers to that person alone for satisfaction of whose decree the sale had been ordered. It does not include other decree-holders who would have a right to claim rateable distribution out of the sale proceeds under sec. 73. It is therefore enough if the judgment-debtor deposits such amount as is sufficient to satisfy the claim of the decree-holder at whose instance the property was sold. It is not necessary that the amount deposited by him should be sufficient to satisfy decrees held against him by other decree-holders also (j). Further, when a judgment-debtor deposits in Court a sum sufficient to satisfy the claim of the person for satisfaction of whose decree the property was ordered to be sold, the other decree-holders are not entitled to a rateable distribution thereof under s. 73 (k).

Sub-rule (2).—Where a person applies to set aside a sale under this rule, and subsequently applies under r. 90, he is not entitled to prosecute the application made by him under this rule (l). But an application, though purporting to be made under r. 90, may not really be one under that rule, but one under s. 47; the provisions to sub-r. (2) do not apply to such a case (m).

Court.—The word "Court" in this rule means the Civil Court, and not, in the case of decrees transferred to the Collector for execution, the Collector (n).

Sale of property by separate lots.—Where property is sold by separate lots in execution of a decree, it is not open to the judgment-debtor to apply under this rule to set aside the sale of some only of such lots. The application must be to set aside the sale of all the lots (o).

Necessary parties.—The auction-purchaser as well as the decree-holder are necessary parties to an application under this rule. See the proviso to r. 92, sub-r. (2).

Limitation.—The application under this rule must be made within 30 days from the date of sale [Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I., art. 166]. The Court has no power to extend the time under s. 148 (p). The words "date of sale" mean the date on which the property is put up for sale and knocked down to the highest bidder, and not the date on which the sale is confirmed [r. 92] (q). At the same time it is to be remembered that if for any reason the final bid remains unaccepted

O. 21. for some days by the sale officer, the period of 30 days does not begin to run until rr. 89, 90. such bid is accepted by him (r).

The words "may apply to have the sale set aside on his depositing in Court," etc., show that not only the application, but also the deposit, should be made within 30 days from the date of sale (s). At the same time it is to be noted that it is not enough to make the deposit within 30 days; the application to set aside the sale should also be made within 30 days from the date of sale (t).

Appeal.—The law as regards appeals from an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale passed on an application under the present rule is quite different from what it was under the Code of 1882. Such an order under the Code of 1882 [s. 310 A] was not appealable as an order, for it was not included in the list of appealable orders given in s. 388 of that Code [now O. 43, r. 1]. But the order being one made in proceedings in execution (u), it was appealable as a decree, if the question as to whether the sale should be set aside or not was one between "the parties to the suit or their representatives" within the meaning of s. 244 [now s. 47] (v), and in such a case a second appeal also lay from the order passed in first appeal. And it was held that if the question was one between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder, in other words, between the parties to the suit, it did not cease to be such merely because the auction-purchaser (not a party to the suit) was interested in the result (w). But where the question was one between a party to the suit on the one hand and the auction-purchaser on the other, there was a conflict of opinion as to whether an appeal lay from the order (x). In those cases, however, in which it was held that no appeal lay from the order, it was held that the party aggrieved might apply to the High Court for a revision of the order (y). Under the present Code, however, an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale [r. 92], passed on an application under this rule [r. 89], is appealable as an order, for it is included in the list of appealable orders given in O. 43, r. 1 [see cl. (j)]. The result is that under the present Code only one appeal lies from such an order (z) [see s. 104, sub-s. (1), cl. (i), and sub-s. (2)]. But though only one appeal is allowed under this Code, the appeal lies in every case, and is not limited to cases in which the question was between the parties to the suit or their representatives. An auction-purchaser, therefore, can also appeal from the order.

Dismissal of application for default.—Where an application under this rule is dismissed for default of appearance, and the Court refuses to restore it to the file, no appeal lies from the order refusing to restore the application (a).

may apply to the Court to set aside the sale on the ground of O. 21, r. 90. a material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting it :

Provided that no sale shall be set aside on the ground of irregularity or fraud unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied that the applicant has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity or fraud.

Alterations in the rule :—

1. The words, "or any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution" have been added to give effect to decisions under the old section. See notes below, "Who may apply under this rule."
2. The words, "any person whose interests are affected by the sale," have been substituted for the words "any person whose immoveable property has been sold under this chapter." The expression now substituted is what the Courts held in several cases was the meaning of the expression "any person whose immoveable property has been sold." See notes below "Who may apply under this rule."
3. The words "or fraud" have been added after the word "irregularity." The addition of these words affects the right of appeal as will be seen from the notes below under the head "Fraud in publishing or conducting sale."
4. The words, "unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied," have been substituted for the words "unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court." This alteration has been made with a view to set at rest the doubts raised under the old section as to the evidence upon which the Court could act. See notes below, "Unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied," etc.

Who may apply under this rule.—The only persons that may apply under this rule are—

- (1) the decree-holder ;
- (2) any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets under s. 73 ;
- (3) any person whose interests are affected by the sale—an expression obviously of a wider import than the expression "a person holding an interest in the property sold" used in r. 89 above (b).

The words, "any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets" did not occur in the old section, but it was held that the expression "decree-holder" included such person (c).

The expression "any person whose interests are affected by the sale," has been substituted for the expression "any person whose immoveable property has been sold," which occurred in the old section. The latter expression was construed as meaning "any person whose interests are affected by the sale" in the Full Bench case of Ammunnissa Begum v. Ashruff Ali (d), and this interpretation has now been substituted for

O. 21. r. 90. the original expression, that expression being rather obscure. Where an application, therefore, is made by a person other than a decree-holder or one entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets, that person must be one whose interests are affected by the sale. It cannot be said of a person that his interests are affected by a sale of property, unless his title to the property or any part thereof is affected by the sale (e). A person who claims to be a purchaser of immoveable property from the judgment-debtor prior to attachment cannot apply under this rule, for the sale being prior to the attachment, his interest cannot be legally affected by the sale, though such person can apply under the preceding rule (f). But a person who claims to be the purchaser of a tenure prior to attachment from the judgment-debtor whose interest in the tenure has been sold in execution of a decree for its own arrears of rent, is entitled to apply under this rule, for his interests are certainly affected by the sale (g). Similarly, where immoveable property has been sold in execution of a decree against the ostensible owner as his property, a person claiming to be the beneficial owner is entitled to apply under this rule (h), unless his right to the property is in dispute and a suit by him for a declaration of his right is still pending at the date of the application (i). But a co-sharer cannot apply under this rule, for his share does not pass under the sale (j). A purchaser at a Court sale, who seeks to set aside the sale on the ground that he was induced by fraud to pay a larger price for the property, is not entitled to apply under this rule (k), for though he may sustain injury by reason of the fraud, it cannot be said that his title to the property is affected by the sale. An attachment before judgment does not create any interest in the property attached; therefore a person who has obtained an attachment before judgment is not entitled to apply under this rule (l). It is expressly provided by this rule that a person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets under s. 73 is entitled to apply under this rule; a person, therefore, who is not entitled to a rateable distribution, as where the application for execution is not made until after the receipt of assets by the Court, cannot come in under this rule as a "person whose interest is affected by the sale" (m). A reversioner entitled to succeed on the death of a Hindu widow is entitled to apply under this rule as a person whose interests are affected by the sale (n).

Scope of the rule.—A sale held in execution of a decree can be set aside under this rule only if the following conditions concur :—

1. There must be a material irregularity or fraud.
2. The material irregularity or fraud must be in publishing or conducting the sale.
3. The applicant must have sustained substantial injury.
4. Such injury must have been caused by reason of the material irregularity or fraud.

Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale.—The following are instances of material irregularity in publishing or conducting a sale in execution:—

and further, the proclamation did not specify the encumbrances to which the property was liable, but stated merely the annual profit income and the value of the property, and the property was sold at a gross undervaluation, their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the above irregularities were all material irregularities, and they accordingly set aside the sale (a).

It is to be noted in this connection that if the act or omission complained of amounts to a material irregularity, the sale is not void, but voidable. Being voidable, it is liable to be set aside under this rule on the application of any of the persons mentioned in the rule. But it is important to note that it will not be set aside unless it is proved that substantial injury has resulted from the irregularity: see the proviso to the rule. But where the act or omission complained of amounts to an illegality, it renders the sale void ab initio, and no proof of injury is required. In cases (3), (5), (8) and (9) above, it was contended that the omission complained of amounted to an illegality, and that the sale was therefore void ab initio, and that it should therefore be declared void without proof of substantial injury. But it was held that the omission amounted to a material irregularity only, and that the sale was not void but voidable only, and it could not therefore be set aside unless substantial injury was proved. For instances of sales void ab initio, see notes to s. 65, "Sale when void and when voidable," p. 181. See also notes to s. 47, p. 123, case (4), and notes to O. 21, r. 22 "Consequences of omission to give notice," p. 572, and "Notice to wrong person," p. 572.

"Publishing or conducting the sale".—This rule applies only where an irregularity has been committed in publishing or conducting the sale. Hence this rule does not apply, if the sale is sought to be set aside on the ground that the decree in execution of which the property was sold was obtained without service of summons on the judgment-debtor (b), or that it was obtained by fraud (c), or that the Court that sold the property had no jurisdiction to sell the same (d), or that execution of the decree was time-barred (e), or that the property sold in execution was not saleable property within the meaning of s. 60 (f). None of these cases involves any "irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale." In all these cases the remedy of the party seeking to set aside the sale is by a regular suit.

Irregularity in attaching property.—The question whether an irregularity in attaching the property, as where the attachment is not properly notified, is an irregularity in "conducting the sale" within the meaning of this rule, was left open by the Judicial Committee in the undermentioned case (g). In a recent case, the High Court of Allahabad held that the omission to attach immoveable property prior to sale amounts to a material irregularity in "conducting the sale." "An attachment," it was said, "is a step towards the sale of the judgment-debtor's property" (h). On the other hand, in a case decided under the Code of 1859, the High Court of Bengal expressed the opinion that an attachment is not an essential preliminary in sales in execution of decrees: it is merely a measure for the protection of the decree-holder and the purchaser of the property, and the absence of attachment is not, therefore, an objection which the judgment-debtor is competent to raise (i). If it be true, as observed by Mahmood, J., that the expression "conducting the sale" does not refer to anything done antecedent to the order of sale (j), it is difficult to see how the omission to attach can be said to be an irregularity either in publishing or in conducting the sale. It has been recently held by the High Court of Bombay that a sale without an attachment is void ab initio (k).

Fraud in publishing or conducting sale.—The words "or fraud" are new. The present rule requires that an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale must be made under this rule. In the absence of these words in the corresponding s. 311 of the Code of 1882, it was held that an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud could only be made under s. 244 [now s. 47]. Had it not been for the newly added words "or fraud" in this rule, such applications would have to be made under s. 47 of this Code. The result would then have been, as under the Code of 1882, that a second appeal would lie from an order made on such applications, for an order made under s. 47 has the force of a decree (s. 2), and every decree is open to second appeal, subject, of course, to the provisions of ss. 100-102 (l). The effect of adding the words "or fraud" into the present rule is to transfer applications setting up fraud in publishing or conducting the sale from s. 47 to the present rule. The result is that no second appeal will now lie from an order made on such applications, whether the order be one setting aside the sale or refusing to set aside the sale, for the order is no longer one under s. 47, but one under r. 92, and only one appeal lies from an order made under r. 92 (m) [see O. 43, r. 1, cl. (j), and s. 104, sub-s. (2)]. It will thus be seen that the object of the Legislature in requiring applications to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale to be made under the present rule, instead of under s. 47, is to exclude the right of second appeal from orders made on such applications with a view to bring proceedings on such applications to a speedy termination. But though only one appeal is allowed, an appeal now lies in every case from an order made under this rule and r. 92, even at the instance of an auction-purchaser though he may not be a party to the suit in which the sale was held. See notes to s. 47, "Execution-purchaser," ill. (a), p. 132.

It may here be observed that in a large majority of reported cases in which applications were made to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale, the applicant was the judgment-debtor, and the fraud alleged was that the decree-holder had fraudulently kept him in the dark by omitting to serve him with the writ of attachment (r. 54), and that no copy of the proclamation of sale was affixed on the property so as to inform him of the execution proceedings. In all these cases it was further alleged that the fraud first became known to the judgment-debtor when the auction-purchaser instituted proceedings to recover possession of the property. In some of these cases, again, the auction-purchaser was charged with collusion with the decree-holder in perpetrating the fraud upon the judgment-debtor (n). O. 21, r. 90. a material bearing on the question now under consideration (p). In that case their Lordships said that where a sale is impeached on the ground of fraud, a difference must be made between an innocent purchaser and one tainted by the fraud which has brought about the execution sale. "The question is, in the former case, which of two innocent parties shall suffer: in the latter, whether he who has wronged the other party shall be allowed to enjoy the fruits of his wrong-doing. A Court exercising equitable jurisdiction may withhold its hand in the one case, and yet set aside the sale with or without terms in the other."

A charge against a decree-holder that he and those who acted in concert with him have acted in such a manner as to prevent the best price from being obtained does not of itself amount to a charge of fraud within the meaning of this rule. A obtains a decree against B, and obtains leave to bid at the auction sale. A then enters into an agreement with a third person that if that person would not bid at the sale, A would sell the property to him if A should become the purchaser. The property is put up for sale and purchased by A. The agreement does not constitute a fraud within the meaning of this rule, though it may have discouraged competition at the auction (q). In a recent case Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C.J., said: "The word 'fraud' is very loosely used in this class of cases [that is, cases under r. 90]: any irregularity is taken to be fraud with the consequences that such a finding involves. But a finding of fraud should be reserved for that which is dishonest and morally wrong: and it is not sufficient to come to a vague finding of fraud: actual fraud must be established" (r). The Patna High Court has recently held that where after the publication of the sale proclamation, the decree-holder agrees with the judgment-debtor not to hold the sale if payment was made within a specified time, and he then proceeds to sell the property in contravention of the agreement, it amounts to fraud in the matter of the conduct of the sale within the meaning of this rule (s).

Substantial injury.—Material irregularity or fraud standing by itself is no ground for setting aside a sale. There must be substantial injury occasioned by the irregularity or fraud (t). The substantial injury alleged by the applicant must be proved: it cannot be assumed from the mere fact that there was a material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale. The mere fact that there was a material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale, will not justify the Court in assuming that substantial injury has thereby been caused. Hence although an applicant under this rule may prove material irregularity, such as non-specification of Government revenue in the proclamation of sale (u), or inadequate description of the property sold (v), or the holding of the sale before the expiry of the period prescribed by r. 68 of this order (w), the sale will not be set aside, unless it is proved that had it not been for the irregularity the property would have realized a substantially larger price than what it did at the sale. The same rule applies where the sale is impeached on the ground of fraud.

"Unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied that the applicant has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity or fraud"—These words form part of the proviso to the rule. The language of the proviso to this rule differs from the language of the proviso to the corresponding O. 21, r. 90. section 311 of the Code of 1882, which ran as follows :—

“ But no sale shall be set aside on the ground of irregularity unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court that he has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity.”

The words “ unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied ” have been substituted for the words “ unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court.” We proceed to note the object and effect of the alteration in the language of the proviso.

Suppose that an applicant under this rule proves “ material irregularity ” or “ fraud.” Suppose, further, that he proves gross inadequacy of price realised at the sale, in other words, he proves “ substantial injury.” Is this sufficient to entitle him to succeed under this rule ? The answer is that it is not : he must further prove that the inadequacy of the sale price has been caused “ by reason of ” the material irregularity or fraud. Now there are two possible modes in which this may be proved, namely :—

- (a) by direct evidence, that is, by evidence connecting the material irregularity or fraud with the inadequacy of price as cause and effect : or
- (b) by circumstantial evidence, that is, by evidence of circumstances which will warrant the necessary or at least reasonable inference that the inadequacy of price was the result of the irregularity or fraud complained of.

In Tasadduk v. Ahmad (x), where a sale was sought to be set aside under the corresponding s. 311 of the Code of 1882 on the ground that it was held before the expiration of 30 days from the date of the proclamation [r. 68], their Lordships of the Privy Council, after referring to that section, said :—

“ In the application of that section [that is, s. 311] it was incumbent on the [applicants] to have proved that they sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity. They gave no such evidence, and it would be extremely improbable that injury could have happened from the non-compliance with the strict letter of s. 290 [now r. 68]. Their Lordships cannot accept the judgment of the Judicial Commissioner that loss is to be inferred from the mere fact that a sale was held without full compliance with the provisions of s. 290 [now r. 68]. The section [that is, s. 311] clearly contemplates direct evidence on the subject.”

Relying on the above passage, it was held by the High Court of Allahabad that to succeed under that section the applicant must prove a grossly inadequate sale-price resulting from a material irregularity, and that the co-existence of an irregularity and an inadequacy however gross in the sale-price was not sufficient in the absence of direct evidence to establish a casual connection between the irregularity and the inadequacy. In other words, the applicant must connect the irregularity with the inadequacy of price as cause and effect by means of direct evidence (y). On the other hand, it was held by the High Courts of Madras (z) and Calcutta (a) that the fact that the inadequacy of price fetched at the sale was the result of the irregularity complained of might be established either by direct evidence, or it might be inferred when such inference was reasonable from the nature of the irregularity and the extent of the inadequacy of price. As regards the word “ direct evidence ” in the passage cited above, it was observed by the High

- O. 21, r. 90. Court of Calcutta that what their Lordships intended to say by using those words was that there must be evidence showing that substantial injury was the necessary result of the irregularity complained of (b).

The distinction between the Allahabad decisions on the one hand and the Madras and Calcutta decisions on the other, may be explained by an illustration. In execution of a decree obtained by A against B, B's one-fourth share in certain property is sold for Rs. 200. B seeks to set aside the sale alleging that the property was sold at an adjourned sale, that no hour was fixed for the sale as required by r. 69, that consequently there were only three bidders at the sale, and that owing to that circumstance the property fetched the grossly inadequate price of Rs. 200. It is proved that the hour to which the sale was adjourned was not fixed; in other words, material irregularity is proved. Substantial injury is also proved by evidence of the sale of a share smaller than one-fourth of the same property for Rs. 4,000. The fact that there were only three bidders is also proved. In such a case, the High Courts of Madras and Calcutta would, under the old section, set aside the sale on the ground that the paucity of bidders could reasonably be ascribed to the non-specification of the hour, and the low price could reasonably be inferred from the fact of the paucity of bidders (c). But the High Court of Allahabad would not set aside the sale on a mere inference such as the above. It would require direct evidence to show that the paucity of bidders was due to the non-specification of the hour, and that the inadequacy of price was due to paucity of bidders.

The words "unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied" have been substituted in the proviso to give effect to the Madras and Calcutta decisions. What is necessary under the proviso is that the Court should be satisfied that the applicant has sustained substantial injury by reason of the irregularity or fraud complained of, and the Court should be satisfied upon the facts proved before it. It is no longer necessary to connect the irregularity (or fraud) with the inadequacy of price as cause and effect by means of direct evidence.

Necessary parties.—The decree-holder is a necessary party to an application under this rule (d). But beneficial owner is not, and a sale can be set aside although his benamidar only is a party (e). Under the Code of 1882 there was a conflict of opinion as to whether an auction purchaser was a necessary party to an application under the corresponding s. 311 (f). Under the present Code he is clearly a necessary party; see the proviso to r. 92, sub-r. (2).

Waiver and estoppel.—If the judgment-debtor lies by, and knowing of an irregularity or fraud allows the sale to proceed without objection, he will be estopped from impeaching the sale on the ground of irregularity or fraud though substantial injury has been caused. "It would be very difficult indeed to conduct proceedings in execution of decree by attachment and sale of property, if the judgment-debtors could lie by and afterwards take advantage of any misdescription of the property attached and about to be sold, which they knew well, but of which the execution-creditor or decree-holder might be perfectly ignorant, that they should take no notice of that, allow the sale to proceed, and then come forward and say the whole proceedings were vitiated" (g); But the fact that a judgment-debtor, who applies under this rule to set aside a sale on the ground of irregularity, had applied before for an adjournment, and did not in that application make any mention of the irregularity, does not create an estoppel. There could be no occasion for making mention of the irregularity in an application for adjournment (h).

Where no application is made under this rule.—It is provided by r. 92 below that if no application is made to set aside a sale under the present rule, an order will be made confirming the sale, and once such an order is made, no suit will lie to set aside the order (i).

Objections not taken in application.—The Court should not consider objections not expressly taken in the application (ii).

Limitation.—An application under this rule must be made within 30 days from the date of sale [Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 166]. But where the irregularity affecting the sale has by the fraud of the decree-holder or other parties to the sale been kept concealed from the judgment-debtor, he is entitled to apply under this rule, whether the sale has been confirmed or not, and the time for making the application is to be computed from the date when the fraud first became known to him (j). A suit to set aside a sale must be instituted within one year from the date of the confirmation of the sale [ib., art. 12, cl. (a)].

The only point of distinction as regards procedure and limitation between the old law and the new law is this, that while under the Code of 1882 the application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting a sale was to be made under s. 244 [now s. 47], and the period of limitation for the application was 3 years from the date of the sale (k), such application must now be made under the present rule, and the period of limitation is 30 days from the date of the sale. In other respects the law is not altered. Under the old law also, if the fraud did not become known to the applicant until after the expiration of 3 years from the date of the sale, he could apply after that period, provided the application was made within three years from the date the fraud first became known to him (l). And where the application to set aside a sale alleged fraud in publishing or conducting the sale, it could be made even after confirmation of the sale. The right to proceed by an application was not gone merely because the sale was confirmed: a regular suit was not necessary, nay, a regular suit, it was held, was barred by the provisions of s. 244 (m), as, it is conceived, it would now be barred by the provisions of this rule read with s. 47.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule and rule 92 setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (j)]. But no second appeal lies from the order of the first appellate Court: see s. 104, sub-sec. (2), and notes above under the head "Fraud in publishing or conducting sale." Nor does an appeal lie from the order of the first appellate Court under the Letters Patent (n).

91. [S. 313.] The purchaser at any such sale in execution of a decree may apply to the Court to set aside the sale, on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold.

Application by purchaser to set aside sale on ground of judgment-debtor having no saleable interest.

Scope of the rule.—This rule enables the Court to relieve a purchaser on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property. It does not apply where a sale is sought to be set aside by an auction-purchaser on the ground that he had been induced by misrepresentation or concealment to buy the property for more than its real value (p). The remedy of the purchaser in such a case is by a regular suit. As to return of purchase-money when a sale is set aside on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest, see r. 93 below.

Saleable interest.—This rule applies only where a judgment-debtor has no saleable interest at all. Hence the rule does not apply if the judgment-debtor has even a partial interest in the property sold (q), however small that interest may be. In other words, a purchaser is not entitled to have a sale set aside under this rule on the ground that the judgment-debtor had a saleable interest in a very small portion of the property, and had no saleable interest in a major portion of the property (r).

For the purposes of this rule, a mortgagor has a saleable interest in the mortgaged property, even though a decree has been obtained by the mortgagee for the enforcement of the mortgage (s), and although the amount due under the mortgage may exceed the value of the property (t).

Limitations.—The application under this rule must be made within 30 days from the date of sale: Limitation Act, 1908, sch I, art. 166.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale made under this rule and rule 92 [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (j)].

Withdrawal of purchase-money by auction-purchaser from Court.—See notes to s 151, case (bb).

Provided that no order shall be made unless notice of the application has been given to all persons affected thereby.

(3) No suit to set aside an order made under this rule shall be brought by any person against whom such order is made.

Alterations in the rule :—

1. The corresponding s. 312 of the Code of 1882 applied only to applications referred to in r. 90. The present rule applies also to applications referred to in rr. 89 and 91 [Code of 1882, ss. 310A and 313].
2. In sub-rule (3), the words " on the ground of such irregularity," which occurred in the old section after the words " no suit to set aside," have been omitted. See notes below, " No suit will lie to set aside an order made under this rule."

No suit will lie to set aside an order made under this rule.—

No suit will lie to set aside an order made under this rule by any person against whom such order is made. The party against whom the order is made has a remedy by way of appeal under O. 43, r. 1, cl. (j). Now an order under this rule may be—

- (1) either an order confirming the sale, or
- (2) an order setting aside the sale.

Order confirming sale.—An order confirming the sale may be made—

- (i) either where no application is made at all to set aside the sale, or
- (ii) where an application is made and disallowed.

No suit will lie in either case to set aside an order confirming the sale (u).

Order setting aside sale.—The language of sub-rule (3) makes it quite clear that no suit will lie to set aside an order setting aside the sale. Under the old section it was held by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court that such a suit would lie. The decision proceeded on the words, " on the ground of such irregularity," which occurred in the old section after the words " no suit to set aside." Those words have now been omitted. The Allahabad decision is therefore no longer law (v).

"Court".—The word " Court " means the Civil Court, and not, in the case of decrees transferred to the Collector for execution, the Collector (w).

Plea of bar of limitation after confirmation.—No application can be entertained after confirmation of a sale to set aside a sale on the sole ground that the application for attachment and sale was barred by limitation (x).

O. 21, rr. 92, 93. Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (j)]. But no second appeal lies from the order passed on first appeal (y) [see s. 104 (2)].

Appeal to the Privy Council.—An appeal lies to His Majesty in Council from an order passed under this rule and r. 90 (z).

93. [S. 315.] Where a sale of immoveable property is set aside under rule 92, the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for repayment of his purchase-money, with or without interest as the Court may direct, against any person to whom it has been paid.

Return of purchase-money in certain cases.

Section 315 of the Code of 1882.—The corresponding s. 315 of the Code of 1882 ran as follows :—

“When a sale of immoveable property is set aside under s. 310 A [O. 21, r. 89], 312 or 313 [O. 21, r. 91], or when it is found that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property which purported to be new, and the purchaser is for that reason deprived of it, the purchaser shall be entitled to receive back his purchase-money (with or without interest as the Court may direct) from any person to whom the purchase-money has been paid.

The repayment of the said purchase-money and of the interest (if any) allowed by the Court may be enforced against such person under the rules provided for by this Code for the execution of a decree for money.”

The second and fourth paragraphs of s. 315 have been omitted in the present sections. Further, the words “shall be entitled to an order for repayment” have been substituted for the words “shall be entitled to receive back” which occurred in the third paragraph.

Repayment where no saleable interest.—An auction-purchaser may under r. 91 apply to set aside the sale on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold. If the sale is set aside, he may apply under this rule for an order for repayment of his purchase-money. But no sale can be set aside under r. 91 nor can any repayment be ordered under this rule if it is found that the judgment-debtor had some saleable interest in the property. The reason is that in the case of a sale under a decree of the Court there is no warranty of title either by the decree-holder or by the Court as there is in the case of private sales. The purchaser must be taken to pay for the property with all risks and all defects in the judgment-debtor's title. Such being the case, the purchaser would not be entitled to any refund, not even if the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest at all, but for the express provisions of rr. 91 and 93. Under those rules he is entitled to a refund only if the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest at all (a).

Under s. 315 of the Code of 1882 it was held, having regard to the express provisions of the second paragraph of that section and the words “may be enforced” which occurred in the last paragraph of that section, that an auction-purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree could maintain a suit against a decree-holder for recovery of his purchase-money, if it turned out that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold, and that he was not limited to the special procedure in the execution-department mentioned in that section (b). It was also held that whether he proceeded by an application for execution under that section or by a regular suit, he was not entitled to receive back his purchase-money unless the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest at all; if the judgment-debtor had some saleable interest in the property, however small, he could not by suit, any more than by application, obtain a refund of the purchase-money in proportion to the extent to which the judgment-debtor had no interest (c). It was further held, having regard to the words "and the purchaser is for that reason deprived of it" which occurred in the second paragraph of s. 315, that the cause of action did not arise and the period of limitation for a suit under that section did not commence until the purchaser was deprived of the property sold to him (d). In one case the Allahabad High Court held that the auction-purchaser may proceed even after rateable distribution against those among whom the purchase-money was distributed (e).

The leading case in which it was laid down that an auction-purchaser may proceed by a regular suit was a Full Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court (f). It was followed by the same Court in later cases, but with considerable hesitation. It was said in those cases that an auction-purchaser had no right, outside the provisions of the Code, to recover back the purchase-money where the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold, and that the right being the creation of the Code the remedy ought also to be limited to the remedy provided by the Code (g).

Under the present rule it is quite clear that the purchase-money cannot be got back unless the sale is set aside (h). It is also clear that the application to set aside the sale under r. 91 must be made within 30 days from the date of sale [Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 166]. But the question remains whether, having regard to the omission of the second and fourth paragraphs of s. 315 in this rule and the substitution of the words "shall be entitled to an order for repayment" for the words "shall be entitled to receive back" which occurred in the third paragraph of that section, an auction-purchaser is entitled, after the sale is set aside, to bring a suit for recovery of the purchase-money or whether he is limited to the procedure prescribed by this rule, namely, to apply for an order from the executing Court, and then to execute it under s. 36 of the present Code. In Rustomji v. Vinayak (i), the High Court of Bombay held that the auction-purchaser may proceed by suit. The ground of the decision was that there was under the Code an implied warranty of some saleable interest in a sale held by the Court, that the decree-holder was therefore liable to refund the purchase-money if the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold, and that the relations therefore of the parties,

O. 21, rr. 93, 94. namely, the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser, may be treated as relations in the nature of a contract so as to entitle the auction-purchaser to recover the purchase-money by suit on the ground of misrepresentation, however innocent, as to the interest of the judgment-debtor in the property sold. The alterations made in the present rule were not noticed. Nor was the sale in that case set aside before the suit was brought. It is submitted, with respect, that no such warranty as is assumed by the Bombay High Court can be implied from the provisions of this rule (r. 93). In two cases, the Madras High Court expressed the opinion that a suit does not lie under the present Code, and that the auction-purchaser can only proceed by an application under this rule (j). A similar view has also been expressed by the Allahabad High Court (k).

If the correct view be that an auction-purchaser is not entitled to a refund of the purchase-money unless the sale is set aside under rr. 91 and 92 (l), it follows that he is not entitled to a refund at all after the sale is confirmed under r. 92. This may happen when the auction-purchaser does not become aware of any adverse claim within 30 days from the date of sale, [being the period allowed for an application to set aside a sale under r. 91] and he is subsequently deprived of the property by a person declared entitled to it. This may work great hardship on an auction-purchaser. But the answer to that is that prior to the Code of 1877 an auction-purchaser was not entitled to a refund at all of the purchase-money if the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold, and the right to such refund was first created by s. 315 of that Code. The right being created by the Code, it can only be exercised within the limits allowed by the Code (m).

Repayment where sale set aside on ground of material irregularity.—It has been held by the High Court of Madras that when a sale is set aside on the ground of material irregularity under rr. 90 and 92, the auction-purchaser may bring a suit for a refund of the purchase-money. Such a right existed independently of the Code, and the mere use of the expression “order” in this rule did not, it was said, take away that right (n).

Limitation.—The period of limitation for an application under this rule is three years from the accrual of the right under art. 181 of the Limitation Act, 1908 (o). The period of limitation for a regular suit to recover back the purchase-money is six years from the accrual of the right under art. 120 of the said Act (p).

“Be entitled to an order.”—Where an order is made under this rule, it may be executed in the manner prescribed for the execution of decrees. See s. 36 above.

94. [s. 316.] Where a sale of immoveable property has become absolute, the Court shall grant a certificate specifying the property sold and the name of the person who at the time of sale is declared to be the purchaser. Such certificate shall bear date the day on which the sale became absolute.

Old section.—This rule corresponds with the first part of s. 316 of the Code of 1882. The second part of that section, relating to the vesting of title, has been Purchaser's title.—See s. 65 and notes thereto.

The Court shall grant a certificate.—The provisions of this rule are mandatory (q).

Certificate of sale.—A sale certificate does not transfer the title. It is evidence of the transfer (r).

Certificate to legal representative.—Where the purchaser is dead, the certificate may be granted to his legal representative (s). See s. 146 above.

What passes at a Court-sale.—As regards private sales, there is in the absence of a contract to the contrary, an implied covenant for title by the vendor as provided by the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 55, sub-s. (2). But as regards sales under a decree of the Court, there is no warranty of title either by the decree-holder or by the Court. Rule 13 of this Order shows that the decree-holder, when applying for execution, has only to specify the judgment-debtor's share or interest in the property "to the best of his belief," and "so far as he has been able to ascertain the same." Rule 66 shows that the proclamation only professes to specify the particulars prescribed by that rule including the property to be sold and the judgment-debtor's interest therein "as fairly and accurately as possible." Hence what passes to a purchaser at a Court-sale is the "right, title and interest" of the judgment-debtor, whatever that interest may be. In other words, a purchaser at a Court-sale buys the property with all risks and all defects in the judgment-debtor's title, except where it is found that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest at all (t). In the latter case, the purchaser may apply to have the sale set aside under r. 91 of this Order and he may then apply under r. 93 for a return of the purchase-money. If the purchase-money has been distributed amongst the creditors of the judgment-debtor under s. 73, he may follow the money in their hands (u). But,—and this is an important consequence of the purchaser buying only the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor,—the sale will not be set aside, if the judgment-debtor has even a partial interest in the property, nor will the purchaser be entitled to a refund of the purchase-money to the extent to which the judgment-debtor had no interest, unless the case be one of fraud (v). On the same principles a purchaser in execution of a money decree is bound by the estoppel which binds the judgment-debtor whose interest he has purchased (w).

It has been stated above that what passes to a purchaser at a Court-sale in execution of a money decree is the "right, title and interest" of the judgment-debtor in the property sold. To determine the nature and extent of the judgment-debtor's right, title and interest in the property sold, the test is as stated by Lord Watson in the course

O. 21, r. 94. of the argument in Pettachi Chettiar v. Chinnatambiar (x), what did the Court intend to sell, and what did the purchaser understand that he bought? These are questions of fact, or rather of mixed law and fact, and must be determined according to the evidence in the particular case (y). This test was applied in Balvant v. Hirachand (z), cited in the next following paragraph, and in Abdul Aziz v. Appayasami (a) cited in the paragraph after the next.

In this connection it may be noted that on a sale of mortgaged property in execution of a mortgage-decree obtained by the mortgagee against the mortgagor, the interest of both the mortgagor and the mortgagee passes to the purchaser (b). And where in execution of a simple money decree an undivided share in immoveable property, part of which is subject to mortgages, is sold, the presumption is, in the absence of specific indications to the contrary, that the share sold was, as far as might be, the share which was not encumbered (c).

Variance between proclamation of sale and sale-certificate.—It is provided by O. 21, r. 66, that where property is ordered to be sold in execution of a decree, the proclamation of sale should “specify as fairly and accurately as possible the property to be sold.” By the present rule it is provided that where property is sold, and the sale becomes absolute, the Court shall grant a certificate “specifying the property sold.” It sometimes happens that the property as described in the certificate of sale is different from that described in the proclamation of sale. In such a case the description of the property in the proclamation of sale is conclusive as to what was the subject-matter of the sale. As stated by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Thakur Barnha v. Jiban Ram (d), “that which is sold in a judicial sale of this kind can be nothing but the property attached, and that property is conclusively described in and by the schedule to which the attachment refers,” that is, the schedule of the attached property in the proclamation of sale. Thus where a judgment-debtor owned a mahal of which a 10 annas share was mortgaged, and the proclamation of sale stated that what was to be sold was a 6 annas share in the mahal included in the mortgage, but the purchaser obtained a certificate of sale in which the property described was a 6 annas share in the mahal not included in the mortgage, it was held that the sale certificate should be set aside. The Court has no power to grant a certificate in which the property described is different from that specified in the proclamation of sale (e). Similarly where the proclamation of sale stated that the whole interest of five brothers in a mortgaged property was to be sold, and by a mistake on the part of the officer in charge of the sale, the certificate of sale omitted to mention the names of four of them, it was held that what was sold to the purchaser was the property as described in the proclamation of sale, and not the property as erroneously described in the sale-certificate (f). In the course of the judgment it was said: “The real question in such case, under the present Code of Civil Procedure, seems therefore to be what was the sale, i.e., what was bargained and paid for, and that must depend not on erroneous statements of what was offered for sale, but on what was actually offered for sale, and bid for. What [is actually] offered for sale [is] determined by the order of the Court and the proclamation.”

Effect of new interpretation of law on sale. A purchased at a Court-sale the "right, title and interest" of B in an impartible zamindari. By the law as then interpreted, the holder of such a zamindari was only entitled to a life-interest in the zamindari. [A must therefore be deemed to have purchased only the life-interest of B]. Subsequently this interpretation of the law was reversed by the Judicial Committee which decided that the holder of an impartible zamindari is entitled to an absolute interest in it, and that such interest is alienable. The new interpretation does not entitle A to claim that what he purchased at the sale was the absolute interest of B (g). O. 21,
rr. 94, 95.

Amendment of sale-certificate.—A purchaser at a Court-sale may apply to the Court for amendment of the sale certificate where the description of the property in the certificate differs from that in the proclamation. The Court may allow or refuse the amendment, but no appeal lies from the order in either case. Such an order is not appealable under s. 104. Nor is it appealable as a decree under ss. 47 and 96, for the question cannot be regarded as one relating to the "execution, discharge or satisfaction" of the decree, the decree being fully executed. The only question in such a case is whether the certificate given to the auction-purchaser gives a right description of the property sold (h).

Limitation.—The provisions of the Limitation Act do not apply to applications for a sale-certificate. The reason is that it is the duty of the Court on the sale becoming absolute to issue a sale-certificate and there is no duty imposed on the purchaser to apply for such a certificate. The action of the Court in granting the certificate is ministerial and not judicial. The Limitation Act does not apply to applications to the Court to do what it has no discretion to refuse, nor to applications for exercise of functions of a ministerial character. Hence if the Court fails to issue a sale-certificate, and the purchaser has thereupon to apply to the Court for a grant of the certificate, the application may be made at any time (i).

Effect of sale-certificate on irregularities.—All irregularities, though material, are cured by the certificate of sale (j).

95. [S. 318.] Where the immoveable property sold is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor or of some person on his behalf or of some person claiming under a title created by the judgment-debtor subsequently to the attachment of such property and a certificate in respect thereof has been granted under rule 94, the Court shall, on the application of the purchaser, order delivery to be made by putting such purchaser or any person whom he may appoint to receive delivery on his behalf in possession of the property, and, if need be, by removing any person who refuses to vacate the same.

O. 21, rr. 95-97. Delivery of possession to purchaser.—The possession contemplated by this rule is khas or actual possession. See notes to r. 35 of this Order. For the form of the order for delivery, see App. E, form No. 39.

Separate suit for delivery of possession.—See notes to s. 47, p. 124, case (5).

Appeal.—See notes to s. 47, p. 124, case (5).

Purchaser of undivided share.—A purchaser of an undivided share cannot apply under this rule. He must bring a regular suit for partition and for delivery of what may be allotted as the share of the undivided member (k).

Limitation.—The period of limitation for an application for delivery of possession is three years from the date when the sale becomes absolute [Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 181]. The period of limitation for a suit for delivery of possession is twelve years from the date when the sale becomes absolute [ib., art. 138]. The mere fact that an application by a purchaser for delivery of possession under this rule is rejected as made beyond the prescribed time is no bar to a suit for possession (l).

96. [s. 319.] Where the property sold is in the occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same and a certificate in respect thereof has been granted under rule 94, the Court shall, on the application of the purchaser, order delivery to be made by affixing a copy of the certificate of sale in some conspicuous place on the property, and proclaiming to the occupant by beat of drum or other customary mode, at some convenient place, that the interest of the judgment-debtor has been transferred to the purchaser.

Delivery of possession to purchaser.—The possession contemplated by this rule is symbolical possession. See notes to r. 35 of this Order.

Resistance to delivery of possession to decree-holder or purchaser.

97. [Ss. 328-334.] (1) Where the holder of a decree for the possession of immoveable property or the purchaser of any such property sold in execution of a decree is resisted or obstructed by any person in obtaining possession of the property, he may make an application to the Court complaining of such resistance or obstruction.

Regular suit.—The decree-holder may either resort to the summary remedy provided by this rule or he may bring a regular suit. Failure on the part of the decree-holder to avail himself of the remedy under this rule does not deprive him of the right of bringing a regular suit against the party obstructing execution of the decree (m). O. 21,
rr. 97, 98.

Limitation.—The period of limitation for an application complaining of resistance or obstruction to delivery of possession of immoveable property decreed or sold in execution of a decree is 30 days from the date of the resistance or obstruction (Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 167).

Fresh application for delivery of possession.—Under the present Code a decree-holder applying for possession of immoveable property does so under O. 21, r. 35, while an auction-purchaser applying for such possession does so under O. 21, r. 95. The present rule deals with obstruction or resistance in obtaining possession. An important question that arises in this connection is whether if a decree-holder or auction-purchaser who is obstructed or resisted in obtaining possession omits to apply under this rule within 30 days from the date of obstruction or resistance, the only other remedy open to him is to proceed by a regular suit or whether he may make a fresh application for delivery of possession. It has been held by the High Courts of Madras (n) and Patna (o), that he may make a fresh application for delivery of possession. On the other hand, it has been held by the High Courts of Bombay (p) and Allahabad (q), that he is not entitled to make any such application and his only remedy is by a regular suit.

98. [Ss. 329, 330.] Where the Court is satisfied that the resistance or obstruction was occasioned without any just cause by the judgment-debtor or by some other person at his instigation, it shall direct that the applicant be put into possession of the property, and where the applicant is still resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession, the Court may also, at the instance of the applicant, order the judgment-debtor, or any person acting at his instigation, to be detained in the civil prison for a term which may extend to thirty days.

Resistance or obstruction by judgment-debtor.

Purchaser from a judgment-debtor pending attachment.—It has been held by the High Court of Madras that proceedings can be instituted under this rule against a purchaser from a judgment-debtor pending attachment, though such a purchaser is not expressly mentioned in the rule. The reasons given are (1) that this rule is to be read with r. 95 which expressly provides for the institution of proceedings against such a purchaser under that rule, and (2) that such a purchaser is a "representative" of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of s. 146, so that just as proceedings could be instituted against a judgment-debtor under this rule, so they could be instituted against such a purchaser by virtue of the provisions of that section (r).

99. [Cf. Ss. 331, 335.] Where the Court is satisfied that the resistance or obstruction was occasioned by any person (other than the judgment-debtor) claiming in good faith to be in possession of the property on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor, the Court shall make an order dismissing the application.

Resistance or obstruction
by bona fide claimant.

Any person other than judgment-debtor claiming to be in possession of the property.—The word “possession” as used in this rule is not limited to actual physical possession. It includes also constructive possession, such as possession by a tenant. Thus if the property is in the actual possession of a tenant, and resistance or obstruction is offered by the landlord, the application must be dismissed under this rule, for the landlord is in constructive possession of the property by his tenant (a).

Where in a suit brought by a plaintiff against two defendants, a decree is passed, by consent against one of them only, the other defendant is not a judgment-debtor. He is a “person other than the judgment-debtor” within the meaning of this rule (t).

100. [S. 332.] (1) Where any person other than the judgment-debtor is dispossessed of immoveable property by the holder of a decree for the possession of such property or, where such property has been sold in execution of a decree, by the purchaser thereof, he may make an application to the Court complaining of such dispossession.

Dispossession by decree-holder or purchaser.

(2) The Court shall fix a day for investigating the matter and shall summon the party against whom the application is made to appear and answer the same.

“Any person other than the judgment-debtor.”—See notes to s. 47, “Representative,” p. 130 above, and cases (9) and (10) on p. 131.

“Is dispossessed.”—Where mere symbolical possession is delivered to the decree-holder or purchaser under r. 96, the person in possession cannot be said to be “dispossessed” within the meaning of this rule so as to entitle him to apply under this rule (u). It is the delivery of actual possession alone (r. 95) that can constitute dispossession within the meaning of this rule. A person who is in possession through his tenant will be said to be “dispossessed” within the meaning of this rule, if the tenant is ousted from the property by the delivery of actual possession to the decree-holder or purchaser (v).

Dispossession under order of Collector.—When a person has been dispossessed under an order made by the Collector to whom execution proceedings are transferred, he should apply to the Collector, and not to the Court, complaining of such dispossession. This rule has no application when execution has been transferred to the Collector (w). O. 21,
rr. 100-103.

Limitation.—The application under this rule must be made within 30 days from the date of the dispossession; Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 165.

Dismissal of application for default.—It was held by the Patna High Court in the undermentioned case (x) that where an application made under this rule by a person not bound by the decree is dismissed for default, the order may be set aside under O. 9, r. 9, and the application may then be reheard. But this decision was disapproved by a Special Bench of the same Court in a later case (y). See p. 454 above.

101. [Ss. 332, 335.] Where the Court is satisfied that the applicant was in possession of the property on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor, it shall direct that the applicant be put into possession of the property.

Bona fide claimant to be restored to possession.

“Was in possession on his own account.”—A member of a joint Hindu family cannot be said to be in possession of any particular portion of the joint property on his own account. His possession is the possession of the family (z).

Ex parte order for delivery of possession.—Where an order is made under rule 101, even though it be ex parte, the remedy of the other party is by way of suit under rule 103, and not by proceedings under O. 9, r. 13. O. 9, r. 13, does not apply to execution proceedings, in any event not to proceedings under rules 100 and 101 of the present Order (a).

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order made under this rule (b); see r. 103 below.

102. [s. 333.] Nothing in rules 99 and 101 shall apply to resistance or obstruction in execution of a decree for the possession of immoveable property by a person to whom the judgment-debtor has transferred the property after the institution of the suit in which the decree was passed or to the dispossession of any such person.

Suit to establish right to present possession.—The suit must be brought within one year from the date of the order : Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 11A. If no suit is brought within the aforesaid period, the order will be conclusive (bb).

This rule does not apply unless there is an order made under r. 98, r. 99 or r. 101. Therefore, where an application is made under r. 97 or r. 100, but the Court declines to pass any order upon the application thinking it best that the applicant should be referred to a separate suit, the present rule does not apply, and any suit which the applicant may subsequently institute for possession is not a suit under this rule, and it is not therefore governed by art. 11A of the Limitation Act (c). Not only is it necessary that there should be an actual order made for the application of this rule, but the order must be one made after investigation as contemplated by r. 97, sub-r. (2), and r. 100, sub-r. (2). An order dismissing an application for default of prosecution is not an order made after investigation. The present rule therefore does not apply to such an order (d).

Party against whom an order is made under rule 101.—The order may be one directing the applicant to be put into possession or it may be one refusing to put him into possession (e).

ORDER XXII.

Death, Marriage and Insolvency of Parties.

- O. 22, r. 1. 1. [s. 361.] The death of a plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate if the right to sue survives.

No abatement by party's death, if right to sue survives.

Application of Order to appeals.—The provisions of this order apply to appeals. See s. 107, sub-s. (2), and r. 11 below.

Application of Order to execution proceedings.—The provisions of this order apply to execution-proceedings except rr. 3, 4 and 8. See r. 12 below.

“Right to sue.”—The right to sue means the right to bring a suit asserting a right to the same relief which the deceased plaintiff asserted at the time of his death (f).

In what cases the right to sue survives and in what cases it does not.—To answer this question, we must turn to the provisions of—

- II. the Indian Succession Act 10 of 1865, s. 268, in cases to which the O. 22, r. 1. Succession Act applies, and the Probate and Administration Act 5 of 1881, s. 89, in cases to which the Probate Act applies [see notes to O. 7, r. 4]. Sec. 89 of the Probate Act is a reproduction of s. 268 of the Succession Act.

I. Contract Act, s. 37.—Section 37 of the Contract Act runs as follows: "Promises bind the representatives of the promisors in case of the death of such promisors before performance unless a contrary intention appears from the contract." Expanding the italicized words, we may say that contracts involving the exercise of special skill or involving special personal confidence are not binding on the representatives of the promisors. A promises to paint a picture for B by a certain day at a certain price. A dies before the day. The contract cannot be enforced either by A's representatives against B or by B against A's representatives. The reason is that the right to sue does not survive to or against the representatives of A.

II. Succession Act, s. 268 and Probate Act, s. 89.—The following are the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, s. 268, and the Probate and Administration Act, s. 89: "All demands whatsoever, and all rights to prosecute or demand any action or special proceeding, existing in favour of or against a person at the time of his decease, survive to and against his executors or administrators; except causes of action for defamation, assault as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or other personal injuries not causing the death of the party; and except also cases where, after the death of the party, the relief sought could not be enjoyed, or granting it would be nugatory."

Analysing the above section, we may say that the right to sue does not survive in the following cases:—

(i) Suits for defamation, assault or other personal injuries not causing the death of the party. [Where death is caused by a personal injury, the legal representative of the deceased may sue wrong-doer for damages; see Act 13 of 1855.]

(ii) Cases where, after the death of the party, the relief sought could not be enjoyed or granting it would be nugatory.

Illustrations.

of cl. (i).—1. A sues B for defamation. A dies before decree. The right to sue does not survive, and the suit abates. That is to say; A's representative is not entitled to prosecute the suit.

2. A sues B for damages for assault. A dies before decree. [It is assumed that the death has not been caused by the assault.] The right to sue does not survive and the suit abates.

of cl. (ii).—3. A sues B for divorce. A dies. The cause of action does not survive to his representative: Stanhope v. Stanhope (1886) 11 P. D. 103.

4. A sues B to recover possession of his minor daughter illegally detained by B. B dies before decree. The cause of action does not survive against B's representative, and the suit abates: Sharifa v. Munekhan (1901) 25 Bom. 574.

5. A, claiming to be the nearest reversionary heir of a deceased Hindu, brings suit to set aside alienations made by the widow of the deceased. A dies before decree. It has been held by the High Court of Madras that the suit abates, and that it cannot

O. 22, r. 1. be continued by the next reversioner: Sakyahani v. Bhavani (1904) 27 Mad. 588; China v. Lakshminarasamma (1912) 37 Mad. 406. But this, it would seem, is no longer law: Venkatanarayana v. Subbammal (1915) 38 Mad. 406, 411-414, 42 I. A. 125, 129-132.

6. A applies to be appointed guardian of the person of X. The application is opposed by B who claims that he has been appointed guardian by the will of X's father. B dies. B's representative is not entitled to prosecute the proceedings. "A claim based on personal trust does not survive to the claimant's representative": Gangabai v. Khashabai (1899) 23 Bom. 719.

8. The right of an unmarried Hindu daughter to claim the property left by her father to the exclusion of her married sister is not a personal right. If a suit is brought to establish such a right, and the plaintiff dies pending the suit, the suit does not abate: Jadubansi v. Mahpal Singh (1915) 38 All. 111, dissenting from Balak Puri v. Durga (1908) 30 All. 49.

9. A, as the sole executor and residuary legatee under the will of X, applies for probate of the will. B files a caveat, and the proceedings are thereupon converted into a suit. Pending the hearing A dies. Thereupon C, A's widow, applies to have her name substituted for that of A, and to have the petition amended by asking for letters of administration with the will annexed instead of probate. The application must be rejected, for A's right to apply for probate became extinguished on his death: Sarat Chandra v. Nani Mohan (1909) 36 Cal. 799; Haribhusan v. Manmatha Nath (1918) 45 Cal. 862.

10. A sues B for an injunction to restrain him from preventing A from enjoying the honour of standing at a particular place in a temple. B dies pending the suit. The suit abates: Josiam v. Swami (1910) 34 Mad. 76.

11. A, a Sunni Mahomedan, sues B for pre-emption. A dies pending the suit. It is not settled whether the right to sue is extinguished, or whether it survives to his heirs or legal representatives: Muhammad v. Niamat-un-Nissa (1897) 20 All. 88; Sayyad Jiaul v. Sitaram (1912) 36 Bom. 144.

In cases other than those comprised in clauses (i) and (ii), the right to sue does survive. Thus the case of malicious prosecution is not comprised either in cl. (i) or clause (ii); hence if A sues B for damages for malicious prosecution, and dies before decree, it has been held by the Calcutta High Court that the right to sue survives, and A's representative is entitled to prosecute the suit (g). In a Bombay case (h), however, where the suit was by A against B for malicious prosecution, and B died pending the suit, it was held that the right to sue did not survive against B, and that A was not entitled to prosecute the suit against B's representative, and that the suit abated. The reason given was that B's estate did not derive any direct benefit from the alleged wrong committed by him and hence the cause of action did not survive against his representative according to the principle laid down in Phillips v. Homfray (i).

(g) Krishna v. Corporation of Calcutta (1904) 31 Cal. 993. See Paramen v. Sundararaja (1908) 26 Mad. 499.

(h) Haridas v. Ramdas (1889) 13 Bom. 677.

In the Calcutta case cited above, however, the Court observed that it was unnecessary to deal with the English authorities upon the question whether or not the cause of action survived to the representative of a deceased plaintiff for malicious prosecution, and that the matter was governed by s. 89 of the Probate and Administration Act.

The right to sue for damages for breach of contract, the right to sue on a promissory note, the right to sue for a debt, the right to sue on a mortgage, the right to sue for wrong done to property, are all instances of rights that are not extinguished on the death of the plaintiff or defendant. In all these cases the suit does not abate on the death of the plaintiff or defendant. An agreement referring matters in dispute to arbitration is not in this country revoked by the death of any of the parties thereto before the award is made. Hence the question whether the legal representative of a deceased party is or is not entitled to enforce the contract to refer is a question which would depend upon whether the right dealt with in the reference is of a purely personal nature or is one which survives to the legal representative (j).

Death of either party pending appeal.—Where a decree has been passed for the plaintiff in a suit in which the right to sue would not survive if the plaintiff died before decree, and either party dies pending an appeal preferred by the defendant from the decree, the appeal does not abate (k). But if the plaintiff's suit is dismissed, and the plaintiff has appealed from the decree, and either party dies pending the appeal, the appeal will abate (l).

Illustrations.

1. A sues B for damages for defamation, and obtains a decree for Rs. 5,000. B appeals from the decree. A dies pending the appeal. The appeal does not abate, and B may continue the appeal against A's representatives. If B dies pending the appeal, B's representative may continue the appeal against A.

2. A sues B for damages for defamation, but the suit is dismissed. A appeals from the decree. Pending the appeal A dies. A's representative is not entitled to prosecute the appeal. The reason is that the decree in the original suit being against A, what is sought to be enforced in appeal, is A's right to sue. But the right to sue in a suit for defamation does not survive to the legal representative; hence the appeal abates. Similarly if B dies pending the appeal, A is not entitled to continue the appeal against B's representative, not even if A's suit was dismissed with costs (m).

2. [S. 362.] Where there are more plaintiffs or defendants than one, and any of them dies, and where the right to sue survives to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, or against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, the Court shall cause an entry to that effect to be made on the record, and the suit shall proceed at the instance of the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs, or against the surviving defendant or defendants.

O. 22, rr. 2, 3. Cases where right to sue survives to surviving plaintiff alone.—Where a suit is brought by several joint-owners of any land for damages for trespass, and one of the plaintiffs dies during the pendency of the suit, the suit may be continued by the surviving joint-owners, and the legal representative of the deceased joint-owner is not a necessary party to the suit (a).

Cases where right to sue survives against surviving defendants alone.—Where the defendants are executors or trustees, and are sued in their representative capacity, if any one of them dies before decree, the suit may be continued against the surviving executors or trustees, and the legal representative of the deceased executor or trustee is not to be added as a defendant. Similarly where the defendants are joint tort-feasors, the cause of action on the death of one survives as against the other (o).

Suit.—The word “suit” includes an appeal: see r. 11 below.

3. [Sr. 363, 365, 366.] (1) Where one of two or more plaintiffs dies and the right to sue does not survive to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, or a sole plaintiff or sole surviving plaintiff dies and the right to sue survives, the Court, on an application made in that behalf, shall cause the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff to be made a party and shall proceed with the suit.

Procedure in case of death of one of several plaintiffs or of sole plaintiff.

(2) Where within the time limited by law no application is made under sub-rule (1) the suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned, and, on his application of the defendant, the Court may award to him the costs which he may have incurred in defending the suit, to be recovered from the estate of the deceased plaintiff.

Alterations in the rule :—

1. The words “so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned” in sub-rule (2) are new. See notes below “The suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned.”
2. The words “the suit shall abate” in sub-rule (2) have been substituted for the words “the Court may pass an order that the suit shall abate” which occurred in s. 366 of the Code of 1882. The latter words gave rise to a conflict of opinion as to whether an order that a suit shall abate was appealable. The High Courts of Bombay and Madras held that such an order was a decree and was therefore appealable. The Allahabad High Court held that the order was not appealable. No such question can arise under the present rule, for it is no longer necessary to make any order that a suit shall abate. The suit abates ipso facto, if no application is made under sub-rule (1) within the time limited by law.

Limitation.—The application under this rule must be made within six months O. 22, r. 3. from the date of the death of the deceased plaintiff or appellant: Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 176.

"Suit."—The word "suit" in this rule includes an appeal, and the word "plaintiff" includes an appellant: see r. 11 below.

"Dies."—The word "dies" in this rule refers to death before decree. This rule, therefore, does not apply to cases in which a plaintiff dies after decree and before appeal (p).

The suit shall abate "so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned."—Where one of two or more plaintiffs dies and the right to sue survives to the surviving plaintiffs or plaintiff alone, as where the right is a joint right, the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs may proceed with the suit. This case has been dealt with in r. 2 above. The present rule provides inter alia that where one of two or more plaintiffs dies and the right to sue does not survive to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff ought to be made a party to the suit. For this purpose an application should be made to the Court, and such application must be made within 6 months from the date of the death of the deceased plaintiff. Sub-rule (2) provides that where no such application is made, the suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned. The words italicized above mean that the suit shall primarily abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned, but they do not mean that the suit shall in no case abate as a whole. If the suit is of such a nature that it can proceed in the absence of the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff, it will abate so far only as the deceased plaintiff is concerned. But if it is of such a character that it cannot proceed in the absence of the legal representative, it will abate as a whole. See notes above "Alterations in the rule."

The provisions of this rule apply not only to the case of a deceased plaintiff, but to the case of a deceased appellant [see s. 107 and r. 11 below]. Therefore, where one of two or more appellant dies and the right to appeal does not survive to the surviving appellant alone, the legal representative of the deceased appellant ought to be brought on the record. If this is not done, the appeal will abate so far as the deceased appellant is concerned. But the appeal will abate as a whole, if the case is of such a nature that the appeal cannot proceed in the absence of the legal representative of the deceased appellant. There is particularly one class of cases in which an appeal cannot abate as a whole, but abates only so far as the deceased appellant is concerned, and these are cases which come within O. 41, r. 4, corresponding with s. 544 of the Code of 1882. O. 41, r. 4 provides that where there are two or more plaintiffs or defendants in a suit, and the decree appealed from proceeds on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants, any one of the plaintiffs or of the defendants may appeal from the whole decree, and thereupon the appellate Court may reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or all the defendants, as the case may be. Where several plaintiffs or defendants jointly appeal from a decree in a case to which O. 41, r. 4 of the Code applies, the death of one of such appellants, if no legal representative of the deceased appellant is brought upon the record within the limitation, can only have the effect of causing the appeal to abate so far only as the deceased appellant is concerned: it cannot have the effect of causing the appeal to abate as a whole. A and B sue C, D and E for possession of certain lands, alleging that they have been unlawfully dispossessed by the defendants. The defence is that the land belongs to C, D and E. The Court finds that the land belongs to the plaintiffs, and

O. 22, r. 3. a decree is passed in favour of the plaintiffs. C, D and E appeal from the decree. E dies pending the appeal, but his legal representative is not brought on the record within the period of limitation. A and B (respondents) contend that the appellate Court should not proceed with the appeal, on the ground that the appeal has abated as whole. But the appeal in such a case does not abate as a whole, but abates only so far as the deceased appellant is concerned. The appellate court should therefore hold that the appeal has abated so far as the deceased appellant is concerned [see sub-r. (2)], and it should then proceed with the hearing of the appeal. The reason is that the ground of appeal being common to all the appellants, viz., that they were the lawful owners of the land, any one of them might have appealed from the whole decree under O. 41, r. 4; if so, the death of one of the appellants could not affect the right of the other appellants to proceed with the appeal (q).

Two or more legal representatives.—We next proceed to consider the question whether, if there are two or more legal representatives, they should all be made parties? A Mahomedan plaintiff dies pending a suit brought by him, leaving three sons, A, B and C. A alone applies to be brought on the record in place of the deceased, and he is brought on the record as plaintiff. No application is made to bring B and C on the record within 6 months from the date of the death of the deceased plaintiff. Does the suit abate? It does, according to the Allahabad High Court (r). According to that Court, the words "legal representative" must, when there is more than one legal representative, be read in the plural. It has accordingly been held by that Court that all the legal representatives must be brought on the record as plaintiffs, and if any of them refuses to be joined as a plaintiff, he should be joined as a defendant. The same view has been taken by the High Court of Madras (s), except that according to that Court if any of the legal representatives refuses to be joined as a plaintiff, and he is brought on the record after the period of limitation, the suit does not abate though he is brought on the record after the period of limitation. In Bombay it has been held that an application by one of several legal representatives is sufficient, and that the suit does not abate if others are not brought on the record (t). The same principles apply to appeals.

Dispute as to representative of deceased plaintiff.—The present rule pre-supposes that the party claiming to represent the deceased plaintiff is his legal representative, but if a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff, such question should be determined by the Court under r. 5 below (u).

Legal representative.—On the death of a Hindu widow pending a suit to recover property belonging to her deceased husband, the reversionary heirs of the husband are her legal representatives within the meaning of this rule (v). Similarly on the death of a Hindu female to recover her father's property from strangers, the next heirs of the father are her legal representatives within the meaning of this rule (w). On the death of a reversioner pending a suit for a declaration that an alleged adoption is invalid, the next reversioner is the legal representative, and he is entitled to be brought on the record as such (x).

O. 22,
rr. 3,4

It is to be noted that the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff can only prosecute the cause of action as originally framed (y). Likewise, the defendant can raise no defence against the legal representative other than what he could have raised against the deceased plaintiff himself (z). See s. 2, cl. (11).

It has been held by the High Court of Madras that where a suit is brought by a minor Hindu for partition, and the minor dies pending the suit, his legal representatives are not entitled to continue the suit, the reason given being that the rule that the institution of a suit for partition effects a severance of the joint estate is not applicable to a suit by a minor, it being for the Court to determine in such a suit whether a decree for partition will be beneficial to the minor (a).

"The suit shall abate."—See notes above, "Alterations in the rule," no. 2.

Death of pauper applicant.—Where there is only an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis, but no suit pending in Court, and the applicant dies before the leave is granted, the right to sue as a pauper, being a personal right, cannot survive to his legal representative. But the legal representative may present a fresh application for leave to sue in forma pauperis, or he may institute a suit for the same relief that the deceased claimed, if the right to sue survives (b).

Revision.—When the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff applies within the prescribed period to have his name entered on the record, the Court is bound under this rule to enter his name. If the Court fails to do so, it amounts to a failure to exercise jurisdiction vested in it by law under this rule, and the High Court may interfere in revision under s. 115 (c).

Execution proceedings.—This rule does not apply to proceedings in execution: see r. 12 below.

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order made under this rule (d). See O. 43 below.

4. [S. 368.] (1) Where one of two or more defendants dies and the right to sue does not survive against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, or a sole defendant or sole surviving defendant dies and the right to sue survives, the Court, on an application made in that behalf, shall cause the legal representative of the deceased defendant to be made a party and shall proceed with the suit.

- O. 22, r. 4. (3) Where within the time limited by law no application is made under sub-rule (1), the suit shall abate as against the deceased defendant.

Alterations in the rule :—

1. Sub-rule (2) is new.
2. The words "as against the deceased defendant" in sub-rule (3) are also new.
See notes below, "The suit shall abate as against the deceased defendant."

Suit.—The word "suit" in this rule includes an appeal, and the word "defendant" a respondent; see r. 11 below.

Legal representative.—See s. 2, cl. (II).

Limitation.—The application under this rule must be made within six months from "the date of the death of the deceased defendant or respondent:" Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 177. The alteration in the language of art. 177 [Limitation Act, 1877, art. 175 C], clearly shows that the word "respondent" in that article is not confined only to a respondent in first appeal as was held by the High Court of Madras under the old article (e), but that it also includes a respondent in second appeal as held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Allahabad (f). See also r. 11 below.

Where no application is made within the period of limitation.—The application to bring the legal representative of the deceased defendant on the record should, as stated above, be made within 6 months from the date of the death of the deceased defendant. If no such application is made within the aforesaid period, the suit abates as against the deceased defendant [sub-rule (3)], though the plaintiff was ignorant of the death of the deceased (g). After abatement, the only course open to the plaintiff is to make an application under r. 9, sub-r. (2), to have the abatement set aside. Such an application should be made within 60 days from the date of the abatement [Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 171], but the Court may entertain the application even after 60 days if sufficient cause is shown (h) [see r. 9, sub-r. 3, and Limitation Act, 1908, s. 5]. As to the inherent power of the Court to bring the legal representative of a deceased defendant on the record after abatement, see notes below.

The suit shall abate "as against the deceased defendant."—Where one of two or more defendants dies, and the right to sue survives against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, as where the liability is a joint one, the suit should be proceeded with as against the surviving defendant or defendants. This case has been dealt with in r. 2 above. The present rule provides inter alia that where one of two or more defendants dies, and the right to sue does not survive against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, as in a suit for partition, the legal representative of the deceased defendant ought to be made a party to the suit. For this purpose an application should be made to the Court, and such application must be made within six months from the date of the death of the deceased defendant. Sub-rule (3) provides that where O. 22, r. 4. no such application is made, the suit shall abate as against the deceased defendant. The words, "as against the deceased defendant are new. In the absence of these words in the corresponding section 368 of the Code of 1882, it was contended in a large number of cases governed by that section that where no application was made to bring the legal representative of a deceased defendant or respondent on the record within the period of 6 months, the suit or appeal abated not only as against the deceased defendant or respondent, but as a whole. But this contention did not prevail, and the Courts held that a distinction ought to be made between cases in which a suit or appeal could proceed in the absence of the legal representative and those in which it could not so proceed. In the former case it was held that the suit or appeal abated only as against the deceased defendant or respondent (i); in the latter case, that it abated as a whole (j). Sub-r. (3) of the present rule makes it clear that where no application is made to bring the legal representative on the record within the time limited by law, the suit or appeal abates primarily as against the deceased defendant or respondent only. At the same time there is nothing in this rule to preclude the Courts from holding, as they did under the last Code, that a suit or appeal abates as a whole where the facts of the case are such that the suit or appeal cannot proceed in the absence of the legal representative. It is submitted that the only effect of the newly added words "as against the deceased defendant," is to make it clear that failure to make the necessary application within the time allowed by law does not necessarily cause the suit or appeal to abate as a whole, and thus to give legislative recognition to the rulings under the last Code. The said words do not mean that the suit or appeal shall in every case abate as against the deceased defendant or respondent only, and proceed against the other defendants or respondents. Such a construction would lead to absurd results in many cases. It is, therefore, submitted, that the distinction drawn by the Courts under s. 368 of the Code of 1882 between cases in which a suit or appeal abates as against the deceased defendant or respondent only and those in which it abates as a whole, still holds good. The subject being one of some difficulty, we proceed to illustrate it in the light of decided cases.

Formal defendant.—The absence of representatives of a defendant who is merely a formal party to the suit affords no ground for the abatement of a suit (k).

1. Cases in which suit or appeal held to abate as against the deceased defendant only.—(1) A mortgages certain property to B. C stands surety for repayment of the mortgage-debt. B sues A and C, praying as against A for a sale of the mortgaged property, and as against C for a decree for the payment of the mortgage debt. C dies pending the suit. No application is made by B to bring on the record the legal representative of C within 6 months from the date of C's death. The suit abates as against C only, and not as a whole: Mehdi Husain v. Sugra Begam (1902) 25 All. 206. [In this case it is clear that B could have abandoned his claim against C, and sued A alone on the mortgage.]

(2) A lets certain lands to B and C. A then sues B and C for arrears of rent, but the suit is dismissed. A files an appeal from the decree against B and C. C dies pending

O. 22, r. 4. the appeal. No application is made by A to substitute C's legal representative in C's place within 6 months, from the date of C's death. The appeal does not abate as a whole but against C only: Joy Gobind v. Monmotha (1906) 33 Cal. 680. [In this case it is clear that A could have sued B alone without joining C as a party defendant: see Contract Act, 1872, s. 43.]

II. Cases in which suit or appeal held to abate as a whole:—

(1) A, B, and C are joint owners of certain property. The property is sold for arrears of Government revenue and purchased by D. A, B, and C sue D to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud and irregularities, and a decree is passed in their favour. D files an appeal from the decree against A, B, and C. C dies pending the appeal, but no application is made by D to bring C's legal representative on the record within the period of limitation. The appeal abates not only as against C, but as a whole. In this case it is clear that A, B, and C being joint owners, the suit would have been bad if C were not joint as a party to the suit. Further, suppose that the appeal were heard and that the appellate Court came to the conclusion that the decree of the lower Court should be reversed; the decree could then be reversed only as to A and B, but it could not be reversed as to C, for C's representative is not on the record. This conclusion is preposterous, for the case is one in which the decree, if it is set aside, must be set aside as to the sale of the entire estate. Under no circumstances could it be reversed as to the unascertained shares of some joint-holders [that is, A and B], and confirmed as to the unascertained share of other joint-holders [that is, in this case, C]. The case therefore is one in which the appeal could not proceed in the absence of C's legal representative. The appeal therefore must abate as a whole: Dharanjit v. Chandeshwar (1907) 11 Cal. W. N. 504; Bejoy Gopal v. Umesh Chandra (1901) 6 C. W. N. 196; Hadu v. Lala (1915) Punj. Rec. no. 41, p. 197; Jamna v. Sarjit (1919) Punj. Rec. no. 67, p. 166.

(2) A sues his partners B, C, D and F for dissolution and for accounts of the partnership. A decree is passed in the suit by which it is ordered that a sum of Rs. 9,000 should be contributed by A, B and C, and that out of that sum Rs. 1,740 should be paid to D and the rest to F. A appeals from the decree making B, C, D and F party respondents. B and C also appeal from the decree making A, D and F party respondents. Pending the appeal D dies. No application is made by the appellants in either appeal to bring on the record the legal representative of D within the period of limitation. The appeal abates as a whole, for it is not a case in which the appeals could proceed in the absence of the legal representative of D, as the suit is one for partnership accounts: Raj Chunder v. Gunga Das (1904) 31 Cal. 487, 31 I.A. 71.

Power of Court to add legal representative as a party after abatement.—Notwithstanding the abatement of a suit, the Court has the power, in a proper case, to bring on the record the representative of a deceased defendant under s. 151 and O. 1, r. 10. A sues B and C for partition of joint family property. A preliminary decree is passed and a commissioner is appointed to make a partition according to the rights declared in the decree. B then dies, but no application is made to bring his legal representative on the record within the period of limitation. Though the suit abates as regards B, the Court may add B's representative as a defendant (1).

Effect of decree against a person alleged to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant.—Where a defendant in a suit dies, and the plaintiff, under this rule, brings a person on the record whom he alleges to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant, such person sufficiently represents the estate of the deceased for the purposes of the suit, and, in the absence of fraud or collision, the decree passed in the suit will bind the estate (m).

O. 22,
rr. 4, 5.

Rehearing of suit or appeal.—A plaintiff whose suit is heard and dismissed is not entitled to a rehearing of the suit on the ground that one of the defendants had died previous to the hearing of the suit and that the suit was heard without bringing the legal representative of the deceased defendant on the record. The right to have the suit reheard is the right of the legal representative [which he would not care to exercise, the suit being dismissed], and not the right of the unsuccessful plaintiff. The same rule applies to appeals (n).

Death of defendant after preliminary decree.—This rule applies though the death of a defendant may take place after the passing of a preliminary decree, as in a partnership suit (o).

Execution proceedings.—This rule does not apply to proceedings in execution of a decree : see r. 12 below.

Application of this rule to appeals.—This rule applies to appeals : see r. 11 below. But an appellate Court has no power under this rule to declare that a suit as distinct from an appeal has abated, in a case in which a decree has already been passed before the death (in consequence of which the suit is alleged to have abated) took place (p).

5. [s. 367.] Where a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff or a deceased defendant, such question shall be determined by the Court.

Determination of question as to legal representative.

Alterations in the rule .—

1. The words "where a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative," have been substituted for the words "if any dispute arises as to who is the legal representative." The object is to make it clear that this rule applies not only where two or more persons claim to be the legal representatives of a deceased party but where there is only one claimant and his representative character is denied. This is in accordance with the interpretation put upon the words of the old section in the undermentioned cases (q).
2. Under the old section where a question arose as to whether any person was or was not the legal representative of a deceased party, the Court had the power either to stay the suit until the question was determined in another suit, or to determine the question itself. Under the present rule the Court is bound to determine the question itself (r).
3. It is provided by rules 3 and 4 of this Order that once a person is brought on the record under those rules as the legal representative of a deceased party,

(m) Kadir v. Muthukrishna (1903) 26 Mad. 230.

"the Court shall proceed with the suit." No objection therefore as to the representative character of such person can be entertained after he is brought on the record, though the hearing of the suit has not commenced. Under the old section the objection could be taken "at or before the first hearing of the suit." But the words "at or before the first hearing" have been omitted in the present rule, the object being that the objection as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative of a deceased party should be taken before such person is made a party to the suit under rules 3 and 4 (s).

"Legal representative."—As to the definition of this expression, see s. 2, cl. (11).

Objection as to representative character, when to be taken.—See notes above, "Alterations in the rule," No. 3.

Effect of order under this rule.—This rule provides a summary procedure for appointing a person to be the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff for the purpose of prosecuting the suit. Hence an order admitting a person to be the legal representative for the purpose of prosecuting the suit does not operate as a final determination of the representative character of such person, in other words it does not operate as res judicata (t). This rule, it is conceived, must be read as if it contained the words "for the purposes of rules 3 and 4" after the word "shall." Compare s. 47, sub-s. (3).

Power of Court to correct its order.—If an ex parte order is made under this rule, and it is found to be a mistaken order, the Court has the power to correct it (u).

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order under this rule (v). But a party aggrieved by the order may object to the order in an appeal from the decree, provided he was a party to the decree (w). But the order will not be set aside unless it is shown that it has affected the decision of the case (x). See s. 105 above.

6. [New.] Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing rules, whether the cause of action survives or not there shall be no abatement by reason of the death of either party between the conclusion of the hearing and the pronouncing of the judgment, but judgment may in such case be pronounced notwithstanding the death and shall have the same force and effect as if it had been pronounced before the death took place.

No abatement by reason of death after hearing.—This rule is new. It gives effect to the decisions in the undermentioned cases (y). See notes to s. 47, case (4), p. 123 above.

In a mortgage suit the "judgment" referred to in this rule is the judgment supporting the final decree and not the judgment supporting the preliminary decree, and the "hearing" referred to in the rule is the hearing of issues upon which judgment is to be delivered determining the plaintiff's right to a final decree. The result is that this rule does not apply where a party to a mortgage suit dies before the application for a final decree is made and heard (z).

7. [s. 369.] (1) The marriage of a female plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate, but the suit may notwithstanding be proceeded with to judgment, and where the decree is against a female defendant, it may be executed against her alone.

(2) Where the husband is by law liable for the debts of his wife the decree may, with the permission of the Court, be executed against the husband also; and, in case of judgment for the wife, execution of the decree may, with such permission, be issued upon the application of the husband, where the husband is by law entitled to the subject-matter of the decree.

Liability for wife's debts.—See Pollock and Mulla's Indian Contract Act, s. 187, and notes thereto.

such assignee or receiver declines to continue the suit or (unless for any special reason the Court otherwise directs) to give security for the costs thereof within such time as the Court may direct.

(2) Where the assignee or receiver neglects or refuses to continue the suit and to give such security within the time so ordered, the defendant, may apply for the dismissal of the suit on the ground of the plaintiff's insolvency and the Court may make an order dismissing the suit and awarding to the defendant the costs which he has incurred in defending the same to be proved as a debt against the plaintiff's estate.

This rule applies to the case of a plaintiff insolvent.—This rule lays down the procedure to be followed where a plaintiff becomes insolvent.

O. 22,
rr. 8, 9.

Insolvency of defendant.—As to the case of the insolvency of a defendant in a presidency-town it is now provided by sec. 18 of the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act, 1909, that where a defendant to a suit has been adjudged an insolvent, the Court may, at any time after the making of the order of adjudication, stay any suit or other proceeding pending against the insolvent before any Judge or Judges of the Court or in any other Court subject to the superintendence of the Court. It is further provided by the same section that any Court in which proceedings are pending against a debtor may on proof that an order of adjudication has been made against him under the Act, either stay the proceedings or allow them to continue on such terms as it may think just. As to cases governed by the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1907, see sec. 16, sub-sec. (2). See also notes to r. 10 below, "Insolvency of defendant: joinder of Official Assignee."

"Insolvency."—This rule does not apply to a case where there has been only an application to declare the plaintiff an insolvent and a vesting order made, but the proceedings are subsequently annulled and the party is not declared an insolvent. Therefore in such a case, where a suit has been dismissed for the non-appearance of the plaintiff or the Official Assignee on the date fixed for the hearing, it is rule 9 of Order 9 that applies (a).

Costs payable by plaintiff prior to his insolvency.—The general principle is "that a person who comes in by representation, whether it be an assignee in bankruptcy or as an executor or administrator of an original plaintiff, where costs are due by the person whom he represents, the suit cannot be carried on except upon the costs of the original suit being paid." It has accordingly been held that where a plaintiff, who has been ordered to pay the costs of a proceeding in the suit, becomes bankrupt, and the suit is revived by his assignee, the Court will stay proceedings until payment of the costs which the plaintiff has been ordered to pay (b).

Costs of successful defendant.—Where a suit is continued by the assignee in bankruptcy, and the defendant obtains judgment with costs, the defendant is entitled to be paid all his costs in full, and not merely the costs as from the date of insolvency with liberty to prove for the costs previously incurred (c).

Practice.—As to the proper order to be made under this rule, see the under-mentioned case (d).

Execution proceedings.—This rule does not apply to proceedings in execution: see r. 12 below.

Cause of action arising after insolvency.—A, an undischarged insolvent, sues B for brokerage earned by him subsequent to his adjudication. B applies for security for costs. If the Official Assignee has not intervened, no order should be made for security for costs. Even if he has intervened, no order should be made if the amount of the claim exceeds the plaintiff's liability (e).

9. [Ss. 371, 372A.] (1) Where a suit abates or is dismissed under this Order, no fresh suit shall be brought on the same cause of action.

(2). The plaintiff or the person claiming to be the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff or the assignee or the receiver in the case of an insolvent plaintiff may apply for an order to set aside the abatement or dismissal; and if it is proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from continuing the suit, the Court shall set aside the abatement or dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

(3) The provisions of section 5 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, shall apply to applications under sub-rule (2).

No fresh suit on the same cause of action.—This rule prohibits a fresh suit on the same cause of action. As to the meaning of cause of action, see notes to s. 20, "Cause of action," p. 86 above.

A, a member of a joint Hindu family, sues B for redemption of a mortgage of ancestral property executed by A to B. A then dies. A's heirs are not brought on the record, and the suit abates. Subsequently A's son and grandsons institute another suit against B for redemption of the mortgage. There is no indication that A's suit was brought by him in a representative capacity, that is, as representing the joint family. The second suit is not barred (f).

Who may apply under this rule.—The following persons may apply under sub-r. (2), namely, (1) the plaintiff, where a suit has abated under r. 4, sub-r. (3) (g), (2) the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff, where a suit has abated under r. 3, sub-r. (2); the assignee of an insolvent plaintiff, where a suit is dismissed under r. 8, sub-r. (2).

"Sufficient cause."—This rule provides that the Court shall set aside the abatement if the applicant proves that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from continuing the suit, that is, if he satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not applying in time to bring the legal representatives of the deceased on the record (h). Thus the ignorance of the death of the deceased may be a sufficient cause unless the ignorance implied negligence (i).

Cause of action of original and revived suit must be the same.—No fresh cause of action can be imported into the revived suit, for the proceedings in the revived suit are a continuation of the proceedings in the original suit (j).

Limitation.—An application under this rule for an order to set aside an abatement must be made within 60 days from the date of the abatement [Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 171]. The application for an order to set aside dismissal of a suit must also be made within the same period [ib., art. 172]. In either case, the provisions of s. 5 of the Limitation Act will apply to the application, and the Court may admit the application even after 60 days, if the applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application within 60 days. See notes to r. 4 above, "Where no application is made within the period of limitation," p. 666 above.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order refusing to set aside the abatement or dismissal of a suit [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (k)].

10. [s. 372.] (1) In other cases of an assignment, creation or devolution of any interest during the pendency of a suit, the suit may, by leave of the Court, be continued by or against the person to or upon whom such interest has come or devolved.

Procedure in case of
order in suit.

(2) The attachment of a decree pending an appeal therefrom shall be deemed to be an interest entitling the person who procured such attachment to the benefit of sub-rule (1).

Sub-rule (2) is new. See notes below under the head "Sub-rule (2)."

Other cases of assignment, creation or devolution of interest.—It will be observed that the preceding rules deal with certain specified cases of assignment, creation and devolution of interest. Rule 8 deals with the case of assignment on the insolvency of a plaintiff, rule 7 with the case of creation of an interest to a husband on marriage, and rules 2, 3 and 4 with the case of devolution of interest on the death of a party to a suit. The present rule provides for cases of assignment, creation and devolution of interest other than those mentioned above (k).

Assignment of interest.—This includes a lease granted by the defendant during the pendency of a suit (l).

Devolution of interest.—The phrase "devolution of interest" is not confined in its meaning to devolution by death. This clearly appears from the words "to whom such interest has come" in the latter part of the rule. Hence where during the pendency of a suit instituted by the manager of an encumbered estate, the estate is released from management and restored to the owners, it is open to the owners to apply to be made plaintiffs in place of the manager under this rule (m).

Assignment of interest.—The word "interest" in this rule means interest in the property, the subject-matter of the suit (n).

2. A sues the firm of BC to recover Rs. 5,000. Pending the suit the firm of BC transfers all its assets and liabilities to the firm of XY. Thereupon A applies to the Court under this rule to have the firm of XY joined as a party defendant. The application should be refused, for the assignment cannot be said in any sense to be an assignment of the defendant's interest in the subject-matter of the suit: Harish Chandra v. Chandpore Co., Ltd. (1903) 30 Cal. 961. [Here the subject-matter of the suit is the amount claimed by A, namely, Rs. 5,000].

Insolvency of defendant : Joinder of Official Assignee.—This section applies to the devolution of an interest by reason of an adjudication in insolvency and a vesting order thereunder (o).

(a) A sues B to recover Rs. 5,000. Pending the suit B is adjudged an insolvent, and his property vests in the Official Assignee under a vesting order made by the Insolvency Court. The Official Assignee should not be added as a party defendant, for though the vesting order has the effect of an assignment of the estate of the insolvent to the Official Assignee, it could not be said, when an action purely in personam (as distinguished from an action relating to the insolvent's property) is brought against the insolvent, that any part of the subject-matter of the suit has been assigned to the Official Assignee: see Miller v. Budh Sing (1891) 18 Cal. 43; Chandmull v. Ranee Soondery (1895) 22 Cal. 259; Punithavelu v. Bhashyam (1902) 25 Mad. 406, 421.

(b) A sues B for recovery of possession of certain immoveable property. The defence is that B is the full owner of the property. Pending the suit, B is adjudged an insolvent and his property vests in the Official Assignee. This is a case in which the Court may add the Official Assignee as a party defendant under this rule. The reason is that the property which forms the subject-matter of the suit is part of the property which has passed to the Official Assignee under the vesting order: see Punithavelu v. Bhashyam (1902) 25 Mad. 406. If the Official Assignee refuses to defend the suit, the insolvent is not entitled to defend the suit independently of the Official Assignee: Tribhovandas v. Abdulally (1914) 39 Bom. 568. As to the old law on the subject, see the undermentioned case (p).

Note.—It will be noted that the above illustrations are confined to the case of an insolvent defendant. The reason is that the case of an insolvent plaintiff is dealt with in r. 8, and the present rule deals with cases of assignment other than those specified in the preceding rules.

“During the pendency of a suit.”—These words mean “before a final decree or order has been passed or made in the suit” [see the marginal note to the rule]. Hence the provisions of this rule apply if the assignment, creation or devolution of interest takes place before a final decree or order is passed or made in the suit. In the case of an appeal, the provisions of this rule apply if the assignment, etc., takes place before a final decree or order is passed or made in the appeal [see r. 11 below]. In the case of an assignment, etc., pending a suit, the application must be made pending the suit. The reason is that the applications contemplated by this rule are applications to continue the suit, applications made after the termination of the suit are not within this rule (q). Similarly, in the case of an assignment, etc., pending an appeal, the application must be made pending the appeal.

2. The devolution of interest of a party to a suit after an order has been made directing the Commissioner to take accounts, but before the passing of the final decree, is within this rule : Keshub Roy v. Krishto Mitter (1903) 30 Cal. 609.

3. The assignment of the interest of a mortgagee in a suit for sale of the mortgaged property after a preliminary decree for sale, but before the passing of the final decree, is within this rule : Chunni Lal v. Abdul Ali Khan (1901) 23 All. 331.

4. In a suit by A against B to recover certain immoveable property a decree is passed for A. B appeals from the decree. Pending the appeal, A sells the property to C. C may be made a party to the appeal under this rule : Rajaram Bhagvat v. Jibai (1885) 9 Bom. 151; Pandit Gocul Chand v. Kuar Sarat (1896) 18 All. 285.

5. A sues B to recover Rs. 5,000, and a decree is passed for him. B appeals from the decree. Pending the appeal, A assigns the decree to C. C may be made a party to the appeal under this rule : Durga Prasad, in the matter of (1900) 22 All. 231.

6. A sues B for redemption of a mortgage. A preliminary decree for redemption is passed, and a time is fixed within which the mortgage money is to be paid by A into Court. The money is not paid in by A by that date, nor is any application made by B under cl. (4) of O. 34, r. 8, for a decree for sale. A then sells the mortgaged property to C. This amounts to an assignment pending the suit so as to entitle C to be brought on the record as a party under this rule : Muhammad v. Jarao (1915) 37 All. 226.

7. A sues B to establish his right to certain property. Pending the suit B mortgages the property to C. A decree is then passed in favour of A. B does not appeal from the decree. C, being desirous of appealing from the decree, applies to be made a party to the suit. The suit having terminated, C should not be joined as a party to the suit. He may, however, appeal from the decree under s. 146 as a person claiming under B within the meaning of that section : Sitaramaswami v. Lakshmi (1918) 41 Mad. 510.

Sub-rule (2).—A obtains a decree against B. B appeals from the decree. Pending the appeal C, who holds a decree against A, attaches the decree obtained by A against B. C may be made a party under this rule. See O. 21, r. 53.

No new suit.—It is clear from the terms of this rule that when a party is brought on the record under this rule, there is, as regards him, no new suit at all. He is added in the suit already instituted, and that suit is continued by or against him. The essence of this rule, whether applied to proceedings in the Court of first instance or proceedings in appeal, is that the suit is one from the beginning and that the addition of the transferee does not initiate, as regards him, a new proceeding (r).

Doctrine of lis pendens.—In this connection may be noted the provisions of s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, which run thus : "During the active prosecution . . . of a contentious suit or proceeding in which any right to any immoveable property is directly and specifically in question, the property cannot be transferred or otherwise dealt with by any party to the suit or proceeding, so as to affect the rights of any other party thereto under any decree or order which may be made therein, except under the authority of the Court, and on such terms as it may impose."

Limitation.—The right to apply under this rule accrues from day to day, and is not therefore barred by lapse of time. An application therefore to be added or substituted as a party under this rule may be made at any time (s).

(s) Kedarnath v. Harra Chand (1882) 8 Cal. 420 ;

Keshub Roy v. Krishto Mitter (1903) 30
Cal. 609.

Effect of adding or substituting new plaintiff or defendant under this rule.—As to this it is now provided by the Limitation Act, 1908, s. 22, that in the case of substitution or addition of any party owing to an assignment or devolution of any interest during the pendency of a suit, the suit should, as regards such party, be deemed to have been instituted when it was commenced. O. 22.
rr. 10-12.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule giving or refusing to give leave [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (1)]. Under s. 588 of the Code of 1882 an appeal was allowed only from an order giving leave to be joined as a party. But it was held that though no appeal lay under that section from an order refusing leave to be joined as a party (t), the order was appealable as a “judgment” under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent (u). It is no longer necessary to resort to the Letters Patent, having regard to the wide language of O. 43, r. 1, cl. (1).

11. [S. 582, 1st para.] In the application of this Order to appeals, so far as may be, the word “plaintiff” shall be held to include an appellant, the word “defendant” a respondent, and the word “suit” an appeal.

Application of Order to proceedings.

12. [New.] Nothing in rules 3, 4 and 8 shall apply to proceedings in execution of a decree or order.

This rule sets at rest the conflict on the question whether the provisions relating to the abatement of suits and appeals apply to proceedings in execution.

ORDER XXIII.

Withdrawal and Adjustment of Suits.

1. [S. 373.] (1) At any time after O. 23, r. 1. the institution of a suit the plaintiff may, as against all or any of the defendants, withdraw his suit or abandon part of his claim.

Withdrawal of suit or abandonment of part of claim.

(2) Where the Court is satisfied—

(a) that a suit must fail by reason of some formal defect, or

(b) that there are other sufficient grounds for allowing the plaintiff to institute a fresh suit for the subject-matter of a suit or part of a claim,

(i) Jamna Bibi v. Shaikh Jan (1902) 24 All. 582.
(u) Commercial Bank of India v. Subju Sahab |

(1900) 24 Mad. 252.

O. 23, r. 1. it may, on such terms as it thinks fit, grant the plaintiff permission to withdraw from such suit or abandon such part of a claim with liberty to institute a fresh suit in respect of the subject-matter of such suit or such part of a claim.

(3) Where the plaintiff withdraws from a suit, or abandons part of a claim, without the permission referred to in sub-rule (2), he shall be liable for such costs as the Court may award and shall be precluded from instituting any fresh suit in respect of such subject-matter or such part of the claim.

(4) Nothing in this rule shall be deemed to authorize the Court to permit one of several plaintiffs to withdraw without the consent of the others.

Sub-rule (1).—This sub-rule is new. It does not create any new right. It merely affirms the right of a plaintiff to withdraw a suit in whole or in part against all or any of the defendants, and is added here to make the rule a complete enunciation of the law relating to the withdrawal of and from suits. Sub-r. (1) contemplates a withdrawal of the suit, sub-r. (2) a withdrawal from the suit. If a party desires to withdraw from the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit he must apply to the Court under sub-r. (2) to permit him so to withdraw. If he does not desire to have that liberty, then he can withdraw the suit of his own motion under sub-r. (1) and no order of the Court is necessary (v).

Non-suit.—There is no power in the Courts of India, similar to that exercised by Courts of Equity or Common Law in England, to enter a non-suit (w).

“Formal defect”—“Or other sufficient grounds.”—A suit may fail by reason of some formal defect or it may fail on the merits. Leave may be granted under this rule where the suit must fail by reason of some formal defect or there are “other sufficient grounds” within the meaning of sub-r. (2) (b) for granting the leave (x). Thus a misjoinder of parties or of causes of action is a formal defect; so is the improper valuation of the subject-matter of a suit. In such cases leave may be granted to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit (y). Similarly, leave may be granted where a material document is not properly stamped (z), or registered (a), for these are in the nature of formal defects. But the Court has no power under this rule to grant permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit in a case where issues have been joined and the plaintiff fails to produce evidence in support of the issues, or, where evidence has been adduced, but the evidence is not such as to support the plaintiff's case; the reason is that in cases of this character the suit must fail not by reason of some formal defect, but on the merits, and the apprehension of failure in the suit cannot be said to constitute a "sufficient ground" for allowing the plaintiff to institute a fresh suit (b). "It is impossible" said Scott, C.J., in a recent case, "to lay down any exhaustive definition of what are 'sufficient grounds' within the meaning of [this rule] but I think that the Court should not allow a suit to be withdrawn after the parties are ready for trial if such withdrawal may operate to the prejudice of the defendant" (c). A fortiori, the Court should not grant leave with liberty to bring a fresh suit in a case where after the case for both the plaintiff and the defendant has been closed the Court gives time to the plaintiff to produce documents to counteract the effect of documents produced by the defendant and the plaintiff fails to produce the documents on the appointed day. The plaintiff's failure to produce the documents is not "sufficient ground" for allowing him to withdraw from the suit (d). The words "other sufficient grounds" mean grounds analogous to a "formal defect" (e).

"May grant such permission."—Where leave is granted to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit, the order must not be one dismissing the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit, but one permitting the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit (f). Where leave is refused the Court should simply dismiss the application. It should not make an order disposing of the suit on the assumption that the plaintiff would withdraw the suit if the application was refused (g). It may here be noted that the permission given by the Court must be in express terms and cannot be implied (h).

"Withdrawing without permission."—If a plaintiff withdraws from a suit without the permission of the Court, he is precluded from instituting a fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter (i). But if the subject-matter of the second suit is different from that of the first (j), or if the second suit is not against the same parties (k), the second suit will not be barred. When the parties to a suit presented a joint petition praying that the suit might be struck off, which was done, it was held that the plaintiff must be taken to have withdrawn from the suit without permission to institute a fresh suit (l).

Same subject-matter.—As stated above, if a suit is withdrawn without the permission of the Court, the plaintiff is precluded from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter. The expression "subject-matter" does not mean property. It has reference to the right in property which the plaintiff seeks to enforce. Thus in a Calcutta case, where A instituted a suit to establish his right to sell certain property in satisfaction of a decree against B, but withdrew the suit without obtaining leave to bring a fresh suit, and subsequently instituted another suit to establish his right to sell the same property in satisfaction of another decree against B, it was held that the second suit was not barred. The Court said: "Now, though the property in respect of which

O. 23, r. 1. the present suit is brought is the same as that in respect of which the former suit was brought, still that would not be sufficient to make the present suit one for the same matter as that for which the former suit was brought, within the meaning of s. 373 " (m). Similarly, when the next reversionary heir of a deceased Hindu instituted a suit against his widow and an alienee from her of her husband's property for a declaration that the alienation was not binding on him, and the widow died pending the suit, and the reversioner withdrew the suit without obtaining leave to bring a fresh suit, and subsequently brought a suit against the alienee for possession of the same property, it was held that the second suit was not barred. Wallis, C.J., in delivering the judgment of the Court, said: "The terms 'subject-matter' and 'the same matter' which occurred in the corresponding section 373 of the old Code have not been defined, and must, we think, be construed strictly in a penal provision of this character. Without attempting an exhaustive definition of all that may be included in the term 'subject-matter,' we are of opinion that where, as in the present case, the cause of action and the relief claimed in the second suit are not the same as the cause of action and the relief claimed in the first suit, the second suit cannot be considered to have been brought in respect of the same subject-matter as the first suit" (n). The contrary, however, has been held by the Chief Court of the Punjab (o). In a recent Bombay case (p), A sued to eject B. Finding, however, that there was no sufficient notice to quit, he withdrew the suit without obtaining the leave of the Court. Subsequently A gave a formal notice to quit and brought a fresh suit for ejectment. It was held that the suit was not barred under this section as the previous suit was not for the same subject-matter as the second suit, Scott, C.J., said, "We are of opinion that 'subject matter' means, to use the words of Order I, Rule 1, 'the series of acts or transactions alleged to exist giving rise to the relief claimed.' Obviously the first series of acts or transactions which formed the basis of the first suit was incomplete, or the plaintiff would have been able to prosecute his suit to decree. It was incomplete because there was no notice to quit. The second series of acts or transactions, is complete because the notice to quit has been given, and, therefore, the two suits are not in respect of the same subject-matter."

Withdrawing without leave of Court, but with consent of defendant.—In a case decided under s. 97 of the Code of 1859 it was observed by Norman, J., that where a plaintiff withdraws his suit without the permission of the Court, but with the consent of the defendant, he is not precluded from instituting a fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter (q). The observations of Norman, J., on this point have been doubted in a recent case (r). The doubt seems to be well founded.

Withdrawing with permission.—Where a suit is withdrawn with the permission of the Court, the effect is to leave the parties in the same position as that in which they stood before the suit was brought. The plaintiff can, therefore, include in the fresh suit a relief which he might have included in the first suit, but which he had omitted to include therein (s).

"On such terms as to costs."—Where leave is granted to a plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit on condition that he should pay the costs of the defendant on or before a certain date, but the amount of costs could not be ascertained before the specified date, the Court may extend the time for payment (t). In a recent case permission was granted to a plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit on the terms that he should pay Rs. 500, being the costs of the defendant. The payment of costs was made a condition precedent to the institution of a fresh suit. The plaintiff instituted a fresh suit without payment of costs, but he paid the amount of costs before the hearing of the suit. It was held that this did not make the suit void ab initio, and that the non-payment amounted to a mere irregularity which was cured by subsequent payment (u). But if the costs are not paid before the hearing, the suit must be dismissed (v).

Defendants in fresh suit.—Where a suit has abated as against one of several defendants, and it is then withdrawn with permission to bring a fresh suit, such permission does not entitle the plaintiff to join the legal representatives of the deceased defendant as party defendants to the fresh suit, the suit having abated as against him (w).

Arbitration.—When the matters in dispute in a suit are referred to arbitration by an order of the Court made under Schedule II, para. 3, the Court has no power under this rule to grant permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit. The provisions of this rule do not apply to such a case, for when once a matter is referred to arbitration, the Court is precluded from dealing with it in the same suit save in the manner and to the extent provided in Schedule II. A sues B for possession of certain property. The matters in difference between the parties are referred to arbitration by an order of the Court. The Court has no power, either before or after the award is made, to grant permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit (x). But where a reference to arbitration has been made without the intervention of the Court (that is, not by an order of the Court under Schedule II, para. 3), and one of the parties to the reference applies to the Court under Schedule II, para. 20, to file the award, the provisions of this rule are applicable, and it is open to the applicant to withdraw the application (numbered and registered as a suit under the said para. 20) under sub-r. (1) of this rule (y).

Power of appellate Court to give leave to plaintiff to withdraw from suit.—It has been held by the High Court of Bombay (z) that the present rule applies only to pending suits, and not to suits already disposed of. Therefore, where a plaintiff's suit is dismissed, and the plaintiff appeals from the decree, the appellate Court has no power to allow the plaintiff-appellant to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit on the same cause of action. On the other hand, it has been held by the Allahabad High Court, following the long-standing practice of that Court, that the appellate Court has such power (b). In a recent case a Full Bench of the Madras High Court held, after a review of all the authorities, that it is open to an appellate Court in proper cases, when reversing the decree of the lower Court, to give leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to file a fresh suit (c). The view taken by the Madras High Court is supported by the provisions of s. 107, sub-s. (2).

which otherwise could not have existed, e.g., where instead of providing merely for the maintenance of widows of deceased co-parceners they are given their respective husbands' share in the joint property, it is not open to the plaintiff who has made that concession afterwards to annul its effect by withdrawing the suit of his own free will in the appellate Court. If he does so, the proper course for the appellate Court to follow is to dismiss the appeal so as to leave the decree of the lower Court intact (d).

Appal and revision.—A decision under this rule granting leave to a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit or to abandon a part of his claim with liberty to institute a fresh suit is not a decree, and is not therefore appealable. See the last illustration on p. 5 above and the cases there cited. Since the order is not appealable, it is subject to revision if s. 115 otherwise applies to the case (e).

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that if leave is granted to a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit on a ground erroneously held by the Court granting leave to be a "sufficient ground" within the meaning of sub-r. (2), the order is one made without jurisdiction and the High Court has power to revise it under s. 115 (f). On the other hand, it has been held by the Allahabad High Court that such an order, though erroneous, is not one made without jurisdiction and that the High Court has no power to interfere in revision (g).

When an order is made under this rule granting leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit on the alleged ground of a "formal defect," but there is no defect in fact, and the order was made by the lower Court without any enquiry as to the existence of the alleged defect, the High Court may set aside the order in revision (h).

Effect of reversal of order granting leave to withdraw.—Where an order granting leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit is reversed by the High Court in revision, but before the reversal of the order a fresh suit is filed, the procedure is to declare the fresh suit null and void and to direct the lower Court to proceed with the original suit from the stage which it had reached when the order granting leave was made by that Court (i).

Does not apply.—The provisions of this rule do not apply to suits instituted under the Bengal Rent Act 10 of 1859, which is a complete Code by itself (j).

Limitation law not affected by first suit.

In any fresh suit instituted on permission granted under the last preceding rule, the plaintiff shall be bound by the law of limitation in the same manner as if the first suit had not been instituted.

withdrawn was within the period of imputation (k). But if the first suit was brought in a Court having no jurisdiction to entertain it, that Court has no power under rule 1 above to make any order under that rule. If the Court does not make an order under that rule, and gives leave to the plaintiff to withdraw the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit the order is ultra vires, and if a fresh suit is then brought, the case will be governed not by the provisions of this rule, but by sec. 14 of the Limitation Act, which provides that in computing the period of limitation the time during which a plaintiff has been prosecuting his suit in good faith in a Court having no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, shall be excluded (l).

3. [S. 375.]

Compromise of suit.

Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that a suit has been adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise, or where the defendant satisfies the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the suit, the Court shall order such agreement, compromise or satisfaction to be recorded, and shall pass a decree in accordance therewith, so far as it relates to the suit.

Alterations in the rule.—This rule differs from the corresponding s. 375 of the Code of 1882 in three respects, namely :—

1. The words "where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that" have been added into the rule to set at rest the conflict of opinion noted below in the commentary under the head "Where a compromise set up by one party is denied by the other."
2. The words "the Court shall order such agreement.....to be recorded" have been substituted for the words "such agreement.....shall be recorded." The object is to bring out the word "order" prominently, as an appeal is now given from an order made under this rule recording or refusing to record an agreement. See O. 43, r. 1, cl. (m), and notes below under the head "Appeal."
3. The words, "and such decree shall be final so far as it relates to so much of the subject-matter of the suit as is dealt with by the agreement, compromise or satisfaction," which occurred in the old section after the words "so far as it relates to the suit" have been omitted. See notes to s. 96 under the head "Sub-s. (3): consent decree not appealable."

Scope of the rule.—The agreement, compromise or satisfaction contemplated by this rule may (1) relate wholly to the suit, or (2) it may relate only to a part thereof or (3) it may also comprise matters that do not relate to the suit. Where the agreement wholly relates to the suit, the Court must, on being invited by the parties, record the agreement, and pass a decree in accordance with the agreement, and the suit stops there. Where the agreement relates to a part only of the suit, the Court must, on the application of the parties, pass a decree in accordance with the agreement, and the suit may be proceeded with as respects the rest of the suit. Where the agreement, besides relating to the suit or a part thereof, also comprises matters that do not relate to the suit, the decree must comprise only such terms of the agreement as relate to the suit, but not the rest. As to the case where a decree comprises matters not relating to the suit, see below notes "Where the decree comprises matters that do not relate to the suit."

- O. 23, r. 3. It is important to note that a consent decree under this rule can be passed only after an order is made directing the compromise to be recorded. This is not a mere matter of form, as the aggrieved party has a right of appeal against such order under O. 43, r. 1, cl. (m) (m). See notes below under the head "Appeal."

Where a compromise set up by one party is denied by the other.—Suppose that a party to a suit, alleging that the suit has been adjusted by a lawful agreement, applies to the Court to record the agreement and to pass a decree in accordance therewith. Suppose, further, that the opposite party to the suit denies that there was any such agreement as alleged, or, while admitting that there was such an agreement, alleges that he wishes to recede from it. Has the Court power, if the fact of the agreement is denied, to determine whether as a fact the alleged agreement adjusting the suit was made, and to pass a decree if it finds as a fact that the alleged agreement was made? Further, if the opposite party, while admitting that there was such an agreement, alleges that he wishes to recede therefrom, has the Court power under this rule to pass a decree in accordance with the agreement? Both these questions were, under the old section, answered in the affirmative by the High Courts of Bombay, Madras and Calcutta (n), but in the negative by the High Court of Allahabad (o). According to the Allahabad decisions, the Court had no power under the old section to record an agreement and to pass a decree in accordance therewith, unless both the parties consented before the Court to have the agreement recorded; that is to say, even where there had been an agreement to adjust the suit, the Court could act under that section only if both the parties were in agreement at the moment of moving the Court, and if they were not then in accord, the agreement could only be enforced by a fresh suit for specific performance. The conflict arose from the words "if a suit be adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise" with which s. 375 commenced. The present rule gives effect to the Bombay, Madras and Calcutta decisions. The words "where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that a suit has been adjusted wholly or in part" clearly show that the Court has power under this rule, where an agreement or compromise is denied, to decide whether, as a fact, the alleged agreement or compromise was made, and if it is satisfied that it was made, to record it (p).

Adjustment: submission and award.—It was held in two Bombay cases under the Code of 1882 that when the matters in difference in a suit are referred to arbitration without the intervention of the Court, and the arbitrator makes his award, the submission and the award may be treated as an "adjustment of the suit by an agreement" within the meaning of s. 373 of that Code, and the same may be recorded as an adjustment under that section (q). In the later of the two cases (r) Starling, J., said that it was open to the plaintiff to proceed under s. 525 [now sch. II, para. 20], but that it was not obligatory upon him to do so, as there was no express provision in the Code 1882 that no other course than that prescribed by s. 525 should be followed. The present Code does contain such a provision, for it is enacted by s. 89 that save in so far as is otherwise provided by the Arbitration Act, 1899, or by any other law for the time being in force all references to arbitration should be governed by the provisions of Schedule II. In a Bombay case, however, decided under this Code, it was held that para. 20 of Schedule II did not apply to a reference in a pending suit, and that the submission and the award could be recorded as an adjustment under this rule. As to O. 23, r. 3, s. 89, it was said, that the words "any other law for the time being in force" were wide enough to include the provisions of O. 23, r. 3 (s). Four years later the same High Court held that having regard to the provisions of s. 89 the submission and award could not be recorded as an adjustment under this rule, and that the correct procedure was to apply to the Court to file the award under paragraphs 20 and 21 of Sch. II (t). The above decisions were reviewed by Sir Norman Macleod in a recent case (u), and it was laid down that where parties enter into an agreement to refer the matters in dispute between them in a pending suit to arbitration, they may make the agreement an order of Court by an application under para. 1 of Sch. II in which case paras. 1 to 16 of that schedule would apply. They are not entitled in such a case to have the agreement filed under para. 17, or, if an award is made, to have the award filed under paras. 20 and 21. If the agreement is not made an order of Court, and if an award is made and both parties accept the award, they can apply for a consent decree in terms thereof and there is no need to apply for an order recording the terms of the adjustment. If the plaintiff disputes the award for any reason and proceeds with the suit, the defendant may plead the award and have the case set down for hearing on the issue whether the award is binding as an adjustment if the defendant disputes the award, the plaintiff may have the case set down for trial on the issue whether the adjustment could be recorded; or either party may file a suit to enforce the award, and apply for a stay of the original suit. In any event it is clear that a mere agreement to refer to arbitration matters in difference in a pending suit, where the parties have not gone beyond the agreement to refer and no award has been made, cannot be treated as an "adjustment" of the suit within the meaning of this rule (u). A decree obtained upon an award on a reference to the presiding judge and another individual must be regarded as a consent decree, and it is not subject to the provisions of the Sch. II. (v).

The agreement must be one adjusting a suit.—In the course of a suit the pleaders for both parties agreed that if a certain fact appeared upon a certain document, the Court should decree the suit, otherwise the suit should be dismissed. Held that this was not an agreement adjusting the suit within the meaning of this rule, for it was not complete, and left something to be done by the Court, viz., to ascertain whether a certain fact appeared upon a certain document (w).

Agreement to take oath under the Oaths Act 10 of 1873.—Where it is agreed in the course of the hearing of a suit between the plaintiff and the defendant that the plaintiff should take a certain oath on a certain date, and that if he did so, there should be a decree for him, but that if he failed to do so, his suit should be dismissed, and the plaintiff fails to take the oath, the agreement does not amount to an adjustment of the suit so as to entitle the defendant to have the suit dismissed. In such a case the Court should not dismiss the suit, but should record the refusal and the reasons thereof under s. 12 of the Oaths Act, and proceed with the trial of the suit (x).

Court cannot refuse to record a compromise except where it is unlawful.—Where both parties to a suit apply to the Court under this rule to pass a decree in accordance with the terms of a compromise, the Court has no power to refuse to pass the decree, merely because in its view the compromise is too

O. 23, r. 3. favourable to one of the parties (y). But if the agreement or compromise is unlawful as where it is opposed to public policy, the Court should under this rule refuse to pass a decree on the compromise even though both the parties consent thereto (z). If a decree is passed under this rule on a compromise which is not lawful, the Court should not enforce the decree in execution proceedings. Thus a sale of an office attached to a temple is against public policy. Hence if in a suit against the holder of such an office a compromise is arrived at whereby the holder of the office consents to the office being sold in satisfaction of the debt due to the plaintiff, and a decree is passed on the compromise, the Court should notwithstanding the consent decree refuse to sell the office in execution (a). It is clear that if the matter had rested in contract only, the Court could not have enforced the sale in a suit brought for that purpose. The mere fact that the contract is embodied in a decree does not alter the incidents of the contract. By private agreement, converted into a decree, parties cannot empower themselves to do that which they could not have done by private agreement alone (b). The principle is that where a decree is based on an agreement of compromise, the Court must be taken to adopt the agreement with all its incidents (c). "The contract of the parties is not the less a contract, and subject to the incidents of a contract, because there is superadded the command of a judge" (d). One of the incidents of the contract in the above case was that the Court could not have enforced the sale of the office, had a suit been brought upon the contract. That incident still remained, though the agreement was recorded and a decree passed in accordance therewith. See notes to s. 11, "Consent decree and estoppel," p. 62 above. The following are further illustrations :—

(a) B holds certain lands under a lease from A. The rent falls into arrears, and A sues B for arrears of rent and for possession. It is subsequently agreed between the parties that B should continue to hold the lands as A's tenant, but upon fresh terms arranged between the parties, and that if default should be made in payment of rent on the due dates, the lease should be forfeited [note that this last is a forfeiture clause]. A decree is passed in terms of the agreement under this rule. B commits default in payment of rent. A thereupon applies for possession of the land in execution of the decree. P offers to pay the arrears, and applies that he may be relieved against forfeiture. It is clear that if the matter had rested in contract only, the Court could have granted the relief: the right to relief would have been an incident of the contract. The mere fact, therefore, that the agreement has been recorded and a decree passed in accordance therewith, does not preclude the Court from granting relief against forfeiture (e).

(b) The facts are the same as in the above illustration, except that instead of proceeding in execution, a fresh suit is instituted by A against B for possession on default of payment of rent. The same principle applies as in the above case (f). It would seem that the proper procedure in cases where the forfeiture clause is in the form stated in ill. (a) is to enforce the forfeiture not by an application to execute the consent decree, but by a regular suit (g). The clause does no more than declare the right of forfeiture, and thus far the decree is declaratory, and it is an elementary principle that a declaratory decree can only be enforced by a suit.

It has been recently held by a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court that a compromise in a suit which comes under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879) is not bad in law because it is made without compliance with the provisions of sec. 15B of that Act (h).

Compromise of probate proceedings.—Unless a will is proved in some form, no grant of probate can be made merely on the consent of parties. Hence an agreement or compromise as regards the genuineness and due execution of a will, if its effect is to exclude evidence in proof of the will, is not “lawful” within the meaning of this rule, and no probate can be granted merely because the caveator consents to the grant. Such an agreement is against public policy, for its object is to exclude inquiry into the genuineness of the will which it is the duty of the Probate Court to make (i). Hence it is open to the caveator, before probate is granted, to withdraw from the compromise and to require that the will be proved (j). For the same reason if an executor withdraws his petition for probate, such withdrawal being pursuant to a compromise, he is not precluded by the provisions of r. 1 above from presenting another petition for probate, though the first petition was withdrawn without the permission of the Court (k).

Where the decree comprises matters that do not relate to the suit.—The decree to be passed under this rule must be confined to matters that relate to the suit. This does not mean that the decree to be passed in accordance with a compromise must be restricted to the reliefs claimed in the plaint. “All terms which form the consideration for the adjustment of the matters in dispute, whether they form the subject-matter of the suit or not, become related to the suit, and can be embodied in the decree.” Thus where A sued B on a promissory note, and a compromise was arrived at between the parties whereby B agreed to pay the amount of the note by instalments, and the amount was also made a charge on certain immoveable property of B, it was held that there was nothing in the present rule to preclude the Court from making the amount a charge on B's property, even though the relief claimed was for a money-decree only. The charge, though not claimed as a relief, related to the suit (l). It formed the consideration for the time allowed for payment of the sum decreed by instalments, and thus constituted an integral and necessary part of the adjustment of the claim in the suit (m). But where A sued B to restrain B from building a projected house in such a way as to interfere with A's enjoyment of light and air, and a compromise was arrived at between the parties whereby B undertook not to build his house higher than what it originally was, and also agreed, as regards a passage between the two houses, not to let water into the passage, it was held that the arrangement as to the passage did not relate to the suit, and that the decree should be confined to the undertaking as to the house (n). But if either party objects to the splitting of the agreement, the Court has no power to record only a part of it, unless the part sought to be recorded is quite distinct from the other, and the performance of the one is not dependent on the performance of the other (o). But the parties can get over the difficulty by amending the pleadings with the leave of the Court so as to comprise in the pleadings and the decree matters

- O. 23, r. 3. that did not relate to the original suit but are set forth in the compromise (p). In a Patna case where the plaintiff claimed Rs. 7,000 with interest at 9½ per cent. per annum, and a consent-decree was passed whereby the defendant agreed to pay Rs. 2,500 together with interest at 9 per cent. per annum if the amount was paid on a particular day, but at 24 per cent. per annum if it was paid after that date, the Court refused execution of the decree with interest at 24 per cent. on the ground that that part of the compromise was outside the scope of the suit, and allowed execution with interest at 9 per cent. only (q).

Execution of consent decree.—This rule requires that where the Court is invited to pass a decree in terms of an agreement or compromise, the agreement or compromise should be lawful; and, further, that the decree should not comprise those terms of the agreement or compromise that do not relate to the suit. Suppose now that a decree is passed on an agreement that is not lawful, or that it embraces matters that do not relate to the suit. It is clear that such a decree is not a nullity (r). But the question that requires consideration is, whether the Court is bound to execute the decree literally according to its terms? We proceed to state the effect of the decisions on the subject.

First, where a consent decree is based on an agreement or compromise that is not lawful. As to this, it has been held that "so far as the decree embodies unlawful terms of a compromise, it is inoperative, and will not be enforced" (s). This subject has already been considered in the notes above under the head "Court cannot refuse to record a compromise except where it is unlawful," p. 685 above.

Next, where a consent decree embraces matters that do not relate to the suit.—Where a consent decree includes terms of a compromise that do not relate to the suit, there is a conflict of opinion as to how far it can be executed. According to the Allahabad and Madras decisions, such terms can be enforced in execution of the decree (t). It is not open to the party against whom the decree is sought to be executed to object to the decree on the ground that it contains matters foreign to the suit. Such an objection, it has been said by the Madras High Court, must be taken by way of appeal from the decree [and now by way of appeal under O. 43, r. 1, cl. (m), from the order recording the compromise], and it cannot be taken in execution of the decree (u). On the other hand, the High Court of Calcutta has expressed the opinion that such terms cannot be enforced in execution of the decree, but they may be enforced as a contract by original suit (v). Such a suit, however, according to the Allahabad High Court, would be barred under s. 47, the question in the view taken by that Court being one relating to execution (w). In a recent case (ww) where a decree comprised matters outside the scope of the suit the Judicial Committee observed: "A perfectly proper and effectual method of carrying out the terms of [the present rule] would be for the decree to recite the whole of the agreement and then to conclude with an order relative to that part that was the subject of the suit, or it could introduce the agreement in a schedule to the decree; but in either case, although the operative part of the decree would be properly confined to the actual subject-matter of the then existing litigation, the decree taken as a whole would include the agreement. This in fact is what the decree did in the present case. It may be that as a decree it was incapable of being executed outside the limits of the district, but that does not prevent it being received in evidence of its contents." O.23, r. 3.

Appeal.—An order under this rule recording or refusing to record a compromise is appealable under O. 43, r. 1, cl. (m). The Court may, under this rule, either record a compromise or it may refuse to do so. If an order is made recording the compromise the Court must pass a decree in accordance with the agreement. If an order is made refusing to record the compromise, the suit will be proceeded with. But in either case, as stated above, an appeal will lie from the order. Where an order is made recording the agreement, the appeal may be preferred on any of the following grounds:—

1. That there was no compromise at all, or no such compromise as the Court ordered to be recorded (x).
2. That the compromise is not lawful (y).
3. That the compromise recorded by the Court comprises matters extraneous to the suit (z).

A compromise entered into by a pleader without the authority of his client is no compromise at all (a), and as such it comes under group (1) above. The mere fact that a decree has been passed in accordance with the compromise does not preclude an appeal from the order recording the compromise (b).

See notes to s. 96, under the head "Sub-section (3): consent decrees not appealable," p. 248 above, and notes above under the head "Scope of the rule."

"Registration."—In order to understand what follows it is necessary to bear in mind that a document creating or declaring a right in immoveable property of the value of Rs. 100 or upwards requires registration (Registration Act, 1908, s. 17 (1) (b)) but that a decree, though it may create or declare a right in immoveable property of that value, does not require registration [ib., s. 17 (2) (vi)]. It is also necessary to bear in mind that the present rule contemplates an agreement of a compromise commonly called sulahnamah or razinamah and that it provides for the recording of a compromise and of passing a decree in accordance with the compromise so far as it relates to the suit. It often happens that an agreement of compromise comprises not only the property in suit, but other property, and this gives rise to the following questions:—

1. A sues B for the recovery of certain immoveable properties. The parties enter into a compromise by which it is provided that B should have a moiety of the properties in suit and a moiety also of other properties which are not the subject of the suit. The latter properties are of the value of Rs. 5,000. In such a case a perfectly proper and effectual method of carrying out the terms of this rule would be for the decree to recite the whole of the agreement of compromise and then to conclude with an order relative to that part that was the subject of the suit, or it could introduce the agreement in a schedule to the decree; but in either case, although the operative part of the decree would be properly confined to the actual subject-matter of the suit, the decree taken as a whole would include the agreement (c). Suppose now that the procedure indicated above is followed, that is to say, a decree is passed including the whole agreement comprising the properties in suit as well as properties outside the suit, and that the operative part of the decree is confined to the properties in suit. Suppose, further, that neither the agreement of compromise nor the decree is registered. Suppose also that after the passing of the decree A refuses to deliver possession to B of a moiety of the properties outside the suit and that B institutes a suit against A for a declaration that he is entitled to a moiety of the properties outside the suit and for possession thereof and he relies upon the decree in support of his claim. Is the decree admissible in evidence, regard being had to the fact that it is not registered? It has been held by the Judicial Committee that it is, for as stated above it does not require registration, though it may be that it is incapable of being executed as respects properties outside the suit. As observed by the Judicial Committee, "there is a difference between receiving the decree in evidence and executing its terms as against properties outside the suit (d)."

Suppose now that the procedure indicated above is not followed and that the decree does not incorporate that portion of the compromise which relates to the properties outside the suit. In such a case the decree will not help B, and he must fall back upon the agreement of compromise. But the agreement not being registered, it cannot be admitted in evidence [Registration Act, 1908, s. 49], and B's suit must fail (e).

It may here be observed that where a document requires registration, but is not registered, the defect may be cured by the conduct of the parties in continuously acting upon it (f).

4. [S. 375A.] Nothing in this Order shall apply to any proceedings in execution of a decree or order.

Proceedings in execution of decrees not affected.

Proceedings in execution.—This rule provides that the provisions of rr. 1 and 3 shall not apply to execution proceedings. An application for execution of a decree is a proceeding in execution; the Court, therefore, has no power to allow the applicant to withdraw the application under r. 1, sub-r. (2) above with permission to make a fresh application (g). But a compromise of a suit after the passing of a preliminary decree and during the pendency of an enquiry before the Commissioner is not a compromise of a proceeding in execution. Such a compromise may therefore be recorded under r. 3 above (h).

Payment into Court with denial of liability There is no provision in this rule enabling a defendant to pay money into Court with a defence denying liability as there is in the corresponding English rule: see R. S. C., O. 22, rr. 1 and 6.

O. 24,
rr. 1, 2.

Mere willingness to pay.—A mere allegation of willingness to pay made in the written statement is not equivalent to payment into Court, and it does not stop interest from running (j).

Suit to recover debt or damages.—This order applies only to suits for “debt or damages” and not to suits of any other kind. Where a suit is instituted against a defendant to recover a debt or damages from him, he may pay into Court such amount as he considers a satisfaction in full of the plaintiff’s claim. By such Payment into Court, the defendant may derive two advantages, one in respect of interest, for which see r. 3, and the other in respect of costs, for which see r. 4 and illustrations thereto.

A suit for an injunction to restrain a defendant from building so as to interfere with the plaintiff’s light and air, but including no claim for damages, is not a suit for “debt or damages” within the meaning of this rule. In dealing with such a suit, the Court has, no doubt, a discretion under the Specific Relief Act 1 of 1877 to award damages in lieu of an injunction. This circumstance, however, does not make the suit one for “damages” within the meaning of this rule (k). It is, however, a well established practice to pay into Court money in injunction cases, and though there is no express provision for such a case in the Code in ordinary cases where no declaration of right to easements is sought, the principle underlying r. 4 ought to regulate the discretion of the Court (l).

Suit for accounts.—This rule does not apply to suits for an account (m).

Suit to recover debt or damages together with other relief.—This rule applies to suits to recover debt or damages, though there may be other reliefs claimed in the suit, e.g., injunction (n).

At any stage of the suit.—This means before decree as indicated by the words “in full of the claim” and the subsequent rules. See notes to r. 3 below, “Execution proceedings.”

2. [S. 377.] Notice of the deposit shall be given through the Court by the defendant to the plaintiff, and the amount of the deposit shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be paid to the plaintiff on his application.

Notice of deposit.

Compare R. S. C., O. 22, rr. 4 and 5.

Form.—For form of notice, see App. H., form no. 3.

“Unless the Court otherwise directs.”—These words show that the Court has the discretion to refuse to allow monies to be paid out, but that discretion is to be exercised reasonably. Where the money sued for and paid into Court is due on a promissory note, it would be unreasonable in the absence of special circumstances not to allow the plaintiff to take the money out. The fact that the payment into Court is accompanied by a denial of liability on the ground of minority is not such a

3. [S. 378.] No interest shall be allowed to the plaintiff on any sum deposited by the defendant from the date of the receipt of such notice, whether the sum deposited is in full of the claim or falls short thereof.

Interest on deposit not allowed to plaintiff after notice.

Tender.—A plea of tender before action must, to stop interest, be accompanied by a payment into Court after action, otherwise the tender is ineffectual (q).

Execution proceedings.—The principle of this rule applies to proceedings in execution; therefore, if money is paid into Court by a judgment-debtor, no interest should be allowed to the decree-holder on the amount so paid, although such amount may not in fact be the whole amount due under the decree (r).

4. [S. 379.] (1) Where the plaintiff accepts such amount as satisfaction in part only of his claim, he may prosecute his suit for the balance; and, if the Court decides that the deposit by the defendant was a full satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, the plaintiff shall pay the costs of the suit incurred after the deposit and the costs incurred previous thereto, so far as they were caused by excess in the plaintiff's claim.

Procedure where plaintiff accepts deposit as satisfaction in part.

(2) Where the plaintiff accepts such amount as satisfaction in full of his claim, he shall present to the Court a statement to that effect, and such statement shall be filed, and the Court shall pronounce judgment accordingly; and, in directing by whom the costs of each party are to be paid, the Court shall consider which of the parties is most to blame for the litigation.

Procedure where he accepts it as satisfaction in full.

The Court should order him to pay A's costs.

Compare R. S. C., O. 22, r. 6.

Apportionment of costs.—Where the suit is not one “to recover debt or damages” within the meaning of r. 1, the Court has a discretion to apportion the costs (s). See notes to r. 1, “Suit to recover debt or damages,” p. 691 above.

ORDER XXV.

Security for Costs.

1. [Ss. 380, 382.] (1) Where, at any stage of a suit, O. 25, O. 25, r. 1.

When security for costs may be required from plaintiff.

r. 1, it appears to the Court that a sole plaintiff, or (when there are more plaintiffs than one) that all the plaintiffs are residing out of British India, and that such plaintiff does not, or that no one of such plaintiff does, possess any sufficient immoveable property within British India other than the property in suit, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any defendant order the plaintiff or plaintiffs, within a time fixed by it, to give security for the payment of all costs incurred and likely to be incurred by any defendant.

(2) Whoever leaves British India under such circumstances as to afford reasonable probability that he will not be forthcoming whenever he may be called upon to pay costs shall be deemed to be residing out of British India within the meaning of sub-rule (1).

Residence out of British India.

(3) On the application of any defendant in a suit for the payment of money, in which the plaintiff is a woman, the Court may at any stage of the suit make a like order if it is satisfied that such plaintiff does not possess any sufficient immoveable property within British India.

O. 25, r. 1. Object of the rule.—The object of the rule is to provide for the protection of defendants in certain cases where, in the event of success, they may have difficulty in realizing their costs from the plaintiff (i).

Application of the rule.—Security for the costs of a defendant may be required from a plaintiff in the following two cases :—

- I. (a) Where the plaintiff resides out of British India, or where there are two or more plaintiffs, all the plaintiffs reside out of British India; and
 (b) where none of the plaintiffs has sufficient immoveable property within British India other than the property in suit.
- II. (a) Where the plaintiff is a woman ;
 (b) where her suit is for the payment of money; and
 (c) she does not possess sufficient immoveable property within British India.

Discretion of Court in requiring security for costs from non-resident plaintiffs.—The word “may” implies discretion. In the exercise of this discretion the Court will not order security for costs from a plaintiff residing out of British India in cases in which he cannot be rendered liable for the defendant's costs, e.g., an administration suit by the plaintiff as a creditor or a legatee in which the plaintiff's claim is admitted, or a suit on a mortgage or a promissory note where there is no defence. In such cases no security for costs will be ordered even though the plaintiff resides out of British India, and has not sufficient immoveable property within British India, not even though the plaintiff be a woman (u).

Resides.—The mere presence in British territory at the time of suit is not “residence” (v). See notes to s. 16, “Actually and voluntarily resides,” p. 80 above.

British India.—The Cantonment of Wadhwan in Kathiawar is not within British India (w); nor is the Cantonment of Secunderabad (x); nor is Rajkot Civil Station (y). See notes to s. 1, “British India,” p. 2 above.

Does not possess sufficient immoveable property.—A plaintiff who is entitled under a will to a beneficial interest in a part of the surplus income derived from immoveable property cannot be said to possess immoveable property within the meaning of this rule (z).

Poverty of plaintiff.—Mere poverty is no ground for requiring the plaintiff to give security for costs of the suit (a); it is otherwise when he is not the real litigant, but is suing on behalf of another who is not a party to the suit (b). In a recent Bombay case, a suit was brought by a Parsi father and his minor daughter as plaintiffs for damages for the defendant's breach of his promise to marry the daughter. The father was an undischarged insolvent, and it was alleged that the suit was really the father's suit and that he was seeking to make money out of his daughter's engagement. The Court upon these grounds ordered the father to furnish security for the costs of the defendant (c).

Where leave granted to plaintiff to sue as a pauper.—The Court has no power under this rule to require security for costs from a person to whom leave has been granted under O. 33, r. 8, to sue as a pauper, for to do so would be to render nugatory the order under O. 33, r. 8 (d). If an order is made requiring a plaintiff to furnish security for the costs of the defendant, and leave is subsequently granted to the plaintiff to continue the suit as a pauper, the order ceases to operate as regards antecedent costs, provided the leave was granted before the time limited for giving security has expired (e).

Where the plaintiff is a woman.—The necessity for the provisions of sub-r. (3) arises from the provisions of s. 56, by which it is enacted that no woman can be arrested or detained in the civil prison in execution of a decree for the payment of money (f). But the Court has a discretion in the matter, and in the exercise of its discretion, it will not as a general rule require security for costs from a woman plaintiff, if the result of such an order will be practically to defeat the suit where it has been instituted bona fide and has become almost ripe for hearing (g).

Where the plaintiff is a minor.—The power as to requiring security for costs is a discretionary one, and except in exceptional cases, neither a minor plaintiff nor his or her next friend should be required to give security for costs (h), not even if both the minor and his next friend are residing out of British India and do not own immoveable property in British India (i).

Suit for the payment of money.—Suits which are not exclusively for the payment of money, but which will result in a decree for the payment of money on the relief sought, are suits for the payment of money within the meaning of this rule (j). Thus a suit to recover possession of specific moveable property (e.g., ornaments), or in the alternative the money value of such property, is a suit for the payment of money within the meaning of this rule (k).

Cross-claim and security for costs.—There is no hard and fast rule of practice which prevents the Court from making an order for security for costs against a person residing out of British India who, upon being sued in British India, sets up a cross-claim, either by counter-claim or by cross-suit. It is for the Court to consider, in the exercise of its discretion, whether, having regard to the circumstances of the particular case, the cross-claim must be treated as made, substantially, by way of defence to the suit against the claimant, or whether it must be regarded as being substantially in the nature of an independent claim made in respect of matters foreign to that suit, and therefore one with regard to which security for costs ought to be ordered to be given (l).

Appeal.—An order under this rule made by a High Court requiring a plaintiff to give security for the costs of a suit is a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent, and is therefore appealable (m).

Other cases in which security for costs may be required under the Code.—See O. 22, r. 8 [plaintiff's insolvency]; O. 37, r. 4 [summary suit on negotiable instruments]; O. 41, r. 5 [security on stay of execution]; O. 41, r. 6 [security where

rr. 1, 2. and O. 45, r. 7 [security on grant of certificate of leave to appeal to the Privy Council].

2. [S. 381.] (1) In the event of such security not being furnished within the time fixed, the Court shall make an order dismissing the suit unless the plaintiff or plaintiffs are permitted to withdraw therefrom.

Effect of failure to furnish security.

(2) Where a suit is dismissed under this rule, the plaintiff may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, and, if it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from furnishing the security within the time allowed, the Court shall set aside the dismissal upon such terms as to security, costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

(3) The dismissal shall not be set aside unless notice of such application has been served on the defendant.

Res judicata.—A plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed under this rule for failure to furnish security is not precluded from pleading the subject-matter of such suit in answer to any other suit instituted against him (n), or from instituting a fresh suit on the same cause of action (o). A sues B for the cancellation of a promissory note alleging that the note was obtained by fraud. The suit is dismissed under this rule for failure to furnish security. This does not preclude A from instituting a fresh suit for the cancellation of the note, nor does it preclude him, if a suit is brought against him by B to recover the amount of the note, from pleading fraud in answer to such suit.

Limitation.—An application by a plaintiff for an order to set aside a dismissal for failure to furnish security for costs must be made within 30 days from the date of dismissal [Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I., art. 163].

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule rejecting an application (in a case open to appeal) for an order to set aside the dismissal of a suit [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (n)].

ORDER XXVI.

Commissions.

Commissions to examine witnesses.

O. 26, r. 1.

1. [S. 383.]

Cases in which Court may issue commission to examine witness.

Any Court may in any suit issue a commission for the examination on interrogatories or otherwise of any person resident within the local limits of its jurisdiction

(n) Rungraw v. Sidhi Mahomed (1882) 6 Bom. 452. | (o) Hariram v. Lalbat (1902) 26 Bom. 687 who is exempted under this Code from attending the Court or who is from sickness or infirmity unable to attend it. O. 26, rr. 1-3.

Power of Court to issue commissions.—See s. 75 above.

Cases in which commissions may be issued.—A commission can only be issued in the cases specified in this rule and rules 4 and 5 below, and in no other case. Therefore, a commission should not be issued for the examination of the head of a mutt, though it may be alleged by him that it is derogatory to a person in his position to appear personally in Court as a witness. But where the other side applies to the Court to summon the head of a mutt as a witness for him, the Court may, if it thinks that the application is vexatious, refuse the application and allow the head of the mutt to be examined on commission (p).

Persons exempted from attending the Court.—Amongst those so exempted are women who, according to the custom and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public (see s. 132). Such women ought to be examined on commission, even though they may have appeared in public before (q) and though an allegation of immorality is made against them (r). A woman may have entirely abandoned the protection of the purda, and yet she may be exempted under s. 132 from giving evidence in Court, if the Court is satisfied having regard to the class and community to which she belongs that she should not be compelled to appear in the witness-box (s). A religious preceptor is not one of the persons exempted from attending the Court (t).

Arbitration.—It is competent to the Court to issue a commission for the examination of witnesses, though the matters in difference in the suit have been referred to arbitration under Schedule II of this Code (u).

Appeal.—See notes to rule 4 below, “Appeal.”

2. [S. 384.] An order for the issue of a commission for the examination of a witness may be made by the Court either of its own motion or on the application, supported by affidavit or otherwise, of any party to the suit or of the witness to be examined.

Order for commission.

3. [S. 385.] A commission for the examination of a person who resides within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same may be issued to any person whom the Court thinks fit to execute.

(u) Rabiabai v. Rahimabai (1905) 7 Bom. L. R. 560.

O. 26, r. 4.

Persons for whose examination commission may issue.

4. [S. 386.] (1) Any Court may in any suit issue a commission for the examination of—

- (a) any person resident beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction ;
- (b) any person who is about to leave such limits before the date on which he is required to be examined in Court ; and
- (c) any civil or military officer of the Government, who cannot, in the opinion of the Court, attend without detriment to the public service.

(2) Such commission may be issued to any Court, not being a High Court, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person resides, or to any pleader or other person whom the Court issuing the commission may appoint.

(3) The Court on issuing any commission under this rule shall direct whether the commission shall be returned to itself or to any subordinate Court.

Form.—For form of commission to examine absent witness, see App. H, form no. 7.

May issue.—The Court has a discretion to grant or refuse a commission (v). But the discretion must be exercised judicially (w). If the Court fails to exercise the discretion judicially, such failure of itself is not a ground for interfering with the decree in appeal: the appellate Court should not interfere, unless it is shown that, if the lower Court had exercised the discretion judicially, the decision would have been different from what it was (x). As to the right of appeal, see note below under the head "Appeal."

Commission for the examination of witnesses.—A commission will be granted almost as a matter of course for the examination of a material witness (y).

Plaintiff asking for a commission to examine himself.—Suppose a plaintiff, residing in Delhi, institutes a suit in Bombay, and then applies to the Bombay Court for the issue of a commission for his examination in Delhi. In such a case the Court will refuse the application unless a very strong case is made out, because the Bombay Tribunal is chosen by the plaintiff himself (z).

Defendant asking for a commission to examine himself.—The case, however, is different, where the application is made by a defendant, and especially a defendant lawfully resident out of the jurisdiction, according to the ordinary course of his life and business. The Court will not regard the case of a defendant with the same strictness as the case of a plaintiff (a). See preceding paragraph.

rr. 4-7

Appeal.—It was held at one time by the High Court of Madras that an appeal lies under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent from an order directing the issue of a commission (b) as well as from an order refusing a commission (c). But those decisions have since been disapproved by a Full Bench of the same High Court (d). In Bombay, it has been held that no appeal lies from an order directing the issue of a commission, the reason given being that such an order is not a “judgment” within the meaning of the said clause (e).

5. [S. 387.] Where any Court to which application is made for the issue of a commission for the examination of a person residing at any place not within British India is satisfied that the evidence of such person is necessary, the Court may issue such commission or a letter of request.

Commission or request to examine witness not within British India.

“Or a letter of request.”—These words are new. See s. 77 above. For form of letter of request, see App. H, form no. 8.

Evidence of a foreign witness.—Evidence of a foreign witness taken in foreign territory (e.g., Chandernagore) under a commission issued under this rule, and executed in accordance with the provisions of r. 17 below, is clearly admissible (f).

Revision.—An order made under this rule refusing the issue of a commission is not subject to revision under s. 115 (g).

6. [S. 388.] Every Court receiving a commission for the examination of any person shall examine him or cause him to be examined pursuant thereto.

Court to examine witness pursuant to commission.

Examination on commission.—A party who has not joined in a commission is entitled to cross-examine the witness examined under the commission (h). Evidence taken on commission without full opportunity for complete cross-examination should not be admitted (i). But where the Court is satisfied that the cross-examination of any witness on commission is being unnecessarily prolonged, it will order such cross-examination to be concluded within a certain time (j).

7. [S. 389.] Where a commission has been duly executed, it shall be returned, together with the evidence taken under it, to the Court from which it was issued, unless the order for issuing the commission has otherwise thereto and the evidence taken under it shall (subject to the provisions of the next following rule) form part of the record of the suit.

Evidence taken on commission shall form part of the record of the suit.—See notes to r. 8 below, "Reading depositions in evidence."

8. [S. 390.] Evidence taken under a commission shall not be read as evidence in the suit without the consent of the party against whom the same is offered unless—

When depositions may be read in evidence.

(a) the person who gave the evidence is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, or dead or unable from sickness or infirmity to attend to be personally examined, or exempted from personal appearance in Court, or is a civil or military officer of the Government who cannot, in the opinion of the Court, attend without detriment to the public service, or

(b) the Court in its discretion dispenses with the proof of any of the circumstances mentioned in clause (a), and authorizes the evidence of any person being read as evidence in the suit, notwithstanding proof that the cause for taking such evidence by commission has ceased at the time of reading the same.

"Or is a civil or military officer..public service."—These words which occur in cl. (a) are new.

Reading depositions in evidence.—According to the practice prevailing on the Original Side of the High Court of Calcutta, evidence taken on commission is not treated as evidence in the suit until the same has been tendered and read as evidence in the suit by the party on whose behalf it has been taken. It therefore follows that evidence taken under a commission at the instance of one party cannot be used by the opposite party until it is tendered and read as evidence by the party on whose behalf it has been taken (k). On the other hand, the practice in the Courts in the mofussil of Calcutta is to treat the deposition of a witness examined on commission as evidence in the case even though it has not been formally tendered, and this practice has been said to be not only perfectly consistent, but also in strict accordance with the provisions of rules 7 and 8 (l).

Admissibility of documents.—Where a document is produced before a Commissioner, and no objection is taken to its admissibility, no such objection can be taken before the Court hearing the suit to which the commission is returned (m). But if the admissibility of the document is objected to before the Commissioner, the party who has objected to the admissibility of the document before the Commissioner on one ground is not precluded from objecting to its admissibility before the Court on any other ground (n).

Commissions for local investigations.

9. [S. 392.] In any suit in which the Court deems a local investigation to be requisite or proper for the purpose of elucidating any matter in dispute, or of ascertaining the market value of any property, or the amount of any mesne profits or damages or annual net profits, the Court may issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit directing him to make such investigation and to report thereon to the Court :

Commissions to make local investigation.

Provided that, where the Local Government has made rules as to the persons to whom such commission shall be issued, the Court shall be bound by such rules.

Alteration in the rule.—The words “and the same cannot be conveniently conducted by the judge in person,” which occurred in the old section after the words “net profit,” have been omitted in this rule.

Commissions for local investigations.—This rule does not authorise a Court to delegate to a Commissioner the trial of any material issue which it is bound to try (o).

In a suit as to a right of way a commissioner was appointed under this rule to prepare a map of the locality in question. Held that the statements of the village officers made to him with regard to the right of way were inadmissible in evidence (p).

Amount of profits.—The report of a commissioner appointed by a Court of Revenue to ascertain the amount of actual collection in a suit for profits under s. 164 of the Agra Tenancy Act is admissible in evidence having regard to this rule and rules 16, 17 and 18 (q).

Form.—For form of commission for local investigation, see App. H, form no. 9.

10. [393.] (1) The Commissioner, after such local inspection as he deems necessary and after reducing to writing the evidence taken by him, shall return such evidence, together with his report in writing signed by him, to the Court.

O. 26,
rr. 10-12.

(2) The report of the Commissioner and the evidence taken by him (but not the evidence without the report) shall be evidence in the suit and shall form part of the record; but the Court, or, with the permission of the Court, any of the parties to the suit, may examine the Commissioner personally in open Court touching any of the matters referred to him or mentioned in his report, or as to his report, or as to the manner in which he has made the investigation.

Report and depositions to be evidence in suits.

Commissioner may be examined in person.

(3) Where the Court is for any reason dissatisfied with the proceedings of the Commissioner, it may direct such further inquiry to be made as it shall think fit.

Alterations in the rule.—The words “or as to his report” in sub-rule (2) after the words “mentioned in his report,” are new. Sub-rule (3) is also new.

Further evidence after Commissioner's report.—This rule does not contemplate the tender of further evidence after the Commissioner's report, except the examination of the Commissioner himself, but it does not forbid it. It is consistent with either course, and the point must be decided on general principles according to the facts of each case (r).

Commissions to examine accounts.

11. [S. 394.] In any suit in which an examination or adjustment of accounts is necessary, the Court may issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit directing him to make such examination or adjustment.

Commission to examine or adjust accounts.

Commission to examine account.—The commissioner to whom a suit is referred by a Judge on the original side of the High Court of Bombay is entitled to decide questions of law which may arise while taking accounts (s).

Form.—For form of commission to examine accounts, see App. H, form no. 9.

12. [S. 395.] (1) The Court shall furnish the Commissioner with such part of the proceedings and such instructions as appear necessary, and the instructions shall distinctly specify whether the Commissioner is merely to transmit the proceedings which he may hold on the inquiry, or also to report his own opinion on the point referred for his examination.

Court to give Commissioner necessary instructions.

- (2) The proceedings and report (if any) of the Commissioner shall be evidence in the suit, but where the Court has reason to be dissatisfied with them, it may direct such further inquiry as it shall think fit.
- Proceedings and report to be evidence, Court may direct further inquiry.
- O. 26, rr. 12-14.

Commissions to make partitions.

13. [S. 396, 1st para.] Where a preliminary decree for partition has been passed, the Court may, in any case not provided for by section 54, issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit to make the partition or separation according to the rights as declared in such decree.
- Commission to make partition of immoveable property.

Alteration in the rule.—The singular “person” has been substituted for the plural “persons.” Under the old section it was held that the use of the plural “persons” showed that the Court could not issue a commission to make partitions to a single Commissioner (t). The substitution of the singular “person” for the plural “persons” clearly shows that under the present rule the commission may be issued to a single Commissioner.

Form.—For form of commission to make a partition, see App. H, form no. 10.

14. [S. 396, 2nd and 3rd paras.] (1) The Commissioner shall, after such inquiry as may be necessary, divide the property into as many shares as may be directed by the order under which the commission was issued, and shall allot such shares to the parties, and may, if authorized thereto by the said order, award sums to be paid for the purpose of equalizing the value of the shares.
- Procedure of Commissioner.

(2) The Commissioner shall then prepare and sign a report or the Commissioners (where the commission was issued to more than one person and they cannot agree) shall prepare and sign separate reports appointing the share of each party and distinguishing each share (if so directed by the said order) by metes and bounds. Such report or reports shall be annexed to the commission and transmitted to the Court: and the Court, after hearing any objections which the parties may make to the report or reports, shall confirm, vary or set aside the same.

O. 26,
rr. 14-17.

(3) Where the Court confirms or varies the report or reports it shall pass a decree in accordance with the same as confirmed or varied ; but where the Court sets aside the report or reports it shall either issue a new commission or make such other order as it shall think fit.

Alterations in the rule.—The words “shall confirm, vary or set aside the same” at the end of sub-rule (2), and the whole of sub-rule (3), have been substituted for the words “shall either quash the same and issue a new commission, or (where the Commissioners agree in their report) pass a decree in accordance therewith.” Under the wording of the old section it was held that the Court must either accept the report or reject the report, and that it had no power to vary it (u). The word “vary” has been added into sub-rule (2) to enable the Court to modify the report in a proper case.

Resistance to Commissioner.—Where a commission has been issued to make a partition, the circumstance that the plaintiff or his agent resists the Commissioner is not sufficient to justify the dismissal of the suit (v).

General provisions.

15. [S. 397.] Before issuing any commission under this Order, the Court may order such sum (if any) as it thinks reasonable for the expenses of the commission to be, within a time to be fixed, paid into Court by the party at whose instance or for whose benefit the commission is issued.

Expenses of commission to be paid into Court.

16. [S. 398.] Any Commissioner appointed under this Order may, unless otherwise directed by the order of appointment,— Powers of Commissioners.

- (a) examine the parties themselves and any witness whom they or any of them may produce, and any other person whom the Commissioner thinks proper to call upon to give evidence in the matter referred to him ;
- (b) call for and examine documents and other things relevant to the subject of inquiry ;
- (c) at any reasonable time enter upon or into any land or building mentioned in the order.

17. [S. 399.] (1) The provisions of this Code relating to the summoning, attendance and examination of witnesses, and to the remuneration of, and penalties to be imposed upon witnesses, shall apply to persons required

Attendance and examination of witnesses before Commissioner.

to give evidence or to produce documents under this Order whether the commission in execution of which they are so required has been issued by a Court situate within or by a Court situate beyond the limits of British India, and for the purposes of this rule the Commissioner shall be deemed to be a Civil Court. O. 26,
rr. 17, 18.

(2) A Commissioner may apply to any Court (not being a High Court) within the local limits of whose jurisdiction a witness resides for the issue of any process which he may find it necessary to issue to or against such witness, and such Court may, in its discretion, issue such process as it considers reasonable and proper.

Sub-rule (a).—This sub-rule is new. It enables the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction a witness resides to issue a summons for his examination on the application of the Commissioner. In the absence of any such provision in the old section, it was held that where a witness failed to appear before a Commissioner pursuant to a notice issued by him, the only course left open to the Commissioner was to return the commission to the Court from which it was issued, and the latter Court would then send the commission to the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the witness to be examined resided (w).

18. [S. 400.] (1) Where a commission is issued under this Order, the Court shall direct that the Parties to appear before Commissioner. parties to the suit shall appear before the Commissioner in person or by their agents or pleaders.

(2) Where all or any of the parties do not so appear the Commissioner may proceed in their absence.

Form.—See App. H, form no. 7.

rr. 1-3. (2) The authority shall be in writing and shall be signed by the officer or soldier in the presence of (a) his commanding officer, or the next subordinate officer, if the party is himself the commanding officer, or (b) where the officer or soldier is serving in military staff employment, the head or other superior officer of the office in which he is employed. Such commanding or other officer shall countersign the authority which shall be filed in Court.

(3) When so filed the countersignature shall be sufficient proof that the authority was duly executed, and that the officer or soldier by whom it was granted could not obtain leave of absence for the purpose of prosecuting or defending the suit in person.

Explanation.—In this Order the expression “commanding officer” means the officer in actual command for the time being of any regiment, corps, detachment or depot to which the officer or soldier belongs.

2. [S. 466.] Any person authorized by an officer or a soldier to prosecute or defend a suit in his stead may prosecute or defend it in person in the same manner as the officer or soldier could do if present; or he may appoint a pleader to prosecute or defend the suit on behalf of such officer or soldier.

Person so authorized may act personally or appoint pleader.

3. [S. 467.] Processes served upon any person authorized by an officer or a soldier under rule 1 or upon any pleader appointed as aforesaid by such person shall be as effectual as if they had been served on the party in person.

Service on person so authorized or on his pleader, to be good service.

ORDER XXIX.

Suits by or against Corporations.

O. 29, r. 1. 1. [S. 435.] In suits by or against a corporation any pleading may be signed and verified on behalf of the corporation by the secretary or by any director or other principal officer of the corporation who is able to depose to the facts of the case.

Subscription and verification of pleading.

Companies authorized to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or trustee.—All reference has been omitted in this and the next following rule to companies authorised to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or of a trustee, as such companies must be very few, if, indeed, any exist.

Foreign corporation.—The procedure prescribed by this rule applies to foreign corporations as well. It is not necessary before a foreign corporation can claim the benefit of this rule that it must be registered under the Indian Companies' Act or under an Act of Parliament (x). Thus a plaint in a suit by the Singer Manufacturing Company, which is a company incorporated in the United States, may be verified by an agent holding a general power-of-attorney from the company as a "principal officer" of the company within the meaning of this rule (y).

Suit by an unregistered or unincorporated Society.—A suit by an unregistered or unincorporated society must be brought in the names of all the members of the society (z). Where there are numerous members, the suit may be instituted by one or more of them with the permission of the Court on behalf of all [O. 1, r. 8].

Suit by or against a registered company.—A suit by or against a registered company must be instituted in the name of the company. A suit against two companies described as "the India General S. N. and R. Co., Ltd., and the Rivers S. N. Co., Ltd., by their joint agent A. E. Rogers," is substantially a suit against Rogers and it is in contravention of the provisions of this rule. The words "by their joint agent A. E. Rogers" should be omitted (a).

Other principal officer of the corporation.—The manager at Lucknow of the local branch of the Delhi and London Bank was authorized by a power of attorney to manage the affairs of the Bank, and to substitute any person for himself. In pursuance of this power he gave a power of attorney to the accountant of the Bank to manage the affairs of the Bank, but such power omitted words giving authority to sue. Held that the accountant was, under the circumstances, the principal officer of the Bank, and that he could, as such, sign and verify the plaint in a suit filed by the Bank (b).

"Who is able to depose to the facts of the case."—Where a plaint or written statement is signed and verified by a director, secretary or other principal officer of a corporation, it must be stated in the plaint that he is a director, secretary or principal officer of the Company, and that he is able to depose to the facts of the case. If there is no such statement in the plaint or written statement, the plaint or written statement should not be admitted, unless the defect is made good by an affidavit containing such statement (c).

Dismissal of suit.—Where in the case of a suit by a corporation, the plaint is signed and verified by an officer other than a principal officer of the corporation, the suit should be dismissed (d). Similarly, the suit should be dismissed, if in the case of an unregistered or unincorporated society, the suit is brought in the names of some only of the members of the society (e). See notes above.

- (a) on the secretary, or on any director, or other principal officer of the corporation, or
- (b) by leaving it or sending it by post addressed to the corporation at the registered office, or if there is no registered office then at the place where the corporation carries on business.

Service by post.—The language of the old section has been enlarged so as to allow of service by post on corporations, and by this means the rule is brought into line with the provisions of s. 148 of the Indian Companies Act 7 of 1913.

3. [S. 436, last para.] The Court may, at any stage of the suit, require the personal appearance of the secretary or of any director, or other principal officer of the corporation who may be able to answer material questions relating to the suit.

ORDER XXX.

Suits by or against Firms and Persons carrying on business in names other than their own.

O 30, r. 1.

1. [New. R. S. C., O. 48A, r. I.] (1) Any two or more persons claiming or being liable as partners and carrying on business in British India may sue or be sued in the name of the firm (if any) of which such persons were partners at the time of the accruing of the cause of action, and any party to a suit may in such case apply to the Court for a statement of the names and addresses of the persons who were, at the time of the accruing of the cause of action, partners in such firm, to be furnished and verified in such manner as the Court may direct.

Suing of partners in name of firm.

- (2) Where persons sue or are sued as partners in the name of their firm under sub-rule (1), it shall, in the case of any pleading or other document required by or under this Code to be signed, verified or certified by the plaintiff or the defendant, suffice if such pleading or other document is O. 30, r. 1. signed, verified or certified by any one of such persons.

Additions made into this rule by the Chief Court of the Punjab.—See Appendix V below.

Suit by or against firms.—The whole of this Order is new. It is a reproduction almost verbatim of the principal rules comprised in O. 48A of the English rules. The rules as to the attachment of partnership property and the execution of decrees against firms will be found in O. 21, rr. 49 and 50 above.

In applying English decisions under the corresponding rules in England, it must be remembered that there is a distinction between the English and the Indian law as to the liability of partners. According to the English law, the liability is joint; according to the Indian law, it is joint and several. See Indian Contract Act, 1872, ss. 42 to 45.

This Order deals with the mode of suing firms. Rule 1 provides that two or more persons claiming or being liable as partners may sue or be sued in the firm name. Rule 3 provides that where a suit is instituted by partners in the name of their firm, the plaintiffs shall, on demand in writing by the defendant, declare in writing the names and places of residence of the partners. If the plaintiffs fail to comply with the demand, the Court may stay further proceedings. If the demand is complied with, the suit will proceed as if all the partners had been named as plaintiffs in the plaint. As regards signature and verification where a suit is brought in a firm name, it is provided by r. 1, sub-r. (2), that it will suffice if the pleading or any other document required to be signed or verified is signed or verified by any one of the partners: it is not necessary that all the partners should sign or verify it. As regards appearance in a suit brought against a firm, it is to be noted that a firm cannot appear as a firm, and the partners should therefore appear individually in their own names, but all subsequent proceedings should continue in the name of the firm (r. 6). Where a suit is brought against a firm, no partner can put in a personal defence (f). He can only file a written statement for and in the name of the firm. The decree also must be in the name of the firm (g), though all the partners may not have appeared (h). As to execution of a decree passed against a firm, see O. 21, r. 50.

Rule 9 applies to suits between co-partners, and rule 10 to suits against a person carrying on business in a name other than his own name.

“Any two or more persons.”—The fact that one of the members of a partnership, which is sued in the firm name, is a minor does not prevent judgment being obtained against the firm and execution issuing thereon against the property of the partnership (i). But execution cannot issue against the separate property of the minor (j).

“At the time of the accruing of the cause of action”—These words show that a suit may be brought by or against a firm in the firm name though the firm may have been dissolved before the date of the suit, provided the cause of action arose before dissolution (k).

“Carrying on business in British India.”—This rule applies to all partnerships carrying on business in British India. Therefore a firm which carries on business in British India may be sued in the firm name under this rule, although it be a foreign firm the members of which are resident out of the jurisdiction (l). "The only question to be considered in order to see whether the case comes within the rule is whether the firm carries on business [in British India]" (m). If it does, the partners may be sued in the firm name. If it does not, the partners cannot be sued in the firm name (n). The expression "carry on business" has no special legal meaning. It must be interpreted in the ordinary business sense (o). A firm in England cannot be said to carry on business in Bombay, merely because it has employed an agent in Bombay to collect orders for the firm, the agent having no authority to accept or reject the orders (p); it does not make any difference that the name of the firm is affixed to the agent's office (q). See notes to s. 16, "Carries on business," p. 81.

Statement of names and addresses.—Rule 2 enables a defendant to obtain disclosure of the names of the partners in a plaintiff firm by a statement in writing by the plaintiffs or their pleader: Under r. 1 any party to the suit may apply to the Court for a statement of the names of the partners in the plaintiff or defendant firm to be furnished and verified in such manner as the Court may direct (r). "It is perhaps not altogether easy to reconcile the two rules, but r. 2 is applicable to the case only of plaintiffs, whereas r. 1 applies generally" (s). Where an affidavit has been filed under r. 1 or a declaration made under r. 2, the Court has no power to require the deponent or declarant to attend to be cross-examined on the affidavit or declaration, nor has the Court any power to direct the separate trial of an issue as to whether a person whose name has been disclosed in the affidavit or declaration was a partner in the firm at the time the cause of action accrued (t). But the statement of names disclosed in the affidavit or declaration will be treated as embodied in the plaint and will be a necessary part of the cause of action, and if the plaintiffs fail in establishing it, the suit will fail (u).

Suit by or against individual partners.—See Indian Contract Act 1872, ss. 43 and 45.

2. [New. R. S. C., O. 48 A, r. 2.] (1) Where a suit is instituted by partners in the name of their firm, the plaintiffs or their pleader shall, on demand in writing by or on behalf of any defendant, forthwith declare in writing the names and places of residence of all the persons constituting the firm on whose behalf the suit is instituted.

(2) Where the plaintiffs or their pleader fail to comply with any demand made under sub-rule (1), all proceedings in the suit may, upon an application for that purpose, be stayed, upon such terms as the Court may direct.

(3) Where the names of the partners are declared in the manner referred to in sub-rule (1), the suit shall proceed in the same manner, and the same consequences in all respects

Disclosure of partners' names.—See notes to r. 1 above, "Statement of names and addresses," p. 712. If the plaintiff firm has not made a full disclosure of their partners, the proper procedure is not to dismiss the suit, but to allow the firm to put in a further declaration making a full disclosure, and thus remedy the defect (v).

Proceedings to continue in name of firm.—See notes to r. 6 below, "Subsequent proceedings to continue in name of firm."

3. [New. R. S. C., O. 48 A, r. 3.] Where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm the Service. summons shall be served either—

- (a) upon any one or more of the partners, or
- (b) at the principal place at which the partnership business is carried on within British India upon any person having, at the time of service, the control or management of the partnership business there, as the Court may direct; and such service shall be deemed good service upon the firm so sued, whether all or any of the partners are within or without British India :

Provided that, in the case of a partnership which has been dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit, the summons shall be served upon every person within British India whom it is sought to make liable.

Service of summons.—This rule is to be read with r. 1 above and with O. 21, r. 50. It applies only to suits against partners in the name of their firm. It provides a special mode of service upon firms carrying on business in British India, whether the partners reside within or without British India (w). One mode of service authorized by the rule is service upon any one or more of the partners; the other is service at the principal place of business of the partnership, within British India, upon the manager of such business. If the summons is not served in either of these ways, the service is irregular (x). If it is served in either of these ways, the service is good service upon

O. 30, r. 3. the firm whether all or any of the partners are within or without British India. The service being good service upon the firm, any decree that may be passed in the suit against the firm may be executed against the property of the firm or partnership.

If the service is effected in the first mode prescribed by the rule, that is, if the service is upon a partner it is good service upon the firm as well as upon that partner personally, but it is not service upon any other member of the firm so as to make such member "a person who has been individually served as a partner," etc., within O. 21, r. 50, sub-r. (1), cl. (c). If the service is effected in the second mode prescribed by the rule, that is, upon a manager at the place of partnership business, and the manager is not a partner, the service, no doubt, is good service upon the firm, but it is not service upon any member of the firm so as to make such member "a person who has been individually served as a partner," etc., within O. 21, r. 50, sub-r. (1), cl. (c) (y). This distinction is important for the purposes of execution, for, as we have seen in O. 21, r. 50, where a decree has been passed against a firm, execution can at once issue without leave against the property of the firm, and also against the separate property of any individual partner who was served with the writ. But execution cannot be issued without the leave of the Court against the separate property of any partner who was not served with the writ and did not appear (z).

Dissolution of partnership before institution of suit.—Where there has been dissolution to the knowledge of the plaintiff, he cannot make an outgoing partner liable, unless he serves the writ of summons upon him. A sues the firm of B & Co. upon a promissory note passed to him by the firm. When the note was given, the firm consisted of three partners, X, Y and Z, but Z had retired from the firm before the institution of the suit, and A knew before he instituted the suit that Z had so retired. Z resides in British India, but he is not individually served as required by the proviso to this rule. Z does not appear. A obtains a decree against the firm. The decree cannot be executed against the personal property of Z. Nor can A apply under O. 21, r. 50, sub-r. (2), for leave to execute the decree against the personal property of Z. The reason is that the present rule overrides O. 21, r. 50, and the latter rule only applies where there has been no dissolution to the knowledge of the plaintiff (a). The above ruling would not apply to the case of a partner who had left the firm before the institution of the suit without the knowledge of the plaintiff.

Service on manager, subsequent service on partner.—Where a summons is served upon a manager, and subsequently upon a partner, it is the date of the latter service from which time is to be counted for the appearance of the defendant firm (b).

"Principal place at which the partnership business is carried on."—See notes to r. 1 above, "Carrying on business in British India," p. 711.

"As the Court may direct."—These words do not occur in the corresponding English rule. According to the English rule, the summons may be served upon a partner or upon the manager at the plaintiff's option. Under the present rule, it would seem, that the plaintiff has no such option, and that he should obtain the directions of the Court as to the mode of service. It is conceived, however, that omission to obtain such directions would not vitiate the service, but would constitute at the most an "irregularity" within the meaning of s. 99 above.

Notice to be given to the person served as to the capacity in which he is served.—See r. 5 below and notes thereto.

4. [New.] (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 45 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, where two or more persons may sue or be sued in the name of a firm under the foregoing provisions and any of such persons dies, whether before the institution or during the pendency of any suit, it shall not be necessary to join the legal representative of the deceased as a party to the suit.

O. 30,
rr. 4, 5.

(2) Nothing in sub-rule (1) shall limit or otherwise affect any right which the legal representative of the deceased may have—

- (a) to apply to be made a party to the suit, or
- (b) to enforce any claim against the survivor or survivors.

Indian Contract Act, 1872, s. 45.—A passes a promissory note for Rs. 5,000 to a firm consisting of two partners B and C. If B dies, C alone cannot sue to recover the amount of the note. The suit must, under s. 45 of the Contract Act, be brought by C along with B's legal representative. The effect of the present rule is that where the suit is brought in the firm name, it is not necessary to join B's legal representative as a party plaintiff. But the legal representative may apply to be made a party plaintiff. The mere fact that he does not apply will not affect his right to claim the benefit of any decree that may be passed against C.

5. [New. R. S. C., O. 48A, r. 4.] Where a summons is issued to a firm and is served in the manner provided by rule 3, every person upon whom it is served shall be informed by notice in writing given at the time of such service, whether he is served as a partner or as a person having the control or management of the partnership business, or in both characters, and, in default of such notice, the person served shall be deemed to be served as a partner.

Notice in what capacity served.

Notice in what capacity served.—Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name, the summons will be issued against the firm. Such summons may be served either upon any one or more of the partners or upon the person in control of the business [r. 3]. The present rule provides that the person served should be informed by notice in writing given at the time of service, whether he is served as a partner, or as a person in management of the business, or in both characters. In default of notice, the person served will be deemed—not merely presumed—to be served as a partner. If he contends that he is not a partner, the proper course for him to adopt is to appear under protest under r. 8 below denying that he is a partner. If he does not do so, he will be deemed to have been served personally as a partner within the meaning of O. 21, r. 50, sub-r. 1, cl. (c), and execution may be granted against him personally (c).

O. 30,
rr. 5, 6.

Service on manager.—If service is effected on the person in control of the business and no notice is served as provided by this rule, the service is not effective, and cannot be made so [Annual Practice, notes to O. 48A, r. 4].

Appearance under protest.—Where a summons is served upon a person as a partner, but such person appears under protest denying that he is a partner, the plaintiff may disregard the appearance altogether, and proceed as if the summons had not been served; that is, he may have service subsequently effected upon a partner or partners or upon any person having the control of the business as provided by r. 3 above. The mere fact that the person served as a partner denies that he is a partner and appears under protest does not preclude the plaintiff from otherwise serving the summons on the firm (r. 8 below).

Where a summons is served upon a person both as a partner and manager, and such person appears with denial of partnership, but does not deny that he is the person in management of the business, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree against the firm, for the service is then one under r. 3, cl. (b), and such service is good service upon the firm.

Forms of notice.—"Take notice that the summons served herewith is served on you—

(i) as a partner in the defendant firm of AB & Co.

(ii) or as the person having the control or management of the partnership business of AB & Co.

(iii) or as a partner in the defendant firm of AB & Co., and also as the person having the control or management of the partnership business of AB & Co.

6. [New. R. S. C., O. 48A, r. 5.] Where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm, they shall appear individually in their own names, but all subsequent proceedings shall, nevertheless, continue in the name of the firm.

Appearance of partners.

Appearance of partners.—Though all proceedings in a suit instituted against a firm in the firm name are to be conducted in the firm name, the partners should, so far as appearance is concerned, appear individually in their own names. The reason of the rule is that a firm cannot appear as a firm. Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name, the appearance of one partner is the appearance of the firm (d).

The only persons entitled to appear in a suit against a firm are—

(i) persons who allege they are partners of the firm sued, or were partners at the time the cause of action arose; and

(ii) persons who are served as partners, but deny that they are partners of the firm sued or were partners of the firm at the time the cause of action accrued. Such persons may appear under protest. See rr. 7 and 8 below.

A person served as a manager of the partnership business need not appear unless he is a member of the firm sued (r. 7 below). A managing partner of a business firm has an implied authority, in the ordinary course of business, to appoint solicitors, to defend a suit brought against the firm in the firm name, and to instruct him to enter an appearance for the other partners as well. No suit will therefore lie against the solicitors at the instance of the other partners for entering an appearance in their name without their express authority (e).

The expression "individually" is not synonymous with "in person"; hence no partner can be forced under this rule to appear in person (f).

"All subsequent proceedings shall continue in the name of the firm."

—Where persons are sued as partners in the firm name, every subsequent proceeding must be headed with the firm name as defendants. The written statement must be headed in the firm name, and the decree also must be against the firm in the firm name. The Court cannot in such a suit pass any personal decree against a partner, unless he is sued personally along with the firm (g).

Defence.—Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name, the claim being against the partnership, the partners ought, if they can agree, to put in one written statement. But if they cannot agree on one defence, each partner is entitled to put in a separate written statement. In any case the written statement should be a written statement of the firm, but where the partners cannot agree on one defence and a partner puts in a separate defence, the proper form would be "written statement of the defendant firm of AB & Co., by XY, one of the partners appearing in the suit." It may be asked, what is the plaintiff to do if he finds a series of inconsistent defences put in by the different partners? The answer is that "to entitle him to judgment against the partnership, he must, to use a homely phrase, beat all the defences—that is to say, he must show and satisfy the judge at the trial that not one of the defences prevents a judgment being entered against the partnership" (h). What would happen if some of the partners did not appear at all? In case, say, one partner alone chooses to appear, he would be entitled and would be bound to put in a written statement for the firm. He might if he choose add "by" so and so, "one of the partners served and appearing"; but his defence would be the defence of the firm, and the suit would be tried upon that defence, and in that case judgment could be obtained against the firm. Of course, if the partner chose to put in an improper defence and so rendered the partnership liable in a case where it ought not to be made liable, he might thereby as between himself and his co-partners be committing a breach of duty for which he would be liable to them, but so far as the plaintiff is concerned, the plaintiff would be able to obtain judgment against the firm. A partner is not entitled, in a suit against a firm in the firm name, to put in a personal defence: he can only put in a defence for and in the name of the firm (i). But where a partner is sued personally along with the firm, he may put in a personal defence besides a defence for the firm (j).

Decree.—Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name, the decree must be against the firm in the firm name (k). From this it follows that if one of the partners fails to appear, no decree can be passed against him separately for want of appearance (l); and if any one partner does appear, no decree can be passed against the firm for want of appearance (m), the appearance of one partner being the appearance of the firm (n).

In England the practice appears to be where one of the partners is an infant, to enter judgment against the defendant firm "other than" the infant partner (o). But the express provisions of O. 21, r. 50, render this reservation unnecessary in India. See the proviso to sub-rule (1) of r. 50 of O. 21.

7. [New. R. S. C., O. 48 A, r. 6.] Where a summons is served in the manner provided by rule 3 upon a person having the control or management of the partnership business, no appearance by him shall be necessary unless he is a partner of the firm sued.

No appearance except by partners.

8. [New. R. S. C., O. 48 A, r. 7.] Any person served with summons as a partner under rule 3 may appear under protest, denying that he is a partner, but such appearance shall not preclude the plaintiff from otherwise serving a summons on the firm and obtaining a decree against the firm in default of appearance where no partner has appeared.

Appearance under protest.

Appearance under protest.—Where a person served with a summons as a partner denies that he is a partner, he may enter appearance under protest under this rule. Where an appearance is entered under protest, its effect is to nullify the service altogether as regards the defendant firm. In such a case the plaintiff may disregard the appearance under protest altogether, and have the summons served upon one who is admittedly a partner or one who has the control or management of the defendant firm as provided by r. 3 above, and having obtained a decree against the firm, he may apply for leave to execute it against such person under O. 21, r. 50. But the plaintiff is not bound to adopt this course. He may take out a chamber summons and contend that the party who appeared under protest is a partner or was a partner at the time the cause of action accrued, and apply on that basis to strike out of such appearance the denial of partnership. See Annual Practice, notes to O. 48A, rr. 4 and 7.

9. [New. R. S. C., O. 48A, r. 10.] This order shall apply to suits between a firm and one or more of the partners therein and to suits between firms having one or more partners in common; but no execution shall be issued in such suits except by leave of the Court, and, on an application for leave to issue such execution, all such accounts and enquiries may be directed to be taken and made and directions given as may be just.

Suit between co-partners.

Scope of the rule.—This rule provides that suits between a firm and one of its members, or between two firms with a common member, may be instituted in the firm name provided, the firms carry on business in British India (r. 1). But no execution can be issued in such a suit except by leave of the Court.

10. [New. R. S. C., O. 48A, r. 11.] Any person carrying O. 30, r. 10.

Suit against person carrying on business in name other than his own.

on business in a name or style other than his own name may be sued in such name or style as if it were a firm name; and, so far as the nature of the case will permit all rules under this Order shall apply.

Scope of the rule.—A person trading by himself as a firm or in an assumed or trading name may be sued in his trade name, but he cannot sue in that name (p). The rule does not enable a plaintiff to sue the proprietor of a newspaper in the name of the newspaper (q).

Non-resident foreigner.—As to the corresponding English rule, it has been held that it does not apply where the person carrying on business in a name other than his own is a foreign subject resident out of the jurisdiction, though he may carry on business through an agent within the jurisdiction. The decision proceeded upon the broad ground that an English Court has no jurisdiction over foreigners residing abroad merely because they carry on business within the jurisdiction, and that the words "any person," though large enough to include a foreigner, refer only to an English subject (r). The question as to whether the Courts of this country have jurisdiction over foreigners residing abroad merely because they carry on business here through an agent, arose in the recent Privy Council case of Annamalai v. Muruga (s), but the point was not decided by their Lordships. In both Courts in India it was assumed that the Court had jurisdiction, but their Lordships said, "This assumption appears to their Lordships to require more attention than it had deserved."

Application of foregoing rules.—By the latter part of this rule all the foregoing rules of this Order relating to proceedings against firms are to apply to a person trading in a name other than his own so far as the nature of the case will permit. By virtue of r. 1, this rule does not apply unless the business is carried on in British India. By virtue of rr. 1 and 2, the person sued in his tradename may be required to disclose his real name and private address. By virtue of r. 3, the summons may be served upon the person sued or upon any person having the control or management of the business; but in the latter case execution cannot be issued against the personal property of the persons sued except by leave of the Court [O. 21, r. 50]. As regards appearance, the person sued must appear in his own name (r. 6).

ORDER XXXI.

Suits by or against Trustees, Executors and Administrators.

or administrator shall represent the persons so interested, and it shall not ordinarily be necessary to make them parties to the suit. But the Court may, if it thinks fit, order them or any of them to be made parties.

Scope of the rule.—This rule applies only where the contention is between the beneficiaries and a third person. It does not apply where the contention is between beneficiaries and trustees or between the beneficiaries inter se. In suits between beneficiaries and a third person the trustees sufficiently represent the beneficiaries (t), though the beneficiaries are an unascertained and unascertainable class (u) or persons (v). As to declaratory decrees it is provided by s. 43 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, that a declaration made under s. 42 of that Act is binding, where any of the parties are trustees, on the persons for whom, if in existence at the date of the declaration, such parties would be trustees. Compare R. S. C. 16, r. 8.

When beneficiaries may be added as parties.—Beneficiaries should always be made parties when the executors are wholly uninterested in the case as where they have fully administered the estate (w), or where they have an interest adverse to that of the beneficiaries (x). Where a suit was brought by an executor, and the names of the beneficiaries who took possession of the estate pending the suit were substituted as plaintiffs, it was held that it did not amount to a substitution of new plaintiffs within the meaning of s. 22 of the Limitation Act (y).

A purchases certain property at an execution sale in the name of B. If the sale is sought to be set aside by the judgment-debtor, A is not a necessary party to the proceeding, regard being had to the provisions of this rule (z).

2. [S. 438.] Where there are several trustees, executors or administrators, they shall all be made parties to a suit against one or more of them :

Joinder of trustees, executors and administrators.

Provided that the executors who have not proved their testator's will, and trustees, executors and administrators outside British India, need not be made parties.

Trustees.—The word "trustees" has been newly added in this rule.

Several trustees, executors or administrators.—This rule applies only to suits against, and not to suits by, trustees, executors or administrators. It provides that all executors who have proved the will should be made parties to the suit. The Court may, however, entertain an application as for a receiver even though all proving executors are not made parties to the suit (a). An executor who has neither proved nor intermeddled with the estate cannot be sued as representing the estate (b). See Indian Succession Act, 1865, s. 271, and Probate and Administration Act, 1881, s. 92.

"Outside British India."—These words have been substituted for the words "beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court" (c).

ORDER XXXII.

Suits by or against Minors and Persons of Unsound Mind.

1. [S. 440, 1st para.] Every suit by a minor shall be instituted in his name by a person who in such suit shall be called the next friend of the minor. O. 32, r. 1.

Minor to sue by next friend.

Minor.—Every person domiciled in British India who has not completed the age of 18 years is a minor. In the case, however, of a minor of whose person or property a guardian has been appointed by a Court of Justice, or whose property is under the superintendence of a Court of Wards, the age of majority is deemed to have been attained on the minor completing his age of 21 years: see Indian Majority Act IX of 1875, s. 3.

Object of having next friend or guardian ad litem.—As a minor is deemed incapable of prosecuting or defending a suit himself, it is necessary that his interests in the suit should be watched by an adult person. Such person is, in the case of a minor plaintiff, called his next friend, and in the case of a minor defendant, his guardian ad litem or guardian for the suit. But neither the next friend nor the guardian ad litem is a party to the suit (e). The next friend of a minor plaintiff is just as much entitled to change his attorney as any other plaintiff who is sui juris (f). As to liability of next friend for costs, see notes below.

Title of suit.—Where a suit is brought on behalf of a minor, the title of the suit should run thus: “A.B. a minor, by his next friend C. D. v. X. Y.” Where a suit is brought against a minor, the title of the suit should be: “F. G. v. A.B., a minor by his guardian ad litem C.D.” Where the title of a suit in a case was “A. B. for self and his minor daughter C. D.” instead of “A.B., and C.D., a minor by her next friend A.B.,” and the objection was raised for the first time in appeal, it was held that the error did not affect the merits of the case, and that it was not therefore fatal to the suit (g) [s. 99]. See notes to r. 3 below, under the head “Where a minor defendant is substantially represented by a guardian ad litem.”

Objection to authority of next friend.—Where a minor plaintiff has a cause of action, no objection to the authority to sue of the next friend through whom the suit is brought will be entertained in appeal (h).

(h) Hardi v. Ruder Perkash (1884) 10 Cal. 626, 11 I. A. 26.

O. 32, r. 1. When minor may sue without next friend.—A minor may sue in a Presidency Small Cause Court without a next friend, when the amount claimed does not exceed Rs. 500, and is due to him for wages or for work done as a servant: Presidency Small Cause Court Act 15 of 1882, s. 32.

Liability of next friend for costs.—Where a suit brought by a minor by his next friend is dismissed, and the Court finds that the suit was not for the benefit of the minor, the Court may direct the next friend personally to pay the costs (i). But if the Court finds that there were reasonable grounds for instituting the suit, and the next friend has acted bona fide, the Court will not mulct the next friend in costs, and will direct the costs to come out of the property of the minor (j).

Suit on behalf of an alleged minor who is not in fact a minor.—A suit is instituted on behalf of a person alleged to be a minor, through his next friend. It is found that the plaintiff was not in fact a minor at the date of the institution of the suit. In such a case the suit should, according to Allahabad decisions, be dismissed (k); according to Calcutta (l) and Madras (m) decisions, the suit should not be dismissed, the proper course being to return the plaint for amendment. The latter seems to be the better opinion.

Decree against a major treating him as a minor.—A decree passed against a person treating him as a minor while in reality he was a major at the date thereof is not a nullity; consequently, whatever rights he may have to apply to set aside the decree, a sale in execution of the decree cannot be set aside on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction to pass the decree (n). See notes below under the head "estoppel."

Estoppel.—A minor who, representing himself to be a major, collects rents and gives receipts therefor, is estopped from recovering again the rents once paid to him by instituting a suit through a next friend (o). Similarly, a minor who, representing himself to be of full age, sells certain property and executes a deed of sale, is estopped from suing to set aside the sale on the ground that he was a minor at the date of sale (p). But if the purchaser knew that the vendor was a minor, the purchaser could not be said to have been misled by the false representation as to the vendor's age and the suit to set aside the sale would not then be barred (q). A Court of Equity will deprive a fraudulent minor of the benefit of the plea of infancy, but he who invokes the aid of the Court must establish not only that a fraud was practised on him by the minor, but that he was deceived into action by the fraud (r). It is clear that if the purchaser knew that the vendor was a minor, he could not be said to have been deceived into action by the minor's misrepresentation as to his age.

If a person alleged to be a minor, but who is not in fact a minor, is sued as a minor by his guardian ad litem, and a decree is passed against him in the suit, he will be estopped from impeaching the validity of the decree as well as the sale on the decree if he was aware of the suit and allowed it to proceed against him (s).

Attorney's costs.—An attorney is entitled to recover from the infant's estate the costs of a proper suit or defence of a suit in which the estate was involved. He is also entitled to have a charge declared on the estate for the amount of his costs (t).

2. [S. 442.] (1) Where a suit is instituted by or on behalf of a minor without a next friend, the defendant may apply to have the plaint taken off the file, with costs to be paid by the pleader or other person by whom it was presented.

Where suit is instituted without next friend, plaint to be taken off the file.

(2) Notice of such application shall be given to such person, and the Court, after hearing his objections (if any), may make such order in the matter as it thinks fit.

Taking the plaint off the file.—This rule contemplates the case where a suit is instituted by a person who is alleged by the defendant to be a minor, without a next friend. In such a case the defendant may apply under this rule to have the plaint taken off the file. To bring his case within the rule, the defendant must show that the plaintiff is a minor and that the suit was instituted without a next friend. Now the fact of minority—

- (i) may either be apparent on the face of the plaint, or
- (ii) it may be ascertained upon objection by the defendant and enquiry by the Court.

In case (1), the practice is to take the plaint off the file (u).

In case (ii), i.e., where the fact of minority is established after evidence has been taken on the point, it may be found—

- (a) that the plaintiff instituted the suit with the knowledge of the fact of minority and with the intention of deceiving the Court and evading the payment of costs in the event of failure; or
- (b) that the plaintiff had no such knowledge or intention.

In case (a), the practice, according to the Bombay decisions, is to make an order under this rule directing the plaint to be taken off the file (v). According to the Calcutta decisions, the Court should pass a decree dismissing the suit. The Calcutta High Court holds that the procedure prescribed by this rule, namely, taking the plaint off the file, applies only to those cases where the fact of minority is apparent on the face of the plaint, that is to say, in case (i), and that it does not apply where the fact of minority is established on enquiry held by the Court upon that point (w). The difference between the practice of the two Courts is important in this way, that while an appeal lies from a decree dismissing a suit, no appeal lies from an order directing a plaint to be taken off the file.

In case (b), the practice is to stay proceedings and to allow sufficient time to enable the minor plaintiff to be represented by a next friend (x).

Costs.—When a suit is instituted by a minor without a next friend, the pleader or any other person presenting the plaint is liable for costs and the Court should not render the property of the minor liable for costs (y).

O. 32,
rr. 2, 3.

Decree for a minor in a suit instituted by him without a next friend.—Where a suit is instituted by a minor without a next friend, and the defendant does not object to it, he will be deemed to have waived his objection. The defendant cannot, in such a case, after a decree has been passed against him, object to the execution of the decree on the ground that the suit was instituted by the minor without a next friend. The absence of a next friend does not make the suit a nullity. The institution of a suit by a minor without a next friend is merely an irregularity which can be waived by the conduct of the defendant (z).

3. [S. 446, 1st para., S. 456.] (1) Where the defendant is a minor, the Court, on being satisfied of the fact of his minority, shall appoint a proper person to be guardian for the suit for such minor.

Guardian for the suit to be appointed by Court for minor defendant.

(2) An order for the appointment of a guardian for the suit may be obtained upon application in the name and on behalf of the minor or by the plaintiff.

(3) Such application shall be supported by an affidavit verifying the fact that the proposed guardian has no interest in the matters in controversy in the suit adverse to that of the minor and that he is a fit person to be so appointed.

No order shall be made on any application under this rule except upon notice to the minor and to any guardian of the minor appointed or declared by an authority competent in that behalf, or where there is no such guardian, upon notice to the father or other natural guardian of the minor, or, where there is no father or other natural guardian, to the person in whose care the minor is, and after hearing any objection which may be urged on behalf of any person served with notice under this sub-rule.

Sub-rule (4) is new.

Guardian ad litem.—Where a guardian ad litem has once been appointed, his appointment endures for the whole of the litigation, including proceedings in execution and appeal (a).

A guardian ad litem is not a party to a suit or appeal. Therefore a suit or an appeal is not time-barred, merely because the order appointing a guardian ad litem is not made until after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for the suit or appeal (b).

“Proper” person to be appointed guardian ad litem.—It is the duty of the Judge himself to decide who is the proper person to be appointed as guardian ad litem (c).

O. 32, r. 3.

Plea of minority.—A sues B. B alleges that he is a minor. In such a case the Court should frame a preliminary issue on the question of minority, and appoint a guardian for the purpose of the enquiry on the question of minority. If the defendant is found to be a minor, a guardian ad litem should be appointed for him; but if he is found to be a major, the guardian appointed for the inquiry should cease to act and the defendant may conduct his own case (d).

Where a minor defendant is not represented at all by a guardian ad litem.—The provisions of this rule as to the appointment of a guardian ad litem for a minor defendant are imperative. Hence if a minor is sued without a guardian ad litem, and a decree is passed against him, the decree is a nullity, and it cannot be enforced against him (e).

A minor against whom a decree has been passed without the appointment of a proper guardian ad litem has several remedies open to him. He may, if the facts of the case justify, in that very suit, (1) appeal from the decree, or (2) apply for a re-hearing under O. 9, r. 13, or (3) apply for a review of judgment, or (4) apply for an order under O. 32, r. 5 (2), according as the circumstances of the case may permit (f). He has also another remedy open to him, namely, a suit on the lines indicated in the undermentioned case (g).

Where a decree in a suit against a minor is set aside on the ground that he was not represented by a proper guardian ad litem, the Court in which the suit was filed has inherent power to restore the suit and to proceed with the appointment of a fit and proper person as guardian ad litem for the minor defendant (h).

Where a minor defendant is substantially represented by a guardian ad litem.—There are cases in which there have been no formal application and no formal order for the appointment of a guardian ad litem for a minor defendant, but in which the proceedings show that the minor was substantially represented by a guardian ad litem. In such cases it has been held that the want of a formal application and order for the appointment of a guardian ad litem is but an irregularity, and that the decree will bind the minor unless it is shewn that the defect in procedure has prejudiced the minor (i). In Walian v. Banke Behari (j), a suit was brought against a minor, but no order was applied for and none was made for the appointment of a guardian ad litem. In the plaint, however, which was admitted by the Court, the mother of the minor was described as his guardian. Further, the mother appeared throughout the proceedings in the suit as the minor's guardian. A decree was passed against the minor, and in the decree and the execution proceedings the mother was described as the minor's guardian. In a suit brought by the minor on attaining majority to set aside the decree passed against him on the ground that no guardian ad litem had been appointed as required by the present rule, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council, overruling the decision of the Calcutta High Court, that the Court in which the former suit was instituted had, by its action, given sanction to the appearance of the mother as a guardian ad litem, and that the absence of a formal order of appointment was not fatal to the suit, unless it was shown that the defect in procedure prejudiced the minor. Their Lordships observed that there was nothing in the proceedings of that suit to suggest that the interests of the minor were not duly protected by the mother or that the defect in procedure had prejudiced the minor, and they accordingly held that the decree was binding upon the minor. But where it appears that the minor's interests were not duly protected, and that the defect in procedure has prejudiced the minor, the decree will not bind the minor, and it will be set aside as a nullity (k). It is clear from what has been stated above that the mere absence of an affidavit such as is required by sub-r. (3) is not sufficient to render the proceedings illegal and void as against a minor (l).

Service of summons.—There is no special provision in the Code for service on minors. Hence where the defendant is a minor, he should be served with the summons in the way provided for service upon adults (m). It is, indeed, doubtful whether service on a guardian ad litem is sufficient service for the purposes of the Code (n). But all notices of applications and other processes in a suit should be served upon the guardian ad litem [See rule 5 below]. As to service in suits brought against wards of Courts of Wards, see Bengal Court of Wards Act, 1879, s. 54, and Bombay Court of Wards Act, 1905, s. 34.

Fraud of next friend or guardian ad litem.—A decree passed against a minor properly represented is binding upon him as much as a decree passed against an adult, but it is open to the minor to impeach the decree by a suit in cases where the next friend or guardian for the suit has been guilty of fraud or collusion in allowing the decree to be passed against him (o).

Who may act as next friend or be appointed guardian for the suit.

(1) Any person who is of sound mind and has attained majority may act as next friend of a minor or as his guardian for the suit :

Provided that the interest of such person is not adverse to that of the minor and that he is not in the case of a next friend, a defendant, or, in the case of a guardian for the suit, a plaintiff.

(2) Where a minor has a guardian appointed or declared, by competent authority, no person other than such guardian shall act as the next friend of the minor or be appointed his guardian for the suit unless the Court considers, for reasons

(3) No person shall without his consent be appointed guardian for the suit.

(4) Where there is no other person fit and willing to act as guardian for the suit, the Court may appoint any of its officers to be such guardian, and may direct that the costs to be incurred by such officer in the performance of his duties as such guardian shall be borne either by the parties or by any one or more of the parties to the suit, or out of any fund in Court in which the minor is interested and may give directions for the repayment or allowance of such costs as justice and the circumstances of the case may require.

Married woman as guardian ad litem.—Under the Code of 1882, though a married woman could be appointed next friend of a minor plaintiff, she could not be appointed guardian ad litem of a minor defendant. Under this Code she may be appointed guardian ad litem as well.

Guardian appointed by competent authority.—A guardian of his minor son appointed by a Hindu father under his will is not a guardian appointed by "competent authority" within the meaning of this rule (q).

Sub-r. (2) provides that where a minor has a guardian appointed by competent authority, no person other than such guardian should be appointed his guardian ad litem. Where, however, the Court, in ignorance of the fact that the minor has a guardian appointed by competent authority, appoints another person guardian for the suit, such appointment is not an illegality, but a mere irregularity, and it does not of itself vitiate either the decree passed in the suit or a sale consequent upon such decree (r).

Sub-rule (2): "Another person be permitted to act."—The permission need not be express (s).

Sub-rule (3): consent of guardian ad litem.—Where a father of a joint Hindu family was appointed guardian ad litem of his minor sons in a suit against them on a mortgage of joint family property executed by the father, and it appeared that the father had not intimated his consent to act as guardian ad litem, and the father not appearing to defend the suit an ex parte decree was passed, it was held in a suit by the sons to recover their share of the property on the ground that they were not properly represented in the previous suit and that the debt contracted by the father was immoral, that the minors were not properly represented and that the sons were entitled to maintain the suit (t).

Officer of Court as guardian ad litem.—An officer of Court who has been appointed guardian ad litem should not be paid for his trouble (u). If he has no funds to conduct adequately the defence of the minor, the Court has the power to relieve him of his position as guardian (v).

5. [Ss. 441, 444.] (1) Every application to the Court on behalf of a minor, other than an application under rule 10, sub-rule (2), shall be made by his next friend or by his guardian for the suit.

(2) Every order made in a suit, or on any application, before the Court in or by which a minor is in any way concerned or affected, without such minor being represented by a next friend or guardian for the suit, as the case may be, may be discharged, and, where the pleader of the party at whose instance such order was obtained knew, or might reasonably have known, the fact of such minority, with costs to be paid by such pleader.

6. [S. 461.] (1) A next friend or guardian for the suit shall not, without the leave of the Court, receive any money or other moveable property on behalf of a minor either—is also appointed next friend of the other member. The reason is that the manager alone may sue as such to recover moneys due to the family, and the other member is not a necessary party to the suit. A and B, two Hindu brothers, constitute a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara law. A is the manager of the family. B is a minor. A suit is brought by A and B for rent against a tenant. A is appointed next friend of B. A may receive the money payable under the decree without the leave of the Court (w). But see Ganesh Row v. Tuljaram Row (x), cited on p. 732 below under the head "Where the minor is a member of a joint Hindu family."

(2) Where the next friend or guardian for the suit has not been appointed or declared by competent authority to be guardian of the property of the minor, or, having been so appointed or declared, is under any disability known to the Court to receive the money or other moveable property, the Court shall, if it grants him leave to receive the property, require such security and give such directions as will, in its opinion, sufficiently protect the property from waste and ensure its proper application.

Security for protection of minor's property.—A bond passed by a surety under sub-r. (2) cannot be enforced by summary process under s. 145 (y).

7. [S. 462.] (1) No next friend or guardian for the suit shall, without the leave of the Court expressly recorded in the proceedings, enter into any agreement or compromise on behalf of a minor with reference to the suit in which he acts as next friend or guardian.

Agreement or compromise by next friend or guardian for the suit.

(2) Any such agreement or compromise entered into without the leave of the Court so recorded shall be voidable against all parties other than the minor.

Alterations in the rule.—The words "expressly" recorded in the proceedings" in sub-r. (1), and the words "so recorded" in sub-r. (2), are new. They give effect to the practice established under the old section. See notes below, "Compromise decree when binding on a minor"

Scope of the rule.—This rule contemplates the following steps to be taken in order before a compromise decree is passed in a suit to which a minor is a party, namely, (1) an application by the next friend or guardian ad litem for leave to compromise the suit, (2) the granting of leave by the Court if the Court thinks the case is a fit one for leave, and (3) the consent of the next friend or guardian ad litem to the proposed compromise after the Court has granted the leave (z). If the leave is granted, and the next friend or guardian ad litem assents to the compromise, the parties may apply to the Court under O. 23, r. 3, for a consent decree in terms of the compromise, and if the compromise is lawful, it is the duty of the Court under that rule to pass the decree applied for. If the next friend of a minor plaintiff agrees to compromise a suit on behalf of the minor subject to the leave of the Court, and then withdraws from the compromise before the leave of the Court is applied for, the Court will not enforce the compromise at the instance of the defendant, even though the terms of the compromise might appear beneficial to the minor. The reason is that such compromise is not binding unless it is sanctioned by the Court (a).

Compromise decree when binding on a minor.—The provision contained in this rule making it necessary to obtain the leave of the Court is of great

O. 32, r. 7. importance to protect the interest of minors (b). To render a decree passed in pursuance of a compromise binding on a minor, the following conditions must be complied with :—

- (a) The next friend or guardian ad litem must apply to the Court for leave to enter into the proposed compromise (c), stating specifically that the compromise is sought to be made on behalf of the minor (d), and also setting forth the terms of the proposed compromise (e).
- (b) On such an application being made to the Court, the Court must exercise a judicial discretion as to the propriety, in the interests of the minor, of the proposed compromise (f). And if the Court sees reason to grant leave, it should record an order showing that an application has been made to it, that the terms of the proposed agreement or compromise have been considered by it, and that having regard to the interests of the minor, it has granted leave to make the agreement or compromise (g). "It is not sufficient that the terms of a compromise are before the Court. There ought to be evidence that the attention of the Court was directly called to the fact that a minor was a party to the compromise, and it ought to be shown by an order on petition, or in some way not open to doubt, that the leave of the Court was obtained" (h). A compromise will be deemed to be beneficial to the interests of a minor, if it secures to the minor some demonstrable advantage, or averts some obvious mischief (i).
- (c) The leave must be express, not implied. It must, in the language of this rule, be expressly recorded in the proceedings. From the mere fact that the Court has passed a decree in accordance with a compromise it cannot be inferred that any of the steps preliminary and necessary to the making of the decree have been taken by the Court. The Court by passing a decree in pursuance of a compromise does not ipso facto sanction the compromise (j). The provisions of this rule are complied with if the leave of the Court is expressly recorded; it is not necessary that the order granting leave should state that the Court had considered the terms of the compromise and regarded them to be beneficial to the minor (k).

But the non-observance of the above conditions does not render the compromise decree void. The decree is only voidable, and that too at the option of the minor. No other party to the suit can call the decree in question: the minor alone is entitled to call it in question, and this he may do, either on attaining majority or before then through a next friend (l).

Procedure to set aside compromise decree.—A compromise decree may be set aside either in a regular suit or upon an application for review to the Court that passed the decree (m). But it cannot be called in question by way of objection to any proceeding taken in execution of it (n).

It was doubtful whether under the Code of 1882 a compromise decree can be set aside by an appeal from the decree. Where an appeal was preferred from a compromise decree on the ground that the lower Court did not consider the question as to whether the compromise was a proper one in the interests of the minor, the High Court of Allahabad entertained the appeal (o); in a similar case, the High Court of Calcutta refused to entertain the appeal (p). Under the present Code no appeal lies from a consent-decree [s. 96, sub-s. (3)].

Compromise under misapprehension of a material fact.—Where a compromise is entered into under a misapprehension of a material fact, it will be set aside even though it may have been sanctioned by the Court under this rule (q). See Indian Contract Act, 1872, s. 20.

Compromise of execution proceedings.—The provisions of this rule apply to a compromise entered into even after a decree has been passed. Hence an adjustment of a decree to which a minor is a party requires the sanction of the Court under this rule (r). See O. 21, r. 2.

Agreement to be bound by oath under Indian Oaths Act, 1873, s. 9, not within this rule.—An agreement by the next friend of a minor that an issue in the suit should be determined by the oath of the defendant, does not come within the purview of this rule, and the sanction of the Court is not necessary. In such a case the minor is bound by the agreement, provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend (s).

Abandonment of issue does not amount to a compromise.—A next friend or guardian ad litem may abandon an issue in the course of the trial of the suit, and the sanction of the Court is not requisite for that purpose, for the abandonment of an issue does not amount to a "compromise" within the meaning of this rule. The abandonment is binding on the minor provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend or guardian ad litem (t).

Agreement to refer to arbitration.—It has been held by the High Court of Madras (u) and the Chief Court of the Punjab (v), that an agreement by a next friend or guardian ad litem to refer any matter in controversy in a suit to arbitration is an "agreement" within the meaning of this rule, and that the sanction of the Court is therefore necessary. According to the Allahabad High Court such an agreement is not within this rule, and the sanction of the Court is not necessary (w). See Schedule II, r. 1.

The decisions cited above relate to cases where the agreement to refer was made during the pendency of a suit. We now proceed to consider cases where there is no suit pending but an agreement to refer is made to which a minor is a party by his guardian. Before dealing with these cases it may be premised that to attract the application of this rule it is necessary—

- (1) that there should be a pending suit as indicated by the words "no next friend or guardian for the suit", and
- (2) that there should be an agreement to refer.

O. 32, r. 7.

If either of these conditions is wanting, the present rule does not apply and no leave of the Court is necessary. A and B carry on business in partnership. A dies leaving a minor son and a widow. Disputes arise between the parties as to accounts, and an agreement is made between the minor through his mother and B to refer the disputes to arbitration. The arbitrators make their award, and the minor, by his mother, applies to file the award under para. 20 of Sch. II. The application is registered as a suit between the minor applicant as plaintiff and B as defendant [see the 2nd clause of para. 20]. Notice is then given as required by the 3rd clause of para. 20 to B, and no objection to the award having been made by B, the award is filed and a decree passed in terms of the award as provided by para. 21 of Sch. II. Does the agreement to refer require the sanction of the Court under this rule? No, because it was not made during the pendency of a suit and the first of the two conditions mentioned above is wanting (x). Does the decree on the award require the sanction of the Court? No, because the application to file the award being made by the minor as plaintiff, it cannot be said that there was an agreement on behalf of the minor not to object to the award and to allow a decree to be passed on the award; in this case the second of the two conditions mentioned above is wanting (y). Suppose now that the application to file the award was made by B, in which case the application would be registered as a suit between B as plaintiff and the minor as defendant, would the decree on the award require the sanction of the Court? Yes, if the minor's guardian agreed not to object to the award and to allow a decree to be passed on the award; in this case both the conditions mentioned above are present, namely, that there is an agreement on behalf of the minor, and the agreement is made in the course of a suit started by the application to file the award (z).

Withdrawal of suit by next friend.—If the next friend of a minor plaintiff withdraws from the suit, and such withdrawal is in pursuance of an agreement or compromise entered into with the defendant, the withdrawal must be with the sanction of the Court under this rule; if the sanction of the Court is not obtained, the order of withdrawal may be set aside at the instance of the minor (a). But if the withdrawal is not in pursuance of an agreement or compromise entered into with the defendant, the sanction of the Court is not necessary, and the withdrawal is binding on the minor plaintiff, provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend (b).

Where the minor is a member of a joint Hindu family.—In a suit brought by some of the members of a joint Hindu family one of whom was a minor, a compromise decree was passed after the compromise had been sanctioned by the Court. The minor had no separate interest; the adult members of the family had taken part in the compromise and assented to it, and the Court pronounced that it was for the benefit of the minor. In a suit brought on behalf of the minor to set aside the compromise decree on the ground that the proper materials which were essential to make the compromise and decree binding upon him were not placed before the Court previous to obtaining its sanction, it was held that the decree was under the circumstances binding on the minor (c).

When the father of a minor, a member of a joint Hindu family, of which the father is the managing member, is appointed his guardian ad litem, his powers as managing member, so far as they relate to the minor's interest, are controlled by the provisions of the present rule, and he cannot, without the leave of the Court, enter into any agreement or compromise on behalf of the minor with reference to the suit. Such an agreement is not binding on the minor even if it was a bona fide settlement of a disputed claim (d).

Where a minor is under the charge of a Court of Wards.—The sanction of the Civil Court required by this rule is not necessary, having regard to the provisions of ss. 18 and 21 of the Court of Wards Act (Beng. Act 9 of 1879), for a compromise entered into under the authority and by the direction of the Court of Wards on behalf of a minor under its charge (e).

Joint bond by a minor and an adult.—In compromise of a suit two defendants, of whom one is a minor, enter into a bond by which they jointly agree to pay a certain sum of money to the plaintiff at a future date. The leave of the Court is not obtained on behalf of the minor as required by this rule. The bond is not enforceable against the minor, but it is enforceable to the full amount against the adult promisor (f).

8. [S. 447.] (1) Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, a next friend shall not retire without first procuring a fit person to be put in his place and giving security for the costs already incurred.

Retirement of next friend.

(2) The application for the appointment of a new next friend shall be supported by an affidavit showing the fitness of the person proposed and also that he has no interest adverse to that of the minor.

Retirement of next friend.—A suit is brought by A and B, both minors, by their mother as their next friend. The mother is also appointed guardian of the person and property of the minors under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890. Subsequently, on the application of the mother, A who has then attained majority, is appointed guardian of the person and property of B in her place. This is not tantamount to A being appointed next friend of B for the suit. The mother, therefore, cannot retire without first procuring a fit person to be put in her place and giving security for the costs already incurred (g).

9. [S. 446.] (1) Where the interest of the next friend of a minor is adverse to that of the minor or where he is so connected with a defendant whose interest is adverse to that of the minor as to make it unlikely that the minor's interest will be properly protected by him, or where he does not do his duty, or, during the pendency of the suit, ceases to reside within British India, or for any other sufficient cause, application may be made on behalf of the minor or by a defendant for his removal; and the Court, if satisfied of the sufficiency of the cause assigned, may order the next friend to be removed accordingly, and make such other order as to costs as it thinks fit.

(2) Where the next friend is not a guardian appointed or declared by an authority competent in this behalf, and an application is made by a guardian so appointed or declared, who desires to be himself appointed in the place of the next friend, the Court shall remove the next friend unless it considers, for reasons to be recorded by it, that the guardian ought not to be appointed the next friend of the minor, and shall thereupon appoint the applicant to be next friend in his place upon such terms as to the costs already incurred in the suit as it thinks fit.

Alterations in the rule.—The words “and make such other order as to costs as it thinks fit” in sub-r. (1) are new. The words, “and shall thereupon appoint, etc.” at the end of sub-r. (2) are also new.

Where the next friend does not do his duty.—Where a Court finds that a next friend does not do his duty in relation to a suit, it is its duty not to permit him to prejudice the interests of the minor, but to adjourn the suit in order that some one interested in the minor may apply on behalf of the minor for the removal of the next friend and for the appointment of a new next friend, or that the minor plaintiff himself may, on coming of age, elect to proceed with the suit or withdraw from it (h).

Adverse interest.—In a suit brought against a minor by his next friend, a decree is passed against the minor. The interest of the minor requires an appeal, but certain events happen after the passing of the decree which render it to the interest of the next friend that the decree against the minor should stand, and hence no appeal is preferred by the next friend from the decree. In such a case leave will be granted to the minor on his attaining majority to appeal from the decree, though the period of limitation for the appeal may have expired (i).

10. [Ss. 448, 449.] (1) On the retirement, removal or death of the next friend of a minor, further proceedings shall be stayed until the appointment of a next friend in his place.

Stay of proceedings on removal, etc., of next friend.

(2) Where the pleader of such minor omits within a reasonable time to take steps to get a new next friend appointed, any person interested in the minor or in the matter in issue may apply to the Court for the appointment of one, and the Court may appoint such person as it thinks fit.

11. [Ss. 458, 459.] (1) Where the guardian for the suit desires to retire or does not do his duty, ^{O. 32, rr. 11, 12.} or where other sufficient ground is made to appear, the Court may permit such guardian to retire or may remove him, and may make such order as to costs as it thinks fit.

(2) Where the guardian for the suit retires, dies or is removed by the Court during the pendency of the suit, the Court shall appoint a new guardian in his place.

The words "may permit such guardian to retire" in sub-r. (1) are new.

12. [Ss. 450, 453.] (1) A minor plaintiff or a minor not a party to a suit on whose behalf, an application is pending shall, on attaining majority, elect whether he will proceed with the suit or application.

(2) Where he elects to proceed with the suit or application he shall apply for an order discharging the next friend and for leave to proceed in his own name.

(3) The title of the suit or application shall in such case be corrected so as to read thenceforth thus:—

"A. B., late a minor, by C. D., his next friend, but now having attained majority."

(4) Where he elects to abandon the suit or application, he shall, if a sole plaintiff or sole applicant, apply for an order to dismiss the suit or application on repayment of the costs incurred by the defendant or opposite party or which may have been paid by his next friend.

(5) Any application under this rule may be made ex parte: but no order discharging a next friend and permitting a minor plaintiff to proceed in his own name shall be made without notice to the next friend.

When title to be corrected.—The provisions of this rule which require the title of a suit to be corrected apply to a pending suit, and not to a suit in which a final decree has been passed and in which it only remains to proceed in execution (j).

O. 32.
rr. 13-15.

13. [S. 454.] (1) Where a minor co-plaintiff on attaining majority desires to repudiate the suit, he shall apply to have his name struck out as co-plaintiff; and the Court, if it finds that he is not a necessary party, shall dismiss him from the suit on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

Where minor co-plaintiff attaining majority desires to repudiate suit.

(2) Notice of the application shall be served on the next friend, on any co-plaintiff and on the defendant.

(3) The costs of all parties of such application, and of all or any proceedings theretofore had in the suit, shall be paid by such persons as the Court directs.

(4) Where the applicant is a necessary party to the suit, the Court may direct him to be made a defendant.

Sub-r. (4) is new.

14. [S. 455.] (1) A minor on attaining majority may, if a sole plaintiff, apply that a suit instituted in his name by a next friend be dismissed on the ground that it was unreasonable or improper.

Unreasonable or Improper suit.

(2) Notice of the application shall be served on all the parties concerned; and the Court, upon being satisfied of such unreasonableness or impropriety, may grant the application and order the next friend to pay the cost of all parties in respect of the application and of anything done in the suit, or make such other order as it thinks fit.

15. [S. 463.] The provisions contained in rules 1 to 14, so far as they are applicable, shall extend to persons adjudged to be of unsound mind and to persons who though not so adjudged are found by the Court on inquiry, by reason of unsoundness of mind or mental infirmity, to be incapable of protecting their interests when suing or being sued.

Application of rules to persons of unsound mind.

Persons of unsound mind.—The present rule makes the provisions of rules 1 to 14 applicable to persons of unsound mind. The result is that where a person of unsound mind is a plaintiff, a suit on his behalf must be brought by a next friend, and where he is a defendant, the suit must be defended by a guardian ad litem. Where a manager has been appointed of the property of a lunatic under the Lunacy

Act, no person other than such manager should act as the next friend of the lunatic in a suit in respect of the lunatic's property (k). See r. 4, sub-r. (2) above. O. 32,
rr. 15, 16.

Persons adjudged to be of unsound mind.—A person may be adjudged to be of unsound mind under the Lunacy Act 4 of 1912.

Persons of unsound mind not adjudged to be so.—The old section did not contain any provision as to persons of unsound mind not adjudged to be so. But it was held that the same procedure applied where a party to a suit was of unsound mind though not adjudged to be so. For the title of suits, see App. A, Pleadings, Title of Suits.

16. [S. 464.] Nothing in this Order shall apply to a Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief suing or being sued in the name of his State or being sued by direction of the Governor-General in Council or a Local Government in the name of an agent or in any other name, or shall be construed to affect or in any way derogate from the provisions of any local law for the time being in force relating to suits by or against minors or by or against lunatics or other persons of unsound mind.

For an additional rule made by the Madras High Court.—See Appendix VII below.

ORDER XXXIII.

Suits by Paupers.

1. [S. 401.] Subject to the following provisions, any suit may be instituted by a pauper. O. 33, r. 1.

Suits may be instituted in forma pauperis.

Explanation.—A person is a “pauper” when he is not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by law for the plaint in such suit, or, where no such fee is prescribed, when he is not entitled to property worth one hundred rupees other than his necessary wearing apparel and the subject-matter of the suit.

Scope and object of the Order.—A plaintiff suing in a civil Court must pay the Court fee prescribed by law for the plaint and subsequent proceeding in the suit. These fees are prescribed by the Court Fees Act VII of 1870. But a person may be too poor to pay the Court fee, and the object of this Order is to enable such person to bring and prosecute suits without payment of Court fees (l). There are, however, certain fees from which even a pauper is not exempted, namely, fees for service of process, and such fees must be paid by him (r. 8). If the pauper succeeds in the suit, the Government have a first charge on the subject-matter of the suit for the amount of the Court

(k) See Bai Divali v. Hiralal (1899) 23 Bom. 403. | (l) Jotindro v. Dwarka (1893) 20 Cal. 111, 115.

O. 33, r. 1. fee which would have been paid by him if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper (r. 10). If the pauper fails in the suit, the Court should order him to pay the Court fees due by him (r. 11).

"Subject-matter of the suit."—In determining whether a person claiming to sue as a pauper is worth Rs. 100, neither the value of his necessary wearing apparel nor the value of the property claimed by him in the suit should be taken into consideration. The ground for excluding the "subject-matter of the suit" under this rule is that such property is presumably out of the pauper's reach and cannot be made use of by him to carry on his litigation (m).

A applies for leave to sue as a pauper for the recovery of certain ornaments worth Rs. 2,000 from B. Pending the investigation into pauperism, B deposits in Court a portion of the ornaments claimed by A of the value of Rs. 100 as ornaments belonging to A. The ornaments deposited in Court, being entirely at A's disposal, are no longer part of the "subject-matter of the suit." From the moment of the deposit A becomes "entitled to property worth Rs. 100," and hence he is not entitled to sue as a pauper for the rest of the ornaments (n). In a recent case, however, Macleod, J., expressed the opinion that A could not be said in such a case to be entitled to property worth Rs. 100, for otherwise every application for leave to sue as a pauper may be defeated by the respondent paying into Court Rs. 100 out of the amount claimed (o).

A who has mortgaged his property to B sues B for redemption. A's equity of redemption is no part of the subject-matter of the suit. Its value, therefore, should be taken into consideration in determining whether A is a pauper (p).

"Other than his necessary wearing apparel and the subject-matter of the suit."—These words do not qualify that part of the Explanation which requires that the person should not be possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by law, but only the condition that the applicant is not entitled to property worth Rs. 100 (q).

Prosecution of suit as pauper.—A plaintiff may be allowed to continue as a pauper a suit instituted by him in the ordinary way (r).

Pauper minor.—Where the plaintiff is a minor*, the suit is instituted in the minor's name by an adult person who is called his next friend. If the minor is a pauper, the suit may be brought on his behalf in forma pauperis by his next friend (s). In England when a minor applies to sue as a pauper, it must be proved that the minor as well as the next friend are paupers. But this rule of English practice does not apply in India, and it is enough if it is proved that the minor is a pauper; it is not necessary to prove that the next friend also is a pauper (t).

Pauper defendant.—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that although the Civil Procedure Code provides only for suits to be brought by a pauper plaintiff, the Court has inherent power to allow a defendant to defend in forma pauperis (u).

Legal representative of pauper.—The legal representative of a deceased person may be allowed to institute a suit in forma pauperis, if the deceased himself had been allowed to sue as a pauper if the proceedings had been instituted in his lifetime, provided the legal representative is also himself a pauper (v). Similarly, on the death of a pauper plaintiff, his legal representative may be allowed to continue the suit in forma pauperis, provided the legal representative is also himself a pauper (w). O. 33,

rr. 4-3.

In England an executor or administrator is not allowed to sue or defend as a pauper (x), unless he is also a beneficiary (y).

Official liquidator.—The word “person” in this rule includes a company [see General Clauses Act 10 of 1897, s. 3 (39)]. An official liquidator therefore of a company is competent to apply for leave to sue in forma pauperis on behalf of the company, if the company is a pauper within the meaning of this rule. The fact that the liquidator in his personal capacity is not a pauper does not affect the question (z).

Married woman.—The mere fact that the applicant’s husband has property is not sufficient reason for disallowing her application for leave to sue in forma pauperis (a).

Pauper appeals.—As to pauper appeals, see Order 44 below.

2. [S. 403.] Every application for permission to sue as a pauper shall contain the particulars required in regard to plaints in suits: a schedule of any moveable or immoveable property belonging to the applicant, with the estimated value thereof, shall be annexed thereto; and it shall be signed and verified in the manner prescribed for the signing and verification of pleadings.

Contents of application.

Procedure.—Rules 2 to 8 prescribe the procedure to be followed when a suit is proposed to be instituted in forma pauperis.

Death of applicant.—Where an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis has been made, but the applicant dies pending the hearing of the application, the application cannot be continued by the legal representative of the deceased applicant. The reason is that the right to apply for leave to sue as a pauper is a personal right, and it does not survive to the representative of the deceased applicant. But the legal representative may present a fresh application for leave to sue in forma pauperis, if he himself is a pauper (b).

3. [S. 404.] Notwithstanding anything contained in these rules, the application shall be presented to the Court by the applicant in person, unless he is exempted from appearing in Court, in which case the application may be presented by an authorized agent who can answer all material questions relating to the application and who may be examined in the same manner as the party represented by him might have been examined had such party attended in person.

Purda-nashin woman.—A purda-nashin woman exempted from appearing in Court under s. 132 above may present the application for leave to sue as a pauper by a duly authorized agent (c).

Pauper appeals.—The provisions of this rule apply also to applications for leave to appeal as a pauper. See O. 44, r. 1.

4. [S. 406.] (1) Where the application is in proper form and duly presented, the Court may, Examination of applicant. if it thinks fit, examine the applicant, or his agent, when the applicant is allowed to appear by agent, regarding the merits of the claim and the property of the applicant.

(2) Where the application is presented by an agent, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order that the applicant be examined by a commission in the manner in which the examination of an absent witness may be taken. If presented by agent, Court may order applicant to be examined by commission.

Examination.—This Order contemplates examination of two kinds, namely, (1) the examination of the applicant which may as indicated in this rule be regarding (a) the merits of the claim and (b) pauperism, and (2) the examination of persons other than the applicant which should be confined to pauperism only as indicated by the provisions of rr. 6 and 7 below. Persons other than the applicant cannot be examined on the merits of the applicant's claim (d).

5. [Ss. 405, 407.] The Court shall Rejection of application. reject an application for permission to sue as a pauper—

- (a) where it is not framed and presented in the manner prescribed by rules 2 and 3, or
- (b) where the applicant is not a pauper, or
- (c) where he has, within two months next before the presentation of the application, disposed of any property fraudulently or in order to be able to apply for permission to sue as a pauper, or
- (d) where his allegations do not show a cause of action, or
- (e) where he has entered into any agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the proposed suit under which any other person has obtained an interest in such subject-matter.

Alteration in the rule.—The expression "cause of action" in cl. (d) has been substituted for the words "right to sue in such Court." See notes below under the head "Clause (d): cause of action."

Clause (c): fraudulent disposal of property.—Thus if a person has property worth Rs. 1,000, and he disposes of the same in August 1915 to enable himself to sue as a pauper, and applies for leave to sue as a pauper in September 1915, the application should be rejected under this rule.

Clause (d): cause of action.—The corresponding clause of the old section ran thus: "That his allegations do not show a right to sue in such Court." It was contended, on the strength of the words "sue in such Court," that that clause referred to the question of jurisdiction and not to the question whether or not a good cause of action was disclosed in the application. But this contention was not upheld, and it was held that the terms of that clause did not limit the Court's power to merely ascertaining whether the right to sue arose within the jurisdiction, but had a more extended meaning, namely, that an applicant must make out that he has a good subsisting cause of action, capable of enforcement in Court and calling for an answer, and not barred by the law of limitation or any other law (e). It was accordingly held that the application to sue as a pauper must be rejected, if the right to sue was barred by the law of limitation (f) or as res judicata (g), or if it did not disclose a good cause of action as where the application was for leave to sue on a contract which was void as being immoral and opposed to public policy (h). The expression "cause of action" has been substituted for the words "right to sue in such Court" to give effect to the above decisions. Though the Court, as stated above, can go into the question of limitation to see if the applicant has a subsisting cause of action, it should not go into that question if it requires an elaborate examination of conflicting authorities on the point. "The cases do not decide that an elaborate enquiry into doubtful and complicated questions of law should be raised at the stage contemplated by Order XXXIII, rule 5" (i).

It is open to the Court to consider not only the statements made in the plaint but also the statements made in his examination by the applicant under r. 4, in determining whether his allegations do not show a cause of action as laid down in cl. (d) of this rule (j). Where the application discloses a cause of action, the Court, it is said, should not inquire into the merits of the case (k). But where the application does not show a prima facie case on the merits, the Court may examine the applicant regarding the merits of the claim under r. 4 above (l). In the case last cited the High Court of Allahabad went to the length of saying that the Court had the power to examine the applicant regarding the merits of his claim, though the application disclosed a prima facie case on the merits, adding that if it were not so, the granting of the application would depend, not on whether the applicant had any merits to go upon, but on the skill of the person who drafted the application, and the examination as to the merits under r. 4 would be superfluous (m).

Clause (e): transfer of interest in subject-matter of proposed suit.—The interest transferred may be either vested or contingent. Thus an agreement authorising a pleader to recover his fees out of the revenues of a village forming the subject-matter of the proposed suit, in the event of the applicant failing to pay the fees to the pleader, is an agreement under which the pleader obtains a contingent interest in the subject-matter of the suit. If such an agreement is proved, the application for leave to sue in forma pauperis must be rejected (n).

Revision.—An order rejecting an application under this rule is not appealable (o), but it is open to revision in a proper case (p).

6. [S. 408.] Where the Court sees no reason to reject the application on any of the grounds stated in rule 5, it shall fix a day (of which at least ten days' clear notice shall be given to the opposite party and the Government pleader) for receiving such evidence as the applicant may adduce in proof of his pauperism, and for hearing any evidence which may be adduced in disproof thereof.

Notice of day for receiving evidence of applicant's pauperism.

Notice.—As to form of notice, see App. H, form no. 12.

7. [S. 409.] (1) On the day so fixed or as soon thereafter as may be convenient, the Court shall examine the witnesses (if any) produced by either party, and may examine the applicant or his agent, and shall make a memorandum of the substance of their evidence.

Procedure at hearing.

(2) The Court shall also hear any argument which the parties may desire to offer on the question whether, on the face of the application and of the evidence (if any) taken by the Court as herein provided, the applicant is or is not subject to any of the prohibitions specified in rule 5.

(3) The Court shall then either allow or refuse to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper.

Scope of inquiry under this rule.—See notes to r. 4 above, "Examination".

Argument on the question whether the application is subject to the prohibitions contained in r. 5.—Sub-r. (2) enables the parties to argue the question referred to therein; but it does not preclude the Court, if no argument is offered by the parties, from considering that question of its own motion (q).

Review.—An order under this rule refusing leave to sue as a pauper is subject to review (r). The application for review is not liable to any Court-fee (s).

Propriety of order allowing applicant to sue in forma pauperis.—Where O 33, r. 7 after due consideration of an application for leave to sue as a pauper, the Court of first instance has allowed the suit to be instituted in forma pauperis, and has passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff, it is not open to the defendant, in appeal from the decree, to question the propriety of the order permitting the plaintiff to sue as a pauper. S. 105 does not apply to such an order (t).

Limitation where application granted.—Where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is granted, the date on which the application is filed will be deemed to be the date on which the pauper-suit is instituted for all purposes of limitation, and not the date on which the application is numbered and registered as a suit [Limitation Act, 1908, s. 4].

Limitation where application refused.—Where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is refused, and the applicant subsequently institutes a suit in respect of the same subject-matter in the ordinary way (r. 15), the suit will be deemed for the purposes of limitation, to have been instituted on the date on which the plaint is presented, and not the date on which the rejected application was filed. The reason is that upon an order of refusal under this rule, the proceedings instituted under r. 2 come to an end (u).

Limitation where application is converted into a plaint on payment of Court-fees.—A person who has applied for leave to sue as a pauper may, at any time, before an order is made under this rule convert his application into a plaint, by paying into Court the necessary Court-fees. In such a case, if the application was made bona fide, the suit would be deemed to have been instituted for the purposes of limitation on the day on which the application was filed and not the day on which the Court-fees were paid. But if it is found that the application was made in bad faith, the suit would be deemed to have been instituted on the day on which the Court-fees were paid and not on the day on which the application was filed (v).

Illustrations.

1. A applies for leave to sue as a pauper. On the day fixed for the hearing of the application, A, alleging that he has succeeded in negotiating a loan for the payment of the Court-fees, pays the necessary Court-fees into Court. The application is thereupon numbered and registered as a plaint. The application for leave to sue as a pauper having been made in good faith, the suit will be deemed to have been instituted on the day on which the application was filed, and not on the day on which the Court-fees were paid.

2. On the last day of the period of limitation prescribed for the institution of a suit, A applies for leave to sue as a pauper. The application is heard a fortnight later. It transpires at the hearing of the application that A was possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the Court-fees. Before an order is made under this rule rejecting the application, A pays the necessary Court-fees into Court, and the application is thereupon converted into a plaint. The application not having been made in good faith the suit will be deemed to have been instituted on the day on which the Court-fees were paid, and not on the day on which the application was filed. The Court-fees having been paid after the expiration of the period of limitation, the suit is time barred.

8. [S. 410.] Where the application is granted, it shall be numbered and registered, and shall be deemed the plaint in the suit, and the suit shall proceed in all other respects as a suit instituted in the ordinary manner, except that the plaintiff shall not be liable to pay any Court-fee (other than fees payable for service of process) in respect of any petition, appointment of a pleader or other proceeding connected with the suit.

Dispaupering.

- (a) if he is guilty of vexatious or improper conduct in the course of the suit ;
- (b) if it appears that his means are such that he ought not to continue to sue as a pauper ; or
- (c) if he has entered into any agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the suit under which any other person has obtained an interest in such subject-matter.

10. [S. 411.] Where the plaintiff succeeds in the suit, the Court shall calculate the amount of Court-fees which would have been paid by the plaintiff if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper ; such amount shall be recoverable by the Government from any party ordered by the decree to pay the same, and shall be a first charge on the subject-matter of the suit.

Costs where pauper succeeds.

See rr. 12 and 13.

Amount of Court-fees shall be a first charge.—The charge is to be enforced by an application for the attachment and sale of the subject-matter of the suit. A separate suit for the sale of the subject-matter to realize the Court-fees is now barred: see r. 13 below and s. 47 (w). The application for execution by the Government must be made within three years from the date of the decree in the pauper suit (x).

Recovery of Court-fees by Government from party ordered to pay the same.—If the plaintiff is directed to pay the Court-fees, the Government may realize the same by an application for execution against the person or property of the plaintiff, and if the defendant is directed to pay the Court-fees, the Government may realize the same by an application for execution against the person or property of the defendant. O. 33, r. 10.

Mode of realization of Court-fees by Government.—The plaintiff in a suit in forma pauperis obtains a decree against the defendant for possession of certain property. It is declared by the decree that the amount of Court-fees shall be a first charge on the property, and that the same shall also be recoverable by the Government from the defendant. In such a case if the defendant fails to pay the Court-fees, the Government may at its option realize the Court-fees either by attachment and sale of the property which was the subject-matter of the suit, or it may realize the same by an application for execution against the person or property of the defendant (y). The former right is not lost merely because the property for the recovery of which the pauper suit was brought has passed from the hands of the judgment-debtor into the hands of the pauper decree-holder (z). The Government, however, have no lien upon the decree for the amount of the Court-fees (a); hence if the amount of Court fees is not paid, the Government are not entitled to sell the decree obtained by the plaintiff for the purpose of recovering such amount (b).

Effect of first charge.—Since the amount of Court-fees recoverable by Government is a first charge on the subject-matter of the suit (c), it follows that a sale held in execution of such charge must prevail against a subsequent sale (d). For the same reason, the defendant against whom the decree is passed cannot set-off against the subject-matter of the suit any sum that may be due to him under a cross-decree held by him against the plaintiff. A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 1,500 in a suit brought in forma pauperis. A is directed by the decree to pay the Court-fees, but he fails to pay the same. Thereupon the Government apply to attach and sell the judgment-debt of Rs. 1,500 due to A from B. B claims to set-off Rs. 1,475 due to him under a decree held by him against A. B is not entitled to the set-off claimed by him, for the Government has a first charge on Rs. 1,500, that being the subject-matter of the suit (e).

Crown's prerogative of precedence in respect of Court-fees.—If the plaintiff succeeds in the suit, and the amount payable under the decree by the defendant is paid into Court, the Government is entitled to payment of the Court-fees out of the fund in the Court on a mere application for payment without attaching the fund in the first instance. The reason is that the Crown is entitled to precedence in respect of a Crown debt over all other creditors of the pauper decree-holder. A obtains a decree against B for specific performance and costs in a suit brought in forma pauperis. It is directed by the decree that B should pay the Court-fees to Government, and the Court-fees are also declared to be a first charge on the property directed to be conveyed by B to A. B fails to pay A's costs. A thereupon applies for attachment and sale of certain property belonging to B for payment of his costs. The property is sold, and the sale proceeds amounting to Rs. 1,000 are paid into Court. Thereafter A's solicitor, C, applies to the Court for payment to him out of the Rs. 1,000 of the costs incurred by him on behalf of A. At the same time a claim is made by the Government Solicitor for payment of the Court-fees out of the Rs. 1,000 in priority to C's claim. The Government are

O. 33, entitled to precedence in respect of the Court-fees, and C is entitled only to the balance
 rr. 10, 11. left after payment of the Court-fees (f).

It is to be observed that in the Calcutta case cited above, C was a creditor of A inasmuch as he was entitled to be paid his costs by A. But he was merely an ordinary creditor as distinguished from a secured creditor. It is also to be observed that Court fees form a Crown debt, and the Crown was to that extent a creditor of A. It has to be borne in mind that it is only when claims of the Crown and claims of ordinary creditors or "common persons" (to use an old expression) concur or come into competition that the Crown is preferred. The Crown has no more right than a "common person" to seize X's property and apply it in or towards discharge of a debt due from Y. It was so observed by Lord Macnaghten in a case in which the Privy Council held that where a money decree is obtained by a pauper in a suit by him against Y, and Y is directed by the decree to pay the Court-fees, the Government are not entitled to realize the Court fees by a sale of Y's property previously mortgaged by him to X, so as to defeat the right of X (g). All that could be sold by the Government in such a case is the equity of redemption of Y in the property (h).

Appeal.—Questions arising between the Government and any party to the suit under this rule would be questions relating to the "execution, discharge and satisfaction" of a decree within the meaning of s. 47. And it is provided by r. 13 below that they should be deemed to be questions arising "between the parties to the suit," within the meaning of s. 47. It therefore follows that an order deciding any such question is appealable as a decree [see s. 2, cl. (2), and s. 96] (i). Under the Code of 1882 it was held by the High Courts of Bombay and Madras that the Government not being a party to the suit, such questions could not be said to be questions arising between the parties to the suit with the meaning of s. 244 [now s. 47], and hence orders determining such questions were not appealable as decrees (j). On the other hand, it was held by the High Court of Allahabad that such orders were appealable (k). Rule 13 (which is new) sets this conflict at rest by providing that though the Government is not a party to the suit, the Government shall be deemed to be a party to the suit for the purposes of s. 47.

Costs where pauper partly succeeds and partly fails.—Rule 10 deals with the case of a pauper plaintiff who succeeds in the suit. Rule 11 deals with the case of a pauper plaintiff who fails in the suit. There is no separate provision for the case in which a pauper plaintiff has partly succeeded and partly failed. Presumably the Court is intended to deal with such a case by combining the provisions of the two rules. In such a case, therefore, the court-fees payable on the plaint should be apportioned between the plaintiff and the defendant. It is illegal to lay upon the defendant in such a case a larger proportion of the court-fee leviable from the plaintiff than would have been payable by the plaintiff if the claim had been limited originally to that portion which was successful (l).

- (a) because the summons for the defendant to appear and answer has not been served upon him in consequence of the failure of the plaintiff to pay the Court-fees or postal charges (if any) chargeable for such service, or
- (b) because the plaintiff does not appear when the suit is called on for hearing, the Court shall order the plaintiff, or any person added as a co-plaintiff to the suit, to pay the Court-fees which would have been paid by the plaintiff if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper.

See rules 12 and 13.

Alterations in the rule:

1. The word "withdrawn" has been newly added. See notes below under the head "Withdrawn."
2. Besides the liability to pay the Court-fees, the plaintiff was, under the old section, subject to a further penalty of fine or imprisonment if the Court found that the suit was frivolous or vexatious. This provision has been omitted in the present rule.

Scope of the rule.—An order under this rule directing the pauper plaintiff to pay the Court-fees can only be made in the following four cases:—

- (1) where the plaintiff fails in the suit ;
- (2) where the plaintiff is dispaupered under r. 9 ;
- (3) where the suit is withdrawn ; or
- (4) where the suit is dismissed under the circumstances specified in cl. (a) or cl. (b).

It follows from what has been stated above that where an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis is returned under O. 7, r. 10, for want of jurisdiction to be presented to the proper Court, no order can be made under this rule directing the applicant to pay the Court-fees. It cannot be said in such a case that the plaintiff has failed in the suit (m). The decision may also be put on the ground that the present rule does not apply until the application is granted, and is numbered and registered under r. 8 above. But a dismissal of the suit at the request of the plaintiff and the defendant, the suit being settled out of Court, amounts to a failure within the meaning of this rule (n).

"Withdrawn."—This word has been newly added. Under the old section there was a conflict of decisions as to whether the Court could order the plaintiff to pay the Court-fees if the suit was withdrawn (o). The insertion of the word "withdrawn" makes it clear that the Court has the power under this rule to order the plaintiff to pay Costs—This rule does not preclude the Court from awarding a successful defendant his costs in a pauper suit. The Court has full power under s. 35 to give and apportion costs in any manner it thinks fit. Nothing in this rule limits or otherwise affects the power conferred upon the Court by s. 35 to give and apportion costs (p).

Omission to make an order for payment of Court-fees.—The Government has the right at any time to apply to the Court to make an order for the payment of the Court-fees (r. 12). If the order is refused, the Government may, by virtue of the provisions of r. 13 (which is new), prefer an appeal from the order of refusal. Under the Code of 1882 it was held that the Government, not being a party to the suit, had no right of appeal, and it could therefore proceed only by an application for revision (q).

12. [New.] The Government shall have the right at any time to apply to the Court to make an order for the payment of Court-fees under rule 10 or rule 11.

Government may apply for payment of Court-fees.

This rule is new. It enables the Government, in cases of error and omission with regard to Court-fees, to have the error or omission rectified by a mere application to the Court. See r. 13 below.

13. [New.] All matters arising between the Government and any party to the suit under rule 10, rule 11, or rule 12 shall be deemed to be questions arising between the parties to the suit within the meaning of section 47.

Government to be deemed a party.

This rule is new. See notes to r. 10 under the head "Appeal," and notes to r. 11 under the head "Omission to make an order for payment of Court-fees."

14. [New.] Where an order is made under rule 10, rule 11 or rule 12, the Court shall forthwith cause a copy of the decree to be forwarded to the Collector.

Copy of decree to be sent to Collector.

15. [S. 413.] An order refusing to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper shall be a bar to any subsequent application of the like nature by him in respect of the same right to sue; but the applicant shall be at liberty to institute a suit in the ordinary manner in respect of such right, provided that he first pays the costs (if any) incurred by the Government and by the opposite party in opposing his application for leave to sue as a pauper.

Dismissal for default.—The dismissal of a pauper application in default of appearance or for default in prosecution is no bar to a subsequent pauper application in respect of the same cause of action (s).

ORDER XXXIV.

Suits relating to Mortgages of Immoveable Property.

1. [New. Act 4 of 1882, S. 85.] Subject to the provisions of this Code, all persons having an interest either in the mortgage-security or in the right of redemption shall be joined as parties to any suit relating to the mortgage. O. 34. r. 1.

Parties to suits for foreclosure, sale and redemption.

Explanation.—A puisne mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or for sale without making the prior mortgagee a party to the suit and a prior mortgagee need not be joined in a suit to redeem a subsequent mortgage.

Suits relating to mortgages.—This order is new. It is a re-enactment with some alterations of sections 85-90, 92-94, 96, 97, and 100 of the Transfer of Property Act 4 of 1882 relating to suits on mortgages. The Transfer of Property Act did not contain any provision for the passing of a final decree in cases where payment was made in accordance with the terms of the preliminary decree. This omission has now been remedied, and provision has been made in rules 3 (1), 5 (1) and 8 (1), for the passing of final decrees in such cases. The object of removing the provisions as to mortgage suits from the Transfer of Property Act to the Code is to avoid the confusion that arose in regard to execution in mortgage suits owing to such suits having been dealt with in the Transfer of Property Act (t). The general effect of this order is that the provisions of the Code as to execution of decrees apply to execution of mortgage decrees (u). See notes to r. 5 below, "Final decree for sale : Limitation."

Transfer of Property Act 4 of 1882, s. 85.—This rule is a reproduction with certain alterations of s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, which ran as follows :

"Subject to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, s. 437 [now O. 31, r. 1] all persons having an interest in the property comprised in a mortgage must be joined as parties to any suit under this chapter relating to such mortgage : provided that the plaintiff has notice of such interest."

O. 34, r. 1. Comparing the present rule with s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, it will be seen that the words "in the mortgage-security or in the right of redemption" have been substituted for "in the property comprised in the mortgage." An Explanation has been added and the proviso relating to notice is omitted. The explanation was rendered necessary as it was generally thought that s. 85 made it imperative on a puisne mortgagee to make a prior mortgagee a party to his action for foreclosure. The substitution of the words "in the mortgage-security or in the right of redemption" have made it clear that an adverse claimant who is a stranger to the security or the equity of redemption need not be joined: see notes below, "Persons having an interest either in the mortgage-security or in the right of redemption" (v).

Scope and object of the rule.—The object of this rule in requiring all persons having an interest either in the mortgage-security or in the right of redemption to be joined as parties is to avoid multiplicity of suits (w). The rule applies only to suits relating to a mortgage, that is to say, to suits for foreclosure, sale and redemption, as indicated by the marginal note to the rule. The rule therefore does not apply to suits by a mortgagee for a personal decree against the mortgagor (as to which see r. 6 below).

[The reader is advised at this stage to read the notes to s. 16 under the head "Clause (c), on p. 77 above."]

"Persons having an interest either in the mortgage-security or in the right of redemption."—The corresponding words in the Transfer of Property Act, s. 85, were "persons having an interest in the property comprised in a mortgage." These words gave rise to a conflict of views. According to one view, which coincides with the English law and the law as enunciated in the present rule, those persons only could be joined as parties to a suit relating to a mortgage who were either interested in the mortgage-security or in the right of redemption. A person who sets up a title paramount to that of the mortgagor and mortgagee should not be joined as a party to such suit, for he is neither interested in the mortgage-security nor in the right of redemption (x). Thus if A lets his property on a lease to B, and B mortgages the leasehold to C, A, holding the property by title paramount, should not be joined as a party defendant to a suit by C to enforce the mortgage (y). Similarly, if A and B are co-owners of certain property, and B mortgages his undivided share to C, A should not be joined as a party to a suit for sale by C, as A has no interest in the right of redemption (z). According to the other view which prevailed in Allahabad, all persons must be joined as parties if they had an interest in the property, though they might have no interest either in the mortgage-security or in the equity of redemption. The word "property," according to the Allahabad High Court, meant the actual immoveable property mortgaged, and not merely an interest in such property, such as an interest in the mortgage-security or in the right of redemption (a). The view held by the Allahabad High Court is no longer tenable. The present rule gives effect to the former view which, as stated above, is in accordance with the English law.

But though it was held by the Allahabad High Court that all persons interested in the mortgaged property must be joined as parties to a suit on mortgage, that Court agreed with the other High Courts in holding that a person who claimed adversely to the mortgagor and the mortgagee is not a necessary party to such suit. Thus if A mortgages certain property to B and B sues A for sale of the mortgaged property, and C claims the property as his own and denies A's right to mortgage it, C is not a necessary party to the suit, and the question of C's paramount title cannot be litigated in such a suit (b). And this is certainly the law under the present rule.

See notes below under the head "Parties to suits for redemption, foreclosure or sale."

Explanation : prior mortgagees.—The Explanation to the rule is new. It is intended to supersede certain decisions under s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act to the effect that a prior mortgagee is a necessary party to a suit for sale or foreclosure by a puisne or subsequent mortgagee (c). The Explanation declares that a prior mortgagee is not a necessary party to such a suit. Thus if A mortgages his property to B, and subsequently to C, C may sue for sale without making B a party to the suit. In such a case if a decree for sale is passed, the property would be sold subject to B's mortgage (d). But this rule does not preclude C from joining B as a party; in fact, B would be a proper party if C offered to redeem B's mortgage (e).

It follows from the first branch of the Explanation to the rule that where the same person holds two mortgages of different dates upon the same property, he may sue on the mortgage of the later date subject to his rights under the first mortgage (f).

The second branch of the Explanation declares that a prior mortgagee need not be joined in a suit to redeem a subsequent mortgage. A mortgages his property first to B, and then to C. B is not a necessary party to a suit by A against C for redemption of the mortgage to C.

Parties to suits for redemption, foreclosure or sale.—All persons interested in the equity of redemption (g), and therefore in the proper taking of the accounts (h), either (1) primarily, as the mortgagor, or (2) derivatively, by operation of law, as the Official Assignee or Receiver of the assets of the mortgagor in insolvency (i), or by voluntary alienation, as the transferee of the equity of redemption (j), should be made parties to a suit relating to a mortgage (k). In other words, persons mentioned in s. 91 of the Transfer of Property Act as persons entitled to redeem the mortgaged property should be joined as parties (l). If not joined as plaintiffs, they should be joined as defendants (m). But a person not having any interest in the mortgage at the time of the suit need not be added as a party (n).

If a mortgagee, suing on his mortgage either for sale or foreclosure, thinks fit to exempt from his suit some portion of the mortgaged property and to sell or to foreclose the

- O. 34, r. 1. mortgage in respect of the remainder, there is nothing in law to prevent his doing so. If he exempts a portion of the mortgaged property from his suit, he is not obliged to make parties to the suit the persons interested in the portion of the property so exempted (o). The same rule applies where a part of the property originally mortgaged has been absolutely released from the mortgage and has become excluded from the operation of the security (p).

Where there are two or more mortgagors, that is, two or more persons interested in the equity of redemption, any one of them may sue for redemption, but then the other mortgagors must be made party defendants (q). Where there are two or more encumbrances created on the same property, the mortgagor seeking to redeem the first mortgage must join the subsequent mortgagees as parties. Similarly, a second mortgagee seeking to redeem a prior mortgage must join the mortgagor as a party (r). But the prior mortgagee is not a necessary party to a suit by the mortgagor to redeem a subsequent mortgage: see Explanation to the rule.

All persons interested in the mortgage-security, either (1) primarily, as the mortgagee, or (2) derivatively, (i) by operation of law, as the Official Assignee or Receiver of the assets of the mortgagee in insolvency, or (ii) by voluntary alienation, as the transferee of the security or debt, should be made parties to a suit relating to the mortgage (s). If not joined as plaintiffs, they should be joined as defendants.

A mortgages his property to B. B sues A on the mortgage. During the pendency of the suit A executes a second mortgage of his property to C. C is not a necessary party to A's suit, the mortgage to him having been executed subsequently to the institution of the suit (t).

Trustees, executors and administrators.—The rule begins with the words "subject to the provisions of this Code." The reference is to O. 31, r. 1, which provides for suits concerning property vested in a trustee, executor or administrator. Having regard to the provisions of that rule, a suit for redemption (u), or foreclosure (v), or sale, may be brought by trustees without making the beneficiaries parties.

Benamidar.—A benamidar can maintain a suit on a mortgage. Thus if a mortgage is executed ostensibly in favour of A, but the real mortgagee is B, A may sue the mortgagor on the mortgage. It is not open to the mortgagor to contend that A being merely the benamidar, he cannot maintain the suit (w).

Sub-mortgagee.—A mortgagee may create such estates as he pleases. He may convey by way of sub-mortgage to whom and in as many parcels as he pleases (x). It has been held by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court that when a mortgagee has sub-mortgaged his interest in the property mortgaged to him, the sub-mortgagee is entitled to sell the interest in the property of his sub-mortgagor without impleading the mortgagor and foreclosing his equity of redemption, in other words, he is entitled to sell the sub-mortgagor's interest leaving the equity of redemption outstanding in the mortgagor (y). In an earlier case (z) the Allahabad High Court took the view that a sub-mortgagee is entitled only to a decree for money against the sub-mortgagor, but this was doubted in later cases (a), and it is not good law. See notes to r. 2 below, "Sub-mortgagee."

O. 34, r. 1.

A person cannot be both plaintiff and defendant.—In a foreclosure action by a first mortgagee where the plaintiff also joined himself as a defendant as one of the puisne mortgagees, his name was struck out as a co-defendant (b).

Consequences of non-joinder.—Under the corresponding section 85 of the Transfer of Property Act [see the section set out on page 749 above,] it was held by the Allahabad High Court that the non-joinder of a person who ought to have been made a party to a suit on a mortgage was a defect fatal to the suit and that the suit should therefore be dismissed; but that the Court, if it sees fit to do so, may add him as a party under s. 32 of the Code of 1882 [O. 1, 10 (2)]. Those decisions proceeded on what the Court said was the imperative character of the word "must" in section 85 of that Act (c). In a recent case under the present rule the same Court held that the result of non-joinder of a subsequent mortgagee in a suit on a prior mortgage, though intentional, would not be the dismissal of the whole suit but only so much of it as relate to the party affected by the subsequent mortgage (d). The High Courts of Bombay (e) and Calcutta (f) took the same view as the Allahabad High Court.

The word "must" which occurred in s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act having been dropped, and the section having been transferred into the Code, the question as to the effect of non-joinder is, it is submitted, governed by the provisions of the Code. O. 1, r. 9, provides that no suit shall be defeated by reason of non-joinder of parties. Under O. 1, r. 10 (2), the Court has the power to add parties at any stage of the suit. By s. 99 of the Code it is enacted that no decree shall be reversed or substantially varied in appeal on account of any misjoinder of parties [which includes non-joinder (g)], unless it affects the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. The result is that no suit on a mortgage should be dismissed by reason of non-joinder of parties unless the parties are necessary parties and the plaintiff refuses to add them as parties. If the parties are merely proper parties (as distinguished from necessary parties (h)), the Court may, though the plaintiff refuses to add them as parties, proceed under O. 1, r. 9, to deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it. This was in effect held by the High Court of Bombay in Shahasaheb v. Sadashiv (i), a case under the present rule. In that case a suit was brought by a mortgagee against the widow and daughters of the deceased mortgagor for sale of the mortgaged properties. The deceased was a Mahomedan, and besides the widow and daughters he left a brother as one of his heirs. It was contended on behalf of the defendants that the brother having an interest in the right of redemption he ought to have been joined as a defendant, and that the plaintiff having omitted to join him as a defendant the suit should be dismissed in its entirety. At the date when the objection as to non-joinder was taken by the defendants, the period of

O. 34, r. 1. limitation as against the brother had expired. It was held overruling the contention that the brother was not a necessary party and that a decree could be passed against the widow and the daughters to the extent of their interest in the properties.

Where a person who ought to have been joined as a party under this rule is not joined as a party, and a decree is passed in the suit, the decree cannot affect his rights (j) [see notes below, "Mahomedan co-heirs"]. Let us take the case, which is a common one, of a second or subsequent mortgagee who ought to be, but who is not joined as a party to a suit by the prior mortgagee. The second mortgagee not being a party to the suit the proceedings in the suit, are not binding on him so as to affect his rights under the second mortgage (k). As second mortgagee he could have sued the mortgagor for a sale of the property subject to the first mortgage, or he could have redeemed the first mortgage and then sued the mortgagor for sale on both the mortgages. The point to be noted is that the second mortgagee does not lose either of these rights, merely because a decree has been passed in the prior mortgagee's suit, and the mortgaged property has been sold in execution of the decree. The sale has not the effect of displacing the second mortgagee and leaving him with nothing but a claim against the balance (if any) of the sale proceeds of the property after satisfying the first mortgagee (l). The omission to implead the second mortgagee does not in any way prejudice his rights (m). That his right to sue for sale (subject, of course, to the first mortgage) is not lost, has been held by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court (n). That his right to redeem the first mortgage and to have the property sold to satisfy his own claim is not lost has been held in the undermentioned (o) and numerous other cases cited elsewhere in the notes to this rule. The next question to consider is upon what terms he is entitled to redeem the first mortgage. In Umesh Chunder v. Zahur Fatima (oo), it was held by the Judicial Committee that a second mortgagee desiring to redeem is bound to pay the whole amount due under the first mortgage, and not merely the price realized at the sale held in execution of the first mortgagee's decree. When the decree in Umesh Chunder's case was made, the Transfer of Property Act had not been passed and the procedure prescribed by that Act for suits for sales under that Act did not exist; that case was decided on the law as it then stood (p). By s. 89, however, of the Transfer of Property Act, it is provided that where a suit is brought by a mortgagee for sale and an order absolute for sale is made, "the defendant's (mortgagor's) right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished", in other words, an order absolute for sale under s. 89 substitutes the rights under the decree for those under the mortgage. The result is that where in a case governed by the Transfer of Property Act the first mortgagee obtains a decree for sale without making the second mortgagee a party to his suit, and the mortgaged property is sold in execution of the decree, and the second mortgagee afterwards sues for a sale decree under his mortgage, he (the second mortgagee) is entitled to a decree for sale on payment of the amount due under the decree, and he is not bound to pay the entire amount of the first mortgage. It was so held by the Judicial Committee in Matru Mal

v. Durga Kunwar (pp), a case decided in 1919. In several cases governed by the Trans. O. 34, r. 1. fer of Property Act and decided prior to Matru Mal's case, the Indian Courts seem to have overlooked the provisions of s. 89 of the said Act, and they held as was done by the Judicial Committee in Umesh Chunder's case that the second mortgagee can only redeem upon payment of the entire amount due under the first mortgage (q). It was also held that he was not bound to pay for any improvements which the purchaser might have made in the meantime (r). It was further held that where the property was purchased by a third party, and the purchase-money paid by him did not fully satisfy the amount of the first mortgage, the amount payable by the second mortgagee should be apportioned between the purchaser and the first mortgagee; that is to say, the purchaser should be paid the amount of the purchase-money paid by him at the sale and the balance should be paid to the first mortgagee. Thus if the amount due under the first mortgage was Rs. 10,000, and the property was sold in execution of the first mortgagee's decree for Rs. 1,050, and the second mortgagee desired to redeem the purchaser, the amount payable by the second mortgagee, namely, Rs. 10,000, should be apportioned between the purchaser and the first mortgagee, the former receiving Rs. 1,050, and the balance going to the first mortgagee (s). The decision in Matru Mal's case (t) was based upon the words "the defendant's (mortgagor's) right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished" which occurred at the end of s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act (u). But these words have been omitted in the corresponding r. 5 of this Order. The result would seem to be that the second mortgagee who is not made a party to the first mortgagee's suit can only redeem under the present law on payment of the entire amount due under the first mortgage as held in Umesh Chunder's case (v).

Where a person has come into possession subsequently to the date of the first mortgage either as putnidār or as usufructuary mortgagee, he should be joined as a party to a suit by the first mortgagee, and thus given an opportunity of redeeming the mortgage. If he is not joined as a party, the purchaser under the mortgage-decree is not entitled to obtain possession without paying off his charge (w).

Mahomedan co-heirs.—A Mahomedan mortgages his property to A. He then dies leaving as his heirs a widow, two daughters and a brother. After his death, A sues the widow and the daughters for sale of the mortgaged property. The brother is not joined as a party to the suit. According to the Bombay High Court, the brother is not a necessary party to the suit (x). But there is a conflict of opinion whether the Court can in such a case pass a decree for the sale of the whole property. In Virchand v. Kondu (y), the Court held that it can. In a later Bombay case (z), however, Pratt, J., expressed the opinion that a decree can be passed for the sale only of the right, title and interest of the widow and the daughters. See Mulla's Principles of Mahomedan Law, 6th ed., art. 36, p. 20.

Joint Hindu family.—There is a conflict of decisions as to whether where a suit is brought on a mortgage by or against the manager of a joint Hindu family in his representative capacity, the other members of the family are necessary parties to the suit having regard to the provisions of the present rule. It has been

- O. 34, r. 1. held by the High Courts of Allahabad (a), Madras (b) and Patna (c), following a recent decision of the Privy Council (d), that where a suit is brought on a mortgage by or against the manager of a joint Hindu family in his representative capacity, the other members of the family are not necessary parties to the suit, and that the suit will not fail by reason of the non-joinder of those members. It does not make any difference that the manager is a father or that he is a collateral relation as an uncle or a brother.

According to the Bombay decisions, it would seem that the other coparceners are necessary parties to a suit brought on a mortgage by or against the manager (e). But if they are not joined as parties, and a decree is passed for the sale of the joint family property against the manager in his representative character, and the property is sold in execution of the decree, the sale, it has been held, passes the interest of the other co-parceners also in the property; the mere fact that they were not parties to the mortgage-suit is no ground for setting aside the sale, unless it be shown by them that the debt contracted by the manager was one for which they are not liable (f).

According to the Calcutta High Court, the other co-parceners are necessary parties to a suit on a mortgage of joint family property, and if a decree is passed in such a suit without their being joined as parties, the decree is not binding on them, and they are entitled to bring a suit for a declaration that they not being parties to the suit their interests are not bound by the decree in the suit (g).

In a recent case before the Privy Council governed by the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, where a foreclosure decree was passed against the manager of a joint Hindu family, and the other members brought a suit to set aside the decree on the ground that they being interested in the equity of redemption ought to have been joined as parties to the suit under s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, but that they were not so joined, their Lordships held that the decree was in the circumstances of the case binding upon them, though they were not parties to the suit. Their Lordships said: "There seems to be no doubt upon the Indian decisions (from which their Lordships see no reason to dissent) that there are occasions including foreclosure suits when the managers of a joint Hindu family so effectively represent all other members of the family, that the family as a whole is bound. It is quite clear from the facts of the case and the findings of the Courts upon them that this is a case where this principle ought to be applied: 'There is not the slightest ground for suggesting that the manager of the joint family did not act in every way in the interests of the family itself', and no question arises under s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act [O. 34, r. 1], because the mortgagee had no notice of the plaintiff's interests" (h). Note that the words "provided that the plaintiff has notice of such interest", which occurred in s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, do not occur in the present rule.

Where parties are not governed by the Hindu law, and the only interest which a son has under the customary law is a reversionary interest in the property and a right to protect that interest by interfering to prevent unnecessary alienations, the son has no such interest in the property as is contemplated by the present rule and he is not therefore a necessary party to a suit on a mortgage against his father (i).

2. [New. Act 4 of 1882, s. 86.] In a O. 34, r. 2.
 Preliminary decree in foreclosure-suit. suit for foreclosure, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a decree—

- (a) ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the plaintiff for principal and interest on the mortgage, and for his costs of the suit (if any) awarded to him on the day next hereinafter referred to, or
- (b) declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree, and directing—
- (c) that if the defendant pays into Court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due to be fixed by the Court, the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendant or to such person as he appoints all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall, if so required, re-transfer the property to the defendant free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him, or, where the plaintiff claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims and shall also, if necessary, put the defendant in possession of the property, but
- (d) that, if such payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court, the defendant shall be debarred from all right to redeem the property.

Transfer of Property Act, s. 86.—This rule corresponds to s. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act except in the following particulars :—

1. The words “to the plaintiff or” which occurred in s. 86 after the word “pays” in cl. (c) have been omitted, the object being that in every case the defendant should pay the money into Court.
2. In cl. (c) the words “if so required” have been added before the words “re-transfer the property,” as according to mofussil practice a re-transfer is not ordinarily required.

Form of preliminary decree for foreclosure.—See Appendix D, form No. 3.

Right to foreclosure or sale.—The mortgagee has, at any time after the mortgage money has become payable to him, a right to obtain from the Court a decree that the mortgagor should be absolutely debarred of his right to redeem the property, or a decree that the property be sold. A suit to obtain a decree that the mortgagor should be absolutely debarred of his right to redeem the mortgaged property, is called a suit for foreclosure. A suit to obtain a decree that the property be sold is called a suit for sale [Transfer of Property Act, s. 87]. Rules 2 and 3 relate to decrees in suits for foreclosure. Rules 4 and 5 relate to decrees in suits for sale.

O. 34. r. 2. A suit for foreclosure can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a mortgage by conditional sale. A suit for sale can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a simple mortgage. A mortgagee by conditional sale cannot institute a suit for sale. A simple mortgagee cannot institute a suit for foreclosure. A usufructuary mortgagee cannot institute a suit either for foreclosure or sale [Transfer of property Act, s. 67].

Right to redemption.—The mortgagor has, at any time after the mortgage money has become payable by him, a right on payment or tender of the mortgage money, to require the mortgagee to deliver up to him all documents in the mortgagee's possession relating to the mortgaged property, and to retransfer the property to him. This right is called a right to redeem, and a suit to enforce it is called a suit for redemption [Transfer of Property Act, s. 60]. Rules 7 and 8 provide for decrees in suit for redemption.

Account against mortgagor.—Whether the suit be one for foreclosure, sale or redemption, the preliminary decree in each case must direct an account to be taken of what is due to the mortgagee for principal, interest and costs. Where the same property is mortgaged to several persons in succession, and the subsequent mortgagees are joined as parties to the suit, they are entitled, if they appear and prove their mortgages, to ask for a decree for an account on each of their mortgages and a declaration of their right to participate in the surplus sale proceeds in order of priority. An account is then taken of what is due on each mortgage, the sums so found due to each mortgagee are included in one report, and the sale proceeds are subsequently divided between the plaintiff and the puisne mortgagees in accordance with their claims as found by the report (j). Where the mortgagee is in possession, an account is to be taken of the income derived by him from the property, and also an account of what is due to the mortgagee for principal and interest. In taking the account it lies upon the mortgagee to prove what is due to him in respect of principal and interest. It follows from this that if the mortgage-bond is not put in evidence, as where it is not stamped and the mortgagee refuses to pay the penalty, he can only be credited in the account with the sum which the mortgagor admits was the amount of the principal (k).

Principal.—The amount of principal and the rate of interest payable thereon are almost invariably stated in the instrument of mortgage. Such statement amounts to an admission on the part of the mortgagor that he has received the amount mentioned in the instrument. But an admission is not conclusive proof of the matter admitted (l), it is therefore open to the mortgagor to show that a smaller consideration or no consideration at all passed under the instrument of mortgage (m). But the burden of proof in that case lies on the mortgagor (n). But though an admission is not conclusive proof of the matter admitted, it may operate as an estoppel, so as to preclude the mortgagor from asserting that a smaller consideration or no consideration passed under the instrument of mortgage (o). This happens when the mortgagee transfers his interest in the mortgage to a third party who has no notice that the full amount acknowledged to have been received on the face of the mortgage-deed has not been received. In such a case the mortgagor cannot redeem on tender or payment of the amount actually received, and the transferee is not bound to re-convey the property except on payment to him of the amount stated in the mortgage-deed to have been received by the mortgagor (p).

Interest.—The question of interest to be awarded by a decree in suits for the enforcement of a mortgage has already been considered in the notes to s. 34 under the head "Interest in suits for enforcement of mortgage," on p. 101 above. There are, however, a few matters of detail which have not been dealt with in those notes, and it is to these that we now propose to address ourselves. According to this rule as well as rules 4 and 7 there has to be added to the principal sum interest on the mortgage up to the date fixed by the Court for payment. But what if the mortgagor contends that the mortgage-bond does not provide for the payment of any interest after the due date, in other words, that there is no provision for the payment of post-diem interest? Where there is an express provision for the payment of interest up to the date of payment—and this is the usual case—there is no difficulty. The Court should in that case award interest at the contract rate up to the date of payment unless the stipulation for the payment of interest is penal within the meaning of s. 74 of the Contract Act, in which case the Court may award interest at such rate as it thinks just (see notes to s. 34, p. 101 above). Where there is no express provision for the payment of interest up to the date of payment, the Court should determine the intention of the parties by an examination of the terms of the deed. If on such examination it comes to the conclusion that there was an intention to pay interest up to the date of payment and not only up to the due date, the position is the same as if the bond contained an express provision to pay interest up to the date of payment (g). One of the rules of construction adopted in this connection is that where a mortgage-bond contains a stipulation for the periodical payment of interest, and there is nothing in the bond to suggest that the liability should cease on the due date, the Court will presume that there was an intention to pay interest up to the date of payment (r). If the Court comes to the conclusion that there was no intention to pay interest after the due date, the mortgagee may recover interest by way of damages under Act 32 of 1839, and the rate allowed will prima facie be the same as that provided by the bond, although there is no rule of law making that rate necessarily the measure of damages (s). Is the interest that may be awarded as damages to be treated on the same footing as interest for the payment of which there is an express or implied stipulation, or is it to be treated on a different footing? If the former, and that is the view held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras, it is to be treated as part of the mortgage-money so as to be recoverable out of the mortgage property in the same way as the principal and the costs of the suit (t). If the latter and this is the view taken by the High Court of Allahabad, the interest awarded as damages is not recoverable out of the mortgaged [property, but that portion of the decree which awards such interest is to be treated as a decree for the payment of money, and executed as such (u).

It may perhaps be thought, as it was thought in some cases (v), that a claim for interest by way of damages being a claim for compensation for breach of contract, the claim will be barred unless it is made in a suit brought within six years of the due date

O. 34, r. 2. for payment of the mortgage money, that being the period prescribed by art. 116 of the Limitation Act for a suit for damages for breach of a contract in writing registered. In the undermentioned case (w), however, the Judicial Committee observed that such a claim was a recurring one within the meaning of s. 23 of the Limitation Act. The result therefore is that as long as the principal is not barred, six years' interest can be recovered. Thus if the due date for payment of mortgage money under a registered deed of mortgage be 1st January 1900, and the mortgagee brings a suit for foreclosure or sale on 1st January 1908, he will be entitled, according to the observations of the Judicial Committee, to interest for a period of six years next preceding the date of the suit, and it is only the claim for interest for the years 1900 and 1901 that would be barred. According to the earlier cases cited above, the mortgagee would not be entitled to any interest at all, the date of the breach of contract being 1st January 1900, and the suit having been brought more than six years after that date. It must, however, be remembered that this rule of limitation applies only to interest by way of damages recoverable in cases where there is no intention to pay interest after the due date. In other cases, the mortgagee is entitled to have the interest from the date of his security up to the date fixed by the Court for payment added to the mortgage-debt, though it may be for a period exceeding six years (x).

Interest subsequent to the date fixed for payment.—There is no provision made in this rule for interest after the date fixed in the decree for payment as there is in rule 4 which relates to a decree for sale. The reason is to be sought in the difference between a foreclosure and sale. In the former case interest stops because the mortgagee gets the property in lieu of his debt, whereas a sale must be subject to some substantial delay, and in many cases is subject to long delays (y). See notes to s. 34, p. 101 above.

Costs.—Whether the suit be one for foreclosure, sale or redemption, the mortgagee is entitled to all costs properly incurred (z) by him including costs subsequent to decree (r. 10). "This right, resting substantially upon contract, can only be lost or curtailed by such inequitable conduct on the part of the mortgagee as may amount to a violation or culpable neglect of his duty under the contract" (a). Thus costs incurred by the mortgagee after a proper tender has been made have been disallowed (b). And where in a suit for redemption the mortgagee, though he had been fully paid, contended that a large amount was still due to him, it was held that he must pay the costs of the whole suit (c).

Account against mortgagee in possession.—Where it is provided by the terms of a usufructuary mortgage that the mortgagee should enjoy the profit in lieu of interest, or that the profits should be taken as an equivalent of the interest and of specific portions of the principal, no accounting is necessary on the part of the mortgagee, for no questions of account can arise in such a case (d). In other cases the mortgagee in possession is bound to render an account of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property (e). As to annual rents against a mortgagee in possession, see the undermentioned cases (f).

Sub-mortgagee.—A sub-mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or sale to the same extent as the mortgagee himself (g). Where the sub-mortgagee is a party to the suit, the preliminary decree must direct an account to be taken of what is due to the mortgagee and what is due to the sub-mortgagee. As to the form of decree in a suit by a sub-mortgagee against the mortgagee and mortgagor, see Appendix D. form No. 9. Discharge of debt.

Transfer of Property Act, s. 87.—This rule corresponds with s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act, except in two particulars, viz., (1) sub-r. (1) provides for the passing of a decree where payment is made; s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act contained only the words "the defendants shall (if necessary) be put into possession of the mortgaged property." (2) Sub-r. (2) again provides for the passing of a decree where no payment is made. Under s. 87 the Court had merely to pass an order. See as to this distinction, notes to r. 5 below. "Final decree for sale: Limitation," p. 766.

Final decree for foreclosure.—For form, see appendix D, form No. 10. Where the mortgagor fails to pay the amount due by him on the date fixed by the preliminary decree, the mortgagee may apply under sub-r. (2) for a final decree declaring that the mortgagor is debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property. Until such decree is passed, the mortgagor may apply under the proviso for an extension of the time for payment, and according to the Calcutta and Allahabad decisions he may, at any time before the decree is passed, pay the money into Court even without an extension and so avert foreclosure (k). It may be worth while to add that there cannot be two decrees or foreclosure passed in respect of one and the same mortgage. A sues B for foreclosure of a mortgage comprising two properties. A preliminary decree for foreclosure is passed as regards one of them, but the suit is dismissed as regards the other. A appeals from the portion of the decree dismissing his suit. If A applies for and obtains a final decree for foreclosure in respect of the property ordered to be foreclosed, it is not open to him thereafter, even if he succeeds in his appeal, to obtain another final decree for foreclosure of the other property. To obtain a final decree for foreclosure of both the properties, A must wait until the disposal of the appeal (l).

Effect of appeal on time fixed for payment.—A preliminary decree is passed in a foreclosure suit fixing a period of six months from the date of the decree for payment by the mortgagor of the amount due. The mortgagor prefers an appeal from the decree, but the decree is confirmed in appeal. The decree of the appellate Court is silent as to the time allowed for redemption. This does not amount to an extension of the time for payment so as to enable the mortgagor to redeem the mortgage within a period of six months from the date of the appellate decree. The mortgagee is entitled notwithstanding the appeal, to a final decree for foreclosure after the expiration of six months from the date of the original decree, though six months may not have expired from the date of the appellate decree. The appellate decree, simply confirming the original decree, cannot be read as giving the mortgagor six months from the date of the decree on appeal (m). This is in accordance with the general principle that where time is prescribed by the decree of the lower Court for the performance of a condition precedent, and the appellate Court simply confirms the decree of the lower Court, it cannot be regarded as enlarging the time fixed by the original decree for the performance of the condition (n). The result is the same where the appeal is withdrawn, and no decree is passed in appeal. The withdrawal does not give the mortgagor a fresh period for redemption (o). To avoid the difficulty arising in such cases, the mortgagor should take care to have a fresh day fixed for payment by the appellate Court, offering at the same time to pay interest up to that date (p), or he should apply under the proviso for an extension of the time for payment.

rr. 3, 4.

Power to enlarge time.—The Court may under the proviso postpone the day fixed for payment upon good cause shown and upon such terms as it thinks fit. The mere fact that a final decree for foreclosure has not yet been passed does not entitle the mortgagor to an extension of time (q).

It is not necessary that the application for extension of time should be made before the expiry of the time originally fixed for payment. It may be made even after the expiry of that time, but it should be made before the final decree is passed (r). It follows from this that if the mortgagor deposits the redemption money into Court before the final decree is passed, though after the date fixed for payment, and the deposit is accepted by the Court, it becomes an effectual deposit. It makes no difference whether the acceptance of such a deposit is or is not preceded by a formal order extending the time. If the Court accepts a deposit after due time has elapsed, it must be assumed, in the absence of anything to the contrary, that the Court is satisfied that there has been good cause for the delay (s). See notes to s. 148, "Act prescribed or allowed by this Code," p. 320 above.

Note that the application for a final decree for foreclosure has to be made by the plaintiff, that is, the mortgagee (t).

Discharge of debt on foreclosure.—The effect of a final decree for foreclosure is to vest the mortgaged property absolutely in the mortgagee and to extinguish the mortgage-debt. The ownership becoming vested in the mortgagee, the mortgagor is debarred from all right to redeem the property (u). And the debt being extinguished, the mortgagee can no longer proceed against the mortgagor personally.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule refusing to extend the time for payment of mortgage-money [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (o)].

4. [New. Act 4 of 1882, s. 88.] (1) In a suit for sale, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a decree to the effect mentioned in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of rule 2 and also directing that, in default of the defendant paying as therein mentioned

(2) In a suit for foreclosure, if the plaintiff succeeds and the mortgage is not a mortgage by conditional sale, the Court may, at the instance of the plaintiff or of any person interested either in the mortgage-money or in the right of redemption, pass a like decree (in lieu of a decree for foreclosure) on such terms as it thinks fit including the deposit in Court of a reasonable sum, fixed by the Court, to meet the expenses of sale and to secure the performance of the terms.

Transfer of Property Act, s. 88.—This rule corresponds with s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, excepting the words “together with subsequent interest and subsequent costs” in sub-r. (1), which are new. See notes below under the head “Preliminary decree for sale.”

Preliminary decree for sale.—A suit for sale of mortgaged property can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a simple mortgage, or where the property is subject to a charge within the meaning of s. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act (see r. 15 below). The preliminary decree to be passed in a suit for sale corresponds to the preliminary decree in a suit for foreclosure in all respects except that instead of a direction providing for foreclosure, the decree contains a direction providing for sale of the mortgaged property. The notes therefore to r. 2 relating to the taking of accounts and the determination of principal, interest and costs apply equally to this rule. But there is this difference as regards interest, that while there is no provision made for interest subsequent to the date fixed for payment in the case of a decree for foreclosure, the present rule expressly provides for such interest. This subject has already been dealt with in the notes to s. 34, “Interest on suits for enforcement of mortgage,” p. 101 and in the notes to r. 2 above, “Interest subsequent to the date fixed for payment,” p. 760.

Form of decree.—As to the form of a preliminary decree for sale, see Appendix D, form No. 4. On referring to the form it will be observed that it does contain any declaration of personal liability of the defendant for principal, interests or costs. Such a declaration, in fact, ought not to be included in the decree for sale. If the sale-proceeds are not sufficient to pay the amount due to the mortgagee the mortgagee may apply for a decree against the mortgagor personally under r. 6 below (v). See Appendix D, form No. 11.

Subsequent Incumbrancers.—For the contents of a decree for sale in a suit by the first mortgagee (v) see Appendix D, form No. 7. For the contents of a decree for sale in a suit by the second mortgagee, see Appendix D, form No. 8.

(v) See Kamalama v. Komandur (1907) 80 Mad. 464. | (v) See Berhamdeo v. Tara Chand (1909) 88 Cal. 92, 111.

Rights of second mortgagee in a suit for sale by first mortgagee.—M mortgages certain property first to A, and then to B. A sues M for a sale of the mortgaged property, making B a party defendant. In such a suit the only right of B, the second mortgagee, is to redeem A's mortgage or to receive his mortgage money or part of it out of the surplus sale proceeds after satisfaction of A's mortgage. But he cannot, having regard to the provisions of the Code, claim the right to treat the suit brought by A, the first mortgagee, as one for his benefit. It follows, therefore, that B could not insist upon a sale of the property if A's claim is satisfied by M before sale. And it also follows that if a decree for sale is passed in A's suit, B cannot claim to be entitled to a decree for sale of another property of M included in his mortgage. In either case, B must bring a separate suit for sale on his mortgage (x).

O. 34,
rr. 4, 5.

Power to decree sale in foreclosure-suit.—This power will generally be exercised where there are several mortgages of the same property. In such a case it is clear that the rights of the several mortgagees can be better adjusted by means of a sale. See Conveyancing Act, 1881 [44 and 45 Vict., c. 41, s. 25].

5. [New. Act 4 of 1882, S. 89.] (1) Where on or before the day fixed the defendant pays into Court the amount declared due as aforesaid, together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in rule 10, the Court shall pass a decree—

Final decree in suit for sale.

(a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the documents which under the terms of the preliminary decree he is bound to deliver up, and, if so required,—

(b) ordering him to retransfer the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree, and also, if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the defendant in possession of the property.

(2) Where such payment is not so made, the Court shall, on application made in that behalf by the plaintiff, pass a decree that the mortgaged property, or a sufficient part thereof, be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale be dealt with as is mentioned in rule 4.

Transfer of Property Act, s. 89.—This rule corresponds with s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act except in the following particulars :—

1. The provision contained in sub-r. (1) for the passing of a decree in the case where payment is made in accordance with the terms of the preliminary decree is new.

O. 34, r. 5.

2. By sub-rule (2) it is provided that the application which follows a preliminary decree for sale is not for an order for sale as it was in s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act, but for a decree for sale. See notes below, "Final decree for sale : Limitation."
3. The words "to the plaintiff or" which occurred in s. 89 after the word "pays" (see l. 2 of this rule) have been omitted. See notes below, "Payment into Court".
4. The words "and thereupon the defendant's right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished," which occurred at the end of s. 89, have been omitted (y). See notes to r. 1 above, "Consequences of non-joinder", p. 753.

Final decree for sale : Limitation.—Where no payment is made by the mortgagor of the amount due on or before the day fixed, the mortgagee may apply for a final decree for sale. The procedure prescribed by the Transfer of Property Act in suits for foreclosure, redemption and sale, was in the first place to pass a "decree," and then an "order absolute." This phraseology gave rise to conflicting decisions. In some cases it was held that an application for an order absolute for sale under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act was an application to execute the decree, and that the period of limitation was therefore three years from the date of the decree as provided by art. 179 of the Limitation Act of 1877 [Limitation Act, 1908, art. 182]. In other cases it was held that such an application was one to obtain a further decree, that the only article of the Limitation Act that could possibly apply to it was the general article 178 [now art. 181], that that article applied only to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure, and that there being no other article, there was no period of limitation for an application for an order absolute under the Transfer of Property Act. [It is interesting to note that the former view was taken by the Privy Council in cases under the Transfer of Property Act decided in 1914 (z)]. To put an end to this conflict of decisions it is now provided that the application which follows a preliminary decree for sale is to obtain a decree for sale so as to bring it within the purview of art. 181 of the Limitation Act of 1908 [old art. 178]. And with the same end in view the provisions as to mortgage suits have been removed from the Transfer of Property Act to the Civil Procedure Code, so that it is no longer possible to contend that these applications are not under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (a). The result is that an application for a final decree for foreclosure, sale, or redemption is now governed by the residuary article 181 of the Limitation Act, 1908, and the period of limitation is three years from the date on which the right to apply accrues (b). Where an appeal is preferred from the preliminary decree, the right to make such an application accrues not on the expiry of the time limited by the preliminary decree but on the date of the decree of the Court of appeal (c). Where a decree was passed before the new Code came into force, and the application for a final decree was made after the new Code came into force, it was held that "the right to apply" never having accrued to the decree-holder until the new Code conferred it upon him, the period of limitation under art. 181 did not begin to run until the new Code came into force, that is, until 1st January 1909 (d).

Payment into Court.—Under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act, the defendant O. 34, r. 5 may pay the amount to the plaintiff or into Court. Under the present rule [sub-r. (1)] the payment has to be made into Court. If the money is not paid into Court, there is to be a decree for sale. If any payment is made out of Court or the decree is adjusted in part and the payment or adjustment is certified under O. 21, r. 2, credit should be given to the defendant in respect thereof (e).

Sub-rule (2): "Where such payment is not so made."—Sub-r. (2) provides that where the mortgagor does not pay into Court the amount payable by him, the Court shall pass a final decree for sale. This gives the Court no option in the matter and if payment has not been made into Court on or before the fixed date, the Court must pass a final decree for sale. The result is that if no payment is made into Court and the mortgagee applies for a final decree for sale, the Court must pass such a decree though it may be proved that the mortgagee had after the preliminary decree and before the application for a final decree agreed to take over a portion of the mortgaged property in satisfaction of the debt. Sub-r. (2) recognizes no settlement except by payment into Court (f).

Enlargement of time.—This rule does not contain any provision such as is to be found in rr. 3 and 8 enabling the Court to extend the time for payment. This being so, when the money is not paid by the mortgagor by the day fixed in the decree, he cannot obtain an extension of the time for payment (g). But though the Court cannot extend the time for payment, the mortgagor is entitled to have the sale stopped under O. 21, r. 69, by payment of the amount due and costs at any time before sale (h), and, if the property is sold, to recover it back by making the deposit required under O. 21, r. 89 (i). The reason is that the provisions of the Code relating to the execution of decrees apply to sales under mortgage decrees. This was the view taken by the High Courts of Bombay, Madras and Allahabad in the cases just cited. On the other hand, it was held by the Calcutta High Court that the sections of the Code relating to execution did not apply to sales under mortgage decrees (j). To negative the view taken by the Calcutta High Court, the sections of the Transfer of Property Act relating to decrees in mortgage suits have been transferred to this Code.

Effect of sale under mortgage decree.—By a sale of property in execution of a decree for the payment of money, the interest of the judgment-debtor alone passes to the purchaser (k). By a sale of mortgaged property in execution of a decree for sale of such property, the interest both of the mortgagor and mortgagee passes to the purchaser (l). See notes to r. 1 above under the head "Consequences of non-joinder," p. 753.

Injunction restraining mortgagor from receiving income of mortgaged property.—After a final decree for sale is passed, it is not competent to the Court to restrain the mortgagor from receiving the income of the mortgaged property, merely because the property, when sold, may not realize a sufficient sum of money to satisfy the mortgage claim (m).

Appeal.—Under the present Code, a party aggrieved by a preliminary decree passed under r. 4 of this Order may appeal from it ; if he does not appeal from it, he is precluded from disputing its correctness in an appeal which may be preferred from the final decree passed under this rule [s. 97]. “ Even under the old Code the correctness of the decree under section 88 of the Transfer of Property Act [now O. 34, r. 4] could not be questioned in an application for an order absolute under section 89 [now O. 34, r. 5] or in an appeal from an order absolute made on such an application ” (n). See notes above, “ Final decree for sale : limitation,” p. 786.

An adjudication dismissing an application under this rule for a final decree for sale is not an order under s. 47, but a decree and is appealable as a decree under s. 96 (o).

Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act 17 of 1879.—As to the applicability of this rule to cases under the above Act, see the undermentioned case (p).

Costs ordinarily recoverable from mortgaged property.—In a mortgage decree for sale costs are part of the amount due upon the mortgage and are recoverable from the mortgaged property, and not personally from the mortgagor unless the decree itself so directs (q).

6. [New. Act 4 of 1882, S. 90.] Where the net proceeds of any such sale are found to be insufficient to pay the amount due to the plaintiff, if the balance is legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold, the Court may pass a decree for such amount.

Recovery of balance due on mortgage.

Decree against mortgagor personally.—Where after the sale of the mortgaged property, there is still a balance due to the mortgagee and that amount is legally recoverable from the mortgagor, the mortgagee can ask for and obtain a decree under this rule for realization of the balance from other properties of the mortgagor (r). A decree under this rule is a decree to be passed in the original suit and not in a fresh suit (s). The object of the rule is to obviate the necessity of the mortgagee having to bring a fresh suit to recover the balance (t). Such a suit, in fact, could not be brought except where the mortgagee had reserved his right to do so with the leave of the Court under O. 2, r. 2 (u). In several cases decided under the corresponding s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, it was held by the Indian Courts that a personal decree for the balance should not be passed until after the mortgaged property had been sold and the proceeds found insufficient to pay the mortgage-debt ; in other words, that a Court could not while passing a decree for sale under s. 88 of that Act (now r. 5) pass a personal decree for the balance and that a personal decree could only be passed when the proceeds were found to be insufficient to satisfy the mortgagee's claim (v). In a recent case, however, the Judicial Committee held that a decree for sale under s. 88 (now r. 4) could validly provide that if the proceeds of sale were not sufficient to pay the mortgage-debt, the mortgagor should pay the balance personally though the personal decree could not be executed until after the sale had failed to satisfy the debt (w). There is no reason why the same interpretation should not be put upon the present rule. The addition of the words "found to be" in the present rule do not affect that interpretation (ww). It seems, however, from two Forms relating to mortgage suits, namely, Form No. 45 in App. A [form of plaint] and Form No. 4 in App. D [form of decree] that the Legislature intended that a decree for sale under r. 4 should not contain a direction that the balance should be recovered from the mortgagor personally and that the decree should merely reserve to the plaintiff liberty to apply for a personal decree under this rule if the proceeds were found insufficient to pay the mortgage-debt.

It has been stated above that a personal decree cannot be obtained under this rule unless all the properties directed to be sold under rr. 4 and 5 have been sold. There may, however, be cases in which some of the properties comprised in the decree for sale could not be sold without any default on the part of the mortgagee; in such a case the fact that all the properties have not been sold does not disentitle the mortgagee to a personal decree. It is only if the Court is satisfied that the properties which were included in the decree, and which could not be sold in pursuance of the decree, were in fact not sold owing to some action or default of the mortgagee so as to inform on the mortgagor a personal liability to which otherwise he would not have been liable, that the mortgagee would be debarred from obtaining a decree for personal liability under this rule (x). It has similarly been held that the omission to include in the plaint a portion of the mortgaged property does not debar the mortgagee from obtaining a personal decree under this rule provided the omission was not intended to prejudice, and has not prejudiced the mortgagor (y).

Where net proceeds of "any such sale" are found insufficient.—The expression "any such sale" refers to a sale under a decree absolute passed under r. 5 above. It therefore follows that a personal decree under this rule can only follow the mortgage-decree under which the sale is held. Therefore, if a sale has taken place under a decree on a prior mortgage, that would not entitle a subsequent mortgagee, who has also obtained a decree for sale, to apply for and obtain a decree under this rule. The reason is that the sale was not held under his decree (z). Similarly, where a person holding two mortgages over the same property brings two suits on those mortgages and obtains two decrees, and the mortgaged property is sold under one of those decrees, the fact that the sale proceeds, after discharging that decree, are not sufficient to pay the amount due under the other decree, would not entitle him to apply for and obtain a personal decree under this rule for the balance due under the other decree. The reason is that the property was sold, not under that, but under the first decree (a).

"Amount due."—A personal decree under this rule can only be passed where the net proceeds of the sale are insufficient to pay the amount due to the mortgagee. The expression "amount due" includes costs (b). It also includes, when a puisne mortgagee is plaintiff, the amount paid by him in satisfaction of prior mortgages (c).

"Legally recoverable."—No decree can be passed for the balance under this rule unless the balance is legally recoverable. The balance would not be legally recoverable if, where the plaintiff was relying on his personal remedy against the defendant, his suit for the personal remedy was barred by limitation, that is, if the suit were brought after the expiration of six years from the due date of payment (d). Thus if the suit for sale is brought more than six years after the due date of payment, no decree can be passed under this rule for the balance. But if the suit for sale is brought within six years from the due date of payment, a personal decree may be passed for the balance, though the application under this rule is made more than six years after the due date of payment (e), provided it is made within three years from the date when the proceeds of the sale are found to be insufficient to pay the amount due to the mortgagee [Limitation Act, 1908, art. 181] (f). The view taken by the Calcutta High Court in the undermentioned case (g) that there is no period of limitation for an application under this rule can no longer be treated as good law since the decisions referred to in the notes to r. 5 above under the heading "Final decree for sale : limitation" on p. 766 above.

"Legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold."—These words mean, by way of illustration, that the balance must be a balance which the mortgagee is not precluded by the terms of the mortgage from realizing otherwise than out of the property sold (h). See s. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

Personal covenant to pay.—The mere fact that there is no personal covenant to pay the mortgage-money is no bar to the mortgagee obtaining a personal decree under this rule against the mortgagor (i).

Personal liability of purchaser from mortgagor.—The transferee of the equity of redemption in mortgaged property who has agreed with the mortgagor to pay to the mortgagee the amount due to him, is not a person from whom "the balance" is legally recoverable within the meaning of this rule, there being no contract between him and the mortgagee. Hence no personal decree can be passed against the transferees under this rule at the instance of the mortgagee (j).

Costs against puisne mortgagee.—A prior mortgagee is not entitled to a decree under this rule against a puisne mortgagee for the amount of his costs. The present rule does not apply to such a case (k).

Insolvency of mortgagor.—No decree can be passed under this rule against an insolvent mortgagor (l). See Provincial Insolvency Act, 1907, s. 16.

Limitation.—See notes above, "Legally recoverable."

Appeal.—An appeal from a decree under this rule lies to the District Judge and not to the High Court notwithstanding that the decree be for a sum exceeding Rs. 5,000, if the original mortgage suit was valued at less than Rs. 5,000 (m). See notes to s. 96, "Forum of appeal," p. 246 above.

7. [New. Act 4 of 1882, s. 92.] In a suit for redemption, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a decree—

Preliminary decree in redemption-suit.

- (a) ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the defendant for principal and interest on the mortgage, and for his costs of the suit (if any) awarded to him on the day next hereinafter referred to, or
- (b) declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree, and directing—
- (c) that, if the plaintiff pays into Court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due, to be fixed by the Court, the defendant shall deliver up to the plaintiff, or to such person as he appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall, if so required, retransfer the property to the plaintiff free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the defendant or any person claiming under him, or, where the defendant claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims, and shall, if necessary, put the plaintiff in possession of the property, but
- (d) that, if such payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court, the plaintiff shall (unless the mortgage is simple or usufructuary) be debarred from all right to redeem or (unless the mortgage is by conditional sale) that the mortgaged property be sold.

Preliminary decree for redemption.—This rule, excepting cl. (d), corresponds with r. 2 above which relates to a preliminary decree for foreclosure. The notes to that rule on p. 757 above apply mutatis mutandis to this rule. For the form of a preliminary decree for redemption, see Appendix D, form No. 5.

Sub-rule (c) : "pays into Court the amount due on a day within six months".—If no day is fixed in the decree for payment, the period of limitation for execution of the decree is governed by art. 182 of the Limitation Act, 1908, that is, three years from the date of the decree (n).

Sub-rule (d).—See notes to r. 2 under the heads, "Right to foreclosure or sale" and "Right to redemption," p. 757 above.

O. 34, r. 8. 8. [New. Act 4 of 1882, s. 93.] (1) Where on or before the day fixed, the plaintiff pays into Court the amount declared due as aforesaid, together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in rule 10, the Court shall pass a decree—

Final decree in redemption-suit.

- (a) ordering the defendant to deliver up the documents which under the terms of the preliminary decree he is bound to deliver up, and, if so required,—

- (b) ordering him to re-transfer the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree, and, also, if necessary,—

- (c) ordering him to put the plaintiff in possession of the property.

(2) Where such payment is not so made, and the mortgage is not simple or usufructuary, the Court shall, on application made in that behalf by the defendant, pass a decree that the plaintiff and all persons claiming through or under him be debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and also, if necessary, ordering the plaintiff to put the defendant in possession of the property.

(3) On the passing of a decree under sub-rule (2) the debt secured by the mortgage shall be deemed to be discharged.

(4) Where such payment is not so made, and the mortgage is not by conditional sale, the Court shall, on application made in that behalf by the defendant, pass a decree that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is found due to the defendant, and that the balance (if any) be paid to the plaintiff or other persons entitled to receive the same :

Provided that the Court may, upon good cause shown and upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit, from time to time, postpone the day fixed for payment.

Power to enlarge time.

Sub-rule (1): decree for mortgagor.—Sub-rule (1) of this rule corresponds with sub-rule (1) of rules 3 and 5. See notes to rules 3 and 5. Where the amount declared due in a decree for redemption is paid by the mortgagor into Court, the mortgagor does not lose his right to a decree under sub-rule (1), because he has attached and withdrawn from Court a portion of the sum so paid in execution of that portion of the decree which awarded him costs against the mortgagee (o).

Sub-rule (2): decree for foreclosure.—The mere fact that the preliminary decree for redemption does not contain a direction for foreclosure or sale in default of payment on the day fixed does not disentitle the mortgagee to a decree for foreclosure or sale as the case may be. The omission of the Court to draw up the proper decree under r. 7 does not deprive the mortgagee of the relief provided by this rule (p). The decree for foreclosure or sale under this rule should be passed by the Court which passed the preliminary decree for redemption, notwithstanding that the latter decree has been varied by the appellate Court (q).

Application for sale by mortgagor.—There is nothing to preclude a mortgagor in a suit for redemption of a mortgage in which he fails to pay the mortgage amount according to the decree, from himself applying for a decree for sale. Sub-rule (4), while enabling the mortgagee [defendant] to apply for such a decree, does not take away the right of the mortgagor to ask for such a decree. If it were otherwise, a mortgagee may not apply for sale, in which case the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee would continue until the mortgagee chose to apply for sale (r). •

Power to enlarge time.—The proper Court to which the application for enlargement of time should be made is the Court of first instance even though the decree for redemption was passed by the Court of Appeal (s). See notes to r. 3 under the same head on p. 763 above. See also notes to s. 148.

The proviso as to enlargement of time applies even if the suit is originally one for sale, provided the decree provides not only for sale, but for redemption of a prior mortgage. A mortgages his property first to B, and then to C. C sues A and B for a sale of the property. A decree is passed providing for redemption of B's mortgage by C, and for sale. The decree is a decree for redemption as between B and C, and the Court may allow further time to C for redemption upon good cause shown (t).

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule refusing to extend the time for the payment of mortgage-money [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (o)]. But no appeal lies from an order extending the time for payment (u).

9. [New.] Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, if it appears, upon taking the account referred to in rule 7, that nothing is due to the defendant or that he has been overpaid, the Court shall pass a decree directing the defendant, if so required, to retransfer the Decree where nothing is found due or where mortgagee has been overpaid.

This rule is new. It provides for cases where nothing is found due to the mortgagee and for cases where the mortgagee has been overpaid as may well happen where he is in possession. There was no such provision in the Transfer of Property Act, but the practice followed under that Act was the same as that prescribed by this rule (v).

10. [New. Act 4 of 1882, s. 94.] In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a foreclosure or sale or redemption, the Court shall, unless the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him to costs, add to the mortgage-money such costs of suit as have been properly incurred by him since the decree for foreclosure or sale or redemption up to the time of actual payment.

Costs of mortgagee subsequent to decree.

Cost subsequent to decree.—This rule provides for costs incurred by the mortgagee subsequent to the decree. See the first part of rr. 3, 5 and 8.

11. [New.] Where property is mortgaged for successive debts to successive mortgagees, any mesne mortgagee may institute a suit to redeem the interests of the prior mortgagees and to foreclose the rights of those that are posterior to himself and of the mortgagor.

Right of mesne mortgagee to redeem and foreclose.

This rule is new. It has been inserted in compliance with the suggestion of the Judicial Committee in the undermentioned case (w).

12. [New. Act 4 of 1882, s. 96.] Where any property the sale of which is directed under this Order is subject to a prior mortgage, the Court may, with the consent of the prior mortgagee, direct that the property be sold free from the same, giving to such prior mortgagee the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold.

Sale of property subject to prior mortgage.

Sale of property free from prior mortgage.—A puisne mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or sale without making the prior mortgagee a party to the suit [see the Explanation to r. 1]. In such a case, as also where the prior mortgagee is joined as a party and his mortgage is admitted (x), the prior mortgagee may consent to the property being sold free from his mortgage, in which case he acquires the right to have his claim satisfied first out of the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property [see r. 13 below].

Where the prior mortgage is a usufructuary mortgage.—A holds two mortgages on the same property, the first a usufructuary and the second a simple mortgage. Can A sue for sale of the mortgaged property on the simple mortgage free from the usufructuary mortgage, and claim to be paid out of the sale proceeds the amount due upon the usufructuary mortgage under this and the next rule? Yes according to the Madras rulings (y). No, according to the Allahabad rulings unless the two mortgages are in favour of different persons (z). O. 34,
rr. 12, 13.

It has been held by the High Court of Patna that where a person holds two mortgages on the same property, the first a usufructuary and the second a simple mortgage, he is entitled to sue for sale of the mortgaged property on the simple mortgage subject to his prior usufructuary mortgage, and, further, he is entitled to have the prior mortgage notified at the sale in execution of the decree obtained on the subsequent mortgage for the information of bidders at the sale though he did not mention the prior mortgage in his plaint. The omission to mention the prior mortgage in the plaint does not preclude her from keeping alive that mortgage by notifying it at the sale (a).

13. [New. Act 4 of 1882, s. 97.] (1) Such proceeds shall be brought into Court and applied as follows :—

first, in payment of all expenses incident to the sale or properly incurred in any attempted sale ;

secondly, in payment of whatever is due to the prior mortgagee on account of the prior mortgage, and of costs, properly incurred in connection therewith ;

thirdly, in payment of all interest due on account of the mortgage in consequence whereof the sale was directed, and of the costs of the suit in which the decree directing the sale was made ;

fourthly, in payment of the principal money due on account of that mortgage ; and lastly, the residue (if any) shall be paid to the person proving himself to be interested in the property sold, or if there are more such persons than one, then to such persons according to their respective interests therein or upon their joint receipt.

(2) Nothing in this rule or in rule 12 shall be deemed to affect the powers conferred by section 57 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

Whatever is due to the prior mortgagee.—This includes interest on the mortgage up to the date of the confirmation of the sale (b).

"Persons interested in the property sold."—It is provided by the last clause of sub-r. (1) that the residue of the sale proceeds should be paid to "persons interested in the property sold." This expression includes subsequent incumbrances (c). But it does not include unsecured creditors who cannot be said to be interested in the property sold; they are at liberty, however, to enforce their claims against any surplus payable to the mortgagor (d).

14. [New. Act 4 of 1882, s. 99.] (1) Where a mortgagee has obtained a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage, he shall not be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale otherwise than by instituting a suit for sale in enforcement of the mortgage, and he may institute such suit notwithstanding anything contained in Order II, rule 2.

Suit for sale necessary for bringing mortgaged property to sale.

(2) Nothing in sub-rule (1) shall apply to any territories in which the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, has not been extended.

Scope and object of the rule.—This rule corresponds with s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act except that the words "a claim arising under the mortgage" have been substituted for the words "any claim, whether arising under the mortgage or not." The effect of this alteration is to confine the operation of the present rule to cases where a mortgagee has obtained a personal decree against the mortgagor on the mortgage-debt. In such a case the rule provides that the mortgagee shall not be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of the decree: he can have the property sold only by instituting a regular suit for sale (e) and obtaining a decree for sale under rules 4 and 5. It is clear that where a mortgagee brings a regular suit for sale, and a decree is passed in such suit, what would be sold is the mortgaged property free from the mortgage; while in the other case where the suit is not for sale, but on the mortgage-debt only what would be sold is the mortgaged property subject to the mortgage, in other words it is only the mortgagor's equity of redemption that would be sold. The object of the present rule is to prevent mortgagees from suing their mortgagors on the mortgage-debt as such and in execution selling the bare equity of redemption, thereby depriving the mortgagor of the right of redemption that would be given to him by the decree for sale (f) [see r. 4 above]. A mortgages his property to B to secure repayment of Rs. 5,000. B sues A to recover Rs. 5,000, and obtains a personal decree against A. B then applies for attachment and sale of A's interest in the mortgaged property in execution of the decree. The property may be attached, for there is nothing in this rule to bar the attachment (g), but the sale must be refused under this rule. B cannot bring the property to sale except by means of a regular suit for sale. Suppose now that B sues A on a debt unconnected with the mortgage, and obtains a decree against A. Is he entitled to have A's interest in the mortgage sold in execution of such decree? Yes, for the rule only precludes B from bringing the mortgaged property to sale in execution of a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage. Under s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, however, B could not bring the mortgaged property to sale even if the decree was for a debt unconnected with the mortgage-debt (h). The provisions of that section were sweeping: they precluded a mortgagee from bringing the mortgaged property to sale in execution of a decree for the satisfaction of any claim whether arising under the mortgage or not. It may here be stated that the present rule is a rule of procedure, and not a rule of substantive law; it has, therefore, a retrospective operation (i).

Effect of sale made in contravention of the rule.—It was at one time thought that a sale made in contravention of this rule was absolutely void (j) and that the purchaser at such sale was not therefore entitled to recover possession from the mortgagor (k), and that if he did acquire possession, he was bound to account for the rents and profits realized from the mortgaged property during the term of his possession (l). But this view is no longer tenable, and it has been held in recent cases that a sale in contravention of this rule is not void, but voidable at the instance of the mortgagor or other persons interested in the equity of redemption (m). The sale, in other words, is valid until it is set aside. The procedure to set aside the sale is by way of application under s. 47; a separate suit is barred under that section. The application must be made before confirmation of the sale unless the applicant proves that owing to fraud or other reasons he was kept in ignorance of the sale proceedings preliminary to sale. The sale cannot be set aside after it is confirmed by the Court (n). Nor is it open to the mortgagor after confirmation of the sale to redeem the mortgage, whether the property has been purchased by a third person (o) or by the mortgagee himself (p).

"Decree".—An order directing a person who has stood surety on behalf of a judgment-debtor for the performance of a decree to pay the amount specified in the surety bond is not a "decree" within the meaning of this rule. It is therefore competent to the decree-holder to have the property secured by the bond for the performance of the decree sold in execution under s. 145 without instituting a regular suit for sale (q).

"Decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage."—This rule does not apply unless the decree obtained by the mortgagee is "for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage". The "mortgage" referred to in this rule must be a mortgage existing prior to the date of the decree, and not one created by the decree [ills. (1) and (2)]. Further, it must be a subsisting mortgage, and not one which by reason of the efflux of time or any other like circumstance has ceased to be enforceable at law [ill. (3)].

O. 34, r. 14. (1) A mortgages certain property to B which was then in the possession of X, and agrees to deliver possession thereof to B after recovering possession thereof from X. A recovers possession of the property from X, but does not deliver possession thereof to B. B sues A for possession, and a decree is made in B's favour for possession and for costs. In execution of the decree for costs, B applies for attachment and sale of the mortgaged property. Is B entitled to the order applied for? Yes, for the claim in respect of costs is not a "claim arising under the mortgage" within the meaning of this rule. It arises under the decree passed for costs (r).

(2) In a suit for money a decree is passed by consent whereby the defendant is directed to pay to the plaintiff Rs. 35,000. It is further declared by the decree that the plaintiff should have a first charge on certain immoveable property belonging to the defendant. Is the plaintiff entitled to have the property sold in execution of the decree without instituting a regular suit for sale on the charge? Yes, because there being no mortgage or charge prior to the decree, the decree cannot be said to have been obtained "for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage" within the meaning of this rule. The immoveable property must have been made security for the payment of the money before the decree was obtained, otherwise the provisions of this rule do not apply (s).

(3) A mortgages two properties X and Y to B. Subsequently by reason of the wrongful act of A, B is deprived of part of his security, namely, property Y. B thereupon sues A under s. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, and obtains a personal decree for the mortgage debt against A. In execution of the decree B applies for sale of property X. At this date B's remedy on the mortgage had become barred by limitation. The mortgage not being a subsisting mortgage [and A not having to redeem it], B is entitled to have property X sold in execution without bringing a regular suit for sale on the mortgage (t).

(4) A executes a usufructuary mortgage in favour of B to secure a debt of Rs. 8,000 whereby he mortgages a fixed rate holding and his right to receive offerings at a temple. By a subsequent agreement between him and B, A binds himself to pay annually Rs. 700 to B in lieu of the offerings. Subsequently B sues A on that agreement and obtains a decree against A for Rs. 3,200 being the arrears of the annual payments. This is a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage within the meaning of this rule, and B is not entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of the decree. B's right to receive the money rested on his position as mortgagee (u).

mortgagee by this rule, and that he cannot therefore bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of the decree (w). The contrary has been held by the High Court of Allahabad (x). O. 34, rr. 14, 15.

15. [New. Cf. Act 4 of 1882, s. 100.] All the provisions contained in this Order as to the sale or redemption of mortgaged property shall, so far as may be, apply to property subject to a charge within the meaning of section 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

Charges.

Charge.—Where immoveable property of one person is by act of parties or operation of law made security for the payment of money to another, and the transaction does not amount to a mortgage, the latter person is said to have a charge on the property [Transfer of Property Act, s. 100]. A charge for rent created by s. 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (y), or by s. 5 of the Madras Estates Land Act I of 1908 (z), is not a charge within the meaning of s. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act. See Ghose on Mortgage, 4th ed., pp. 103-104, 837-846.

Sale.—The right of a party having a charge is a sale and not foreclosure (a).

ORDER XXXV.

Interpleader.

1. [S. 471.] In every suit of inter-pleader the plaintiff shall, in addition to the other statements necessary for plaints, state —

Plaint in interpleader suit.

- (a) that the plaintiff claims no interest in the subject-matter in dispute other than for charges or costs ;
- (b) the claims made by the defendants severally ; and
- (c) that there is no collusion between the plaintiff and any of the defendants.

Interpleader suits.—See s. 88 and notes thereto.

2. [S. 472.] Where the thing claimed is capable of being paid into Court or placed in the custody of the Court the plaintiff may be required to so pay or place it before he can be entitled to any order in the suit.

"May be required to so pay or place it."—These words have been substituted for the words "must so pay or place it" in view of the addition of the words "immoveable property" in s. 88. The procedure by payment or deposit is plainly not applicable to immoveable property.

3. [S. 476.] Where any of the defendants in an interpleader suit is actually suing the plaintiff in respect of the subject-matter of such suit the Court in which the suit against the plaintiff is pending shall, on being informed by the Court in which the interpleader suit has been instituted, stay the proceedings as against him; and his costs in the suit so stayed may be provided for in such suit; but if, and in so far as, they are not provided for in that suit, they may be added to his costs incurred in the interpleader suit.

Procedure where defendant is suing plaintiff.

Alteration in the rule.—The words "on being informed by the Court in which the interpleader suit has been instituted" have been substituted for the words "on being duly informed by the Court which passed the decree in the interpleader suit in favour of the stakeholder, that such decree has been passed." Under the old section proceedings in other litigation relating to the same subject-matter could only be stayed on the passing of a decree in the interpleader suit. Under the present rule they can be stayed on the very institution of the interpleader suit.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (p)].

Procedure at first hearing.

4. [S. 473, R. S. C., O. 57, r. 7.] (1) At the first hearing the Court may—

- (a) declare that the plaintiff is discharged from all liability to the defendants in respect of the thing claimed, award him his costs, and dismiss him from the suit; or
- (b) if it thinks that justice or convenience so require, retain all parties until the final disposal of the suit.

(2) Where the Court finds that the admissions of the parties or other evidence enable it to do so, it may adjudicate the title to the thing claimed.

(3) Where the admissions of the parties do not enable the Court so to adjudicate, it may direct—

- (a) that an issue or issues between the parties be framed and tried, and

(b) that any claimant be made a plaintiff in lieu of or in addition to the original plaintiff,

O. 35,
rr. 4, 5.

and shall proceed to try the suit in the ordinary manner.

Non-appearance of claimant defendants.—Where the claimants do not appear at the first hearing, the Court may, if the suit is properly instituted, declare under sub-r. (1) that the plaintiff is discharged from all liability to the defendants in respect of the money claimed, award him his costs and dismiss him from the suit (b).

Sub-rule 3.—This sub-rule has been taken from O. 57, r. 7, of the English Rules.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (p)].

5. [s. 474.] Nothing in this Order shall be deemed to enable agents to sue their principals, or tenants to sue their landlords, for the purpose of compelling them to interplead with any persons other than persons making claim through such principals or landlords.

Agents and tenants may not institute interpleader suits.

Illustrations.

(a) A deposits a box of jewels with B as his agent. C alleges that the jewels were wrongfully obtained from him by A, and claims them from B. B cannot institute an interpleader suit against A and C.

(b) A deposits a box of jewels with B as his agent. He then writes to C for the purpose of making the jewels a security for a debt due from himself to C. A afterwards alleges that C's debt is satisfied, and C alleges the contrary. Both claim the jewels from B. B may institute an interpleader suit against A and C.

Interpleader suit by agents.—In ill. (a), C does not claim through A (principal), but adversely to him; hence no interpleader suit can be brought. In ill. (b) C claims through A; hence B may institute an interpleader suit against A and C.

Interpleader suit by tenants.—A lets certain lands to B. C alleges that the lands never belonged to A, and claims the rent from B. B cannot institute an interpleader suit against A and C; the reason is that C claims adversely to A (landlord). But if C claims the rent, alleging that the lands were sold to him by A after the same were let to B, B may institute an interpleader suit against A and C; the reason is that in this case C claims through A, that is, as purchaser from A. The result is that an interpleader suit by a tenant can only be maintained if the defendant other than the landlord claims through the landlord (c). The following is a peculiar case. A grants a perpetual lease of certain villages to his wife B. B sub-lets the villages to C. A, alleging that the lease granted by him to B was executed by him benami in the name of B, gives notice to C, claiming the rents of the villages. B denies that the transaction was benami, and she also claims the rents from C. C can maintain an interpleader suit against A and B. The reason given is that A must be deemed to claim through B (d). See Indian Evidence Act, s. 116.

ORDER XXXVI.

Special Case.

O. 36, r. 1.

1. [S. 527.] (1) Parties claiming to be interested in the decision of any question of fact or law may enter into an agreement in writing stating such question in the form of a case for the opinion of the Court, and providing that, upon the finding of the Court with respect to such question,—

Power to state case for Court's opinion.

- (a) a sum of money fixed by the parties or to be determined by the Court shall be paid by one of the parties to the other of them ; or
- (b) some property, moveable or immoveable, specified in the agreement, shall be delivered by one of the parties to the other of them ; or
- (c) one or more of the parties shall do, or refrain from doing, some other particular act specified in the agreement.

(2) Every case stated under this rule shall be divided into consecutively numbered paragraphs, and shall concisely state such facts and specify such documents as may be necessary to enable the Court to decide the question raised thereby.

2. [S. 528.] Where the agreement is for the delivery of any property, or for the doing, or the refraining from doing, any particular act, the estimated value of the property to be delivered, or to which the act specified has reference, shall be stated in the agreement.

Where value of subject-matter must be stated.

O. 36,
rr. 3-5.

3. [S. 529.] (1) The agreement, if framed in accordance with the rules hereinbefore contained, may be filed in the Court which would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit, the amount or value of the subject-matter of which is the same as the amount or value of the subject-matter of the agreement.

Agreement to be filed and registered as suit.

(2) The agreement, when so filed, shall be numbered and registered as a suit between one or more of the parties claiming to be interested as plaintiff or plaintiffs, and the other or the others of them as defendant or defendants; and notice shall be given to all the parties to the agreement, other than the party or parties by whom it was presented.

4. [S. 530.] Where the agreement has been filed, the parties to it shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court and shall be bound by the statements contained therein.

Parties to be subject to Court's jurisdiction.

5. [S. 531.] (1) The case shall be set down for hearing as a suit instituted in the ordinary manner, and the provisions of this Code shall apply to such suit so far as the same are applicable.

Hearing and disposal of case.

(2) Where the Court is satisfied, after examination of the parties, or after taking such evidence as it thinks fit, —

- (a) that the agreement was duly executed by them,
- (b) that they have a bona fide interest in the question stated therein, and
- (c) that the same is fit to be decided, it shall proceed to pronounce judgment thereon, in the same way as in an ordinary suit, and upon the judgment so pronounced a decree shall follow.

ORDER XXXVII.

Summary Procedure on Negotiable Instruments.

1. [S. 538.] This Order shall apply only to—

Application of order.

O. 37,
rr. 1, 2.

- (a) the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras and Bombay ;
- (b) the Chief Court of Lower Burma ;
- (c) the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind; and
- (d) any other Court to which sections 532 to 537 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, have been already applied.

Courts of Small Causes in Calcutta, Madras and Bombay.—The corresponding Chapter of the Code of 1882 applied also to Presidency Small Cause Courts. Cl. (c) of s. 538 of that Code, which expressly mentioned those Courts, has been omitted in this rule, the reason given being that its appropriate place would now be in rules under the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act. See O. 51, r. 1.

2. [S. 532.] (1) All suits upon bills of exchange, hundis or promissory notes may, in case the plaintiff desires to proceed hereunder, be instituted by presenting a plaint in the form prescribed ; but the summons shall be in Form No. 4 in Appendix B or in such other form as may be from time to time prescribed.

Institution of summary suits upon bills of exchange, etc.

(2) In any case in which the plaint and summons are in such forms, respectively, the defendant shall not appear or defend the suit unless he obtains leave from a judge as hereinafter provided so to appear and defend ; and, in default, of his obtaining such leave or of his appearance and defence in pursuance thereof, the allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted, and the plaintiff shall be entitled to a decree for any sum not exceeding the sum mentioned in the summons, together with interest at the rate specified (if any) to the date of the decree, and such sum for costs as may be prescribed, unless the plaintiff claims more than such fixed sum, in which case the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way, and such decree may be executed forthwith.

Old section.—This rule corresponds with s. 532 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars :—

1. The explanation to s. 532 has been omitted, and in lieu thereof the words “ the allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted ” have been added into sub-r. (2). See notes below under the head “ The allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted.”

2. The fourth paragraph of s. 532, which provided that the Court should not require the defendant to pay the amount claimed into Court or to give security therefor unless the Court thought that the defendant had not a prima facie case or that the defence was not made in good faith, has been omitted. See r. 3, sub-r. (2), below.

Points of difference between a summary suit and a suit brought in the ordinary manner on negotiable instruments :—

- (1) A plaintiff proposing to sue upon a negotiable instrument may either bring a summary suit or he may bring a suit in the ordinary manner. The advantage of a summary suit is that the defendant is not, as in a suit brought in the ordinary manner, entitled as of right to defend the suit. The defendant in a summary suit must apply for leave to defend within 10 days from the service of the summons upon him (see Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 159), and such leave will be granted only if the affidavit filed by the defendant discloses such facts as would make it incumbent on the plaintiff to prove consideration, or such other facts as the Court may deem sufficient for granting leave to the defendant to appear and defend the suit. If no leave to defend is granted, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree.
- (2) A summary suit must be brought within 6 months from the date on which the debt becomes due and payable (Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 5). The period of limitation for a suit brought in the ordinary manner on a negotiable instrument is 3 years.
- (3) A summary suit can only be brought in the Courts mentioned in r. 1.

A negotiable instrument means a promissory note, bill of exchange, or cheque, expressed to be payable to a specified person or his order, or to the order of a specified person or to the bearer thereof, or to a specified person or the bearer thereof (Negotiable Instruments Act 26 of 1881, s. 13).

A bill of exchange is an instrument in writing containing an unconditional order, signed by the maker, directing a certain person to pay a certain sum of money only to, or to the order of, a certain person, or to the bearer of the instrument (Negotiable Instruments Act, s. 5).

A promissory note is an instrument in writing (not being a bank-note or a currency-note) containing an unconditional undertaking, signed by the maker, to pay a certain sum of money only to, or to the order of, a certain person, or to the bearer of the instrument (Negotiable Instruments Act, s. 4).

Illustrations.

(a) A executes an instrument whereby he promises to pay Rs. 5,000 to B on demand. The instrument is a promissory note.

(b) A executes an instrument whereby he promises to pay Rs. 5,000 to B on demand. By the same instrument it is provided that B should not be entitled to call for payment of the said sum unless A failed to deliver certain goods to B within six months. The instrument is not a promissory note, for the undertaking to pay Rs. 5,000 is conditional upon A's failure to deliver the goods : Simon v. Hakim Mahomed (1896) 19 Mad. 368.

(c) A executes an instrument whereby he promises to pay Rs. 5,000 to B on demand. At the same time a separate agreement is made between the parties whereby B agrees not to demand payment of the sum of Rs. 5,000 unless A failed to deliver certain goods to him within six months. The instrument is a promissory note : Simon v. Hakim Mahomed (1896) 19 Mad. 368.

O. 37.
rr. 2, 3.

Form of summons in a summary suit.—The summons in such a suit requires the defendant to obtain leave from the Court within 10 days from the service thereof to appear and defend the suit and within such time to cause an appearance to be entered on his behalf: see Appendix B, Form No. 4. The Court has no power, after the time fixed by the summons for obtaining leave to appear and defend has expired, to extend the time (f).

“Unless he obtains leave.”—See r. 3 below.

“Together with interest at the rate specified (if any).”—In a suit under this Order the plaintiff is not entitled to recover any interest, unless the interest is specified in the promissory note itself (g). See in this connection Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, ss. 79-80.

The allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted.—These words have been substituted for the Explanation to the old section. The Explanation was inserted to negative the effect of a Calcutta decision (h). But the Explanation was characterized as “wholly unintelligible and meaningless” by Amir Ali, J., in the undermentioned case (i), and it has accordingly been replaced by the words cited in the head note. The effect of those words is to enable the plaintiff to succeed on his own allegations, though the allegations may be of such a nature that if the defendant appeared and denied them, they would have to be proved by the plaintiff.

3. [S. 533.] (1) The Court shall, upon application by the defendant, give leave to appear and to defend the suit, upon affidavits which disclose such facts as would make it incumbent on the holder to prove consideration, or such other facts as the Court may deem sufficient to support the application.

Defendant showing defence on merits to have leave to appear.

(2) Leave to defend may be given unconditionally or subject to such terms as to payment into Court, giving security, framing and recording issues or otherwise as the Court thinks fit.

Alterations in the rule.—Under the old section it was obligatory upon the Court to grant leave to the defendant to appear and defend, if he paid into Court the amount claimed by the plaintiff and mentioned in the summons. It is no longer so under the present rule. The words “upon the defendant paying into Court the sum mentioned in the summons or,” which occurred in s. 533 after the word “suit” in the third line have been omitted.

Limitation.—The application for leave to appear and defend must be made within 10 days from the date of service of the summons on the defendant. The date shown in the Sheriff's return as the date of service is the only date to which reference could be made to determine the question of limitation arising on an application under this section (j).

Appeal.—No appeal is allowed under the Code from an order under this rule. It has been recently held by the High Court of Calcutta that an order under this rule directing a defendant to give security as a term on which leave to defend should be given is not a "judgment" within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, and not therefore appealable as such (k). O. 37,
rr. 3-7.

4. [S. 534.] After decree the Court may, under special circumstances, set aside the decree, and if necessary stay or set aside execution and may give leave to the defendant to appear to the summons and to defend the suit, if it seems reasonable to the Court so to do, and on such terms as the Court thinks fit.

5. [S. 535.] In any proceeding under this Order the Court may order the bill, hundi or note on which the suit is founded to be forthwith deposited with an officer of the Court, and may further order that all proceedings shall be stayed until the plaintiff gives security for the costs, thereof.

6. [S. 536.] The holder of every dishonoured bill of exchange or promissory note shall have the same remedies for the recovery of the expenses incurred in noting the same for non-acceptance or non-payment, or otherwise, by reason of such dishonour, as he has under this Order for the recovery of the amount of such bill or note.

7. [S. 537.] Save as provided by this order, the procedure in suits hereunder shall be the same as the procedure in suits instituted in the ordinary manner.

ORDER XXXVIII.

Arrest and Attachment before Judgment.

Arrest before Judgment.

1. [S. 477, 478.] Where at any stage of a suit, other than a suit of the nature referred to in section 16, clauses (a) to (d), the Court is satisfied, by affidavit or otherwise,—

Where defendant may be called upon to furnish security for appearance.

O. 38, r. 1.

(a) that the defendant, with intent to delay the plaintiff, or to avoid any process of the Court or to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,—

(i) has absconded or left the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(ii) is about to abscond or leave the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(iii) has disposed of or removed from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court his property or any part thereof, or

(b) that the defendant is about to leave British India under circumstances affording reasonable probability that the plaintiff will or may thereby be obstructed or delayed in the execution of any decree that may be passed against the defendant in the suit, the Court may issue a warrant to arrest the defendant and bring him before the Court to show cause why he should not furnish security for his appearance :

Provided that the defendant shall not be arrested if he pays to the officer entrusted with the execution of the warrant any sum specified in the warrant as sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim ; and such sum shall be held in deposit by the Court until the suit is disposed of or until the further order of the Court.

The proviso to the rule is new.

Scope of the Order.—Order 21 deals with the arrest of a judgment-debtor and the attachment of his property in execution of a decree passed against him. The present Order lays down rules for the arrest of a defendant and the attachment of his property before judgment. The object of these rules is to secure the plaintiff against any attempt on the part of the defendant to defeat the execution of any decree that may be passed against him, “Reasonable probability.”—Where the defendant is about to leave British India, it is not necessary to prove any “intent” on his part to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him. It is enough if the circumstances under which he is about to leave British India afford a “reasonable probability” that any decree that may be passed against him in the suit will thereby be obstructed or delayed in execution (1).

The suit must be bona fide.—In every case where an application is made under this rule, the Court must be satisfied that the suit is bona fide. Where the plaintiff is indisputably entitled to a part of the relief claimed in the plaint, the mere circumstance of the rest of the plaintiff's claim being of a disputable character does not render the suit mala fide (m).

Consequences of obtaining arrest on insufficient grounds.—See s. 95.

Form. For form of warrant of arrest before judgment, see App. F, form no. 1.

2. [s. 479.] (1) Where the defendant fails to show such cause the Court shall order him either to deposit in Court money or other property sufficient to answer the claim against him, or to furnish security for his appearance at any time when called upon while the suit is pending and until satisfaction of any decree that may be passed against him in the suit, or make such order as it thinks fit in regard to the sum which may have been paid by the defendant under the proviso to the last preceding rule.

(2) Every surety for the appearance of a defendant shall bind himself, in default of such appearance, to pay any sum of money which the defendant may be ordered to pay in the suit.

Deposit in Court.—Where money is deposited by the defendant in Court under this rule, it is a payment into Court to the general credit of the action and charged with a lien in favour of the plaintiff on the latter obtaining a decree in his favour. Where after payment into Court other judgment-creditors of the defendant attach the money or the defendant becomes an insolvent, the plaintiff on obtaining his decree is entitled to priority over the claims of the attaching creditors and the Official Receiver. The reason is that the amount so paid cannot be taken to have been ordered and levied as security for the defendant's appearance (n).

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (q)].

Form.—For form of security, see App. F, no. 2.

3. [s. 480.] (1) A surety for the appearance of a defendant may at any time apply to the Court in which he became such surety to be discharged from his obligation.

Procedure on application by surety to be discharged.

(2) On such application being made, the Court shall summon the defendant to appear or, if it thinks fit, may issue a warrant for his arrest in the first instance.

O. 38,
rr. 3-5.

(3) On the appearance of the defendant in pursuance of the summons or warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Court shall direct the surety to be discharged from his obligation, and shall call upon the defendant to find fresh security.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (q)].

Form.—For form of summons to defendant, see App. F, form no. 3.

4. [S. 481.] Where the defendant fails to comply with any order under rule 2 or rule 3, the Court may commit him to the civil prison until the decision of the suit, or, where a decree is passed against the defendant, until the decree has been satisfied :

Procedure where defendant fails to furnish security or find fresh security.

Provided that no person shall be detained in prison under this rule in any case for a longer period than six months, nor for a longer period than six weeks when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit does not exceed fifty rupees.

Provided also that no person shall be detained in prison under this rule after he has complied with such order.

Form.—For form of order for committal, see App. F, form no. 4.

5. [Ss. 483, 484.] (1) Where, at any stage of a suit, the Court is satisfied, by affidavit or otherwise, that the defendant, with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,—

Where defendant may be called upon to furnish security for production of property.

- (a) is about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property, or
- (b) is about to remove the whole or any part of his property from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, the Court may direct the defendant, within a time to be fixed by it, either to furnish security, in such sum as may be specified in the order, to produce and place at the disposal of the Court, when required, the said property or the value of the same, or such portion thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree, or to appear and show cause why he should not O. 38, r. 5. furnish security.

(2) The plaintiff shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, specify the property required to be attached and the estimated value thereof.

(3) The Court may also in the order direct the conditional attachment of the whole or any portion of the property so specified.

Alterations in the rule.—The words “or has quitted the jurisdiction of the Court leaving therein property belonging to him” which occurred in the old section after cl. (b) of Sub-r. (1) have been omitted.

Object of the rule.—The main object of an attachment before judgment is to enable the plaintiff to realize the amount of the decree, supposing a decree is eventually passed, from the defendant's property (o).

“Is about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property.”—The expression “property” includes property of every description whether moveable or immoveable (p). The expression “his property” refers to the property of the defendant. It does not refer to property which is the joint property of the plaintiff and the defendant. Thus where A sued B for partnership accounts, and applied for an attachment before judgment of the partnership property on the allegation that B was about to dispose of the same, it was held that the case was not one for an attachment before judgment, but for the appointment of a receiver under O. 40 below (q).

Effect of vesting order on attachment before judgment.—See notes to r. 10 below under the same head.

Money paid into Court.—There is nothing in the language of this rule to give the plaintiff a charge on the money furnished by the defendant as security. Hence if the defendant becomes an insolvent, the money vests in the Official Assignee. The reason is that the money must be taken to have been ordered and levied as security to do what is specified in the rule, namely, to produce and place at the disposal of the Court, when required, the property referred to therein or the value thereof (r).

Surety for defendant.—Where the defendant dies pending the suit and the cause of action survives against his legal representatives and the legal representatives are brought on the record, the death of the defendant does not operate as a discharge of the surety (s).

Mortgage suit.—An attachment before judgment may be granted in a suit on a mortgage (t).

Principle of s. 64 applies to attachment before judgment.—S. 64 of the Code provides that when property is attached in execution of a decree, any private transfer of the property contrary to the attachment shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment. The same principle applies to the case of attachment.

before judgment, provided that a decree is ultimately passed for the plaintiff at whose instance the attachment was made. This clearly appears from r. 9 below which provides that an attachment before judgment shall be removed when the suit is dismissed (u).

Divorce proceedings.—An order for attachment before judgment will not be made in divorce proceedings governed by the Indian Divorce Act 4 of 1869 (v).

Forms.—For form of attachment before judgment with order to call for surety, see App. F, form no. 5. For form of security for production of property, see App. F, form no. 6.

6. [S. 485.] (1) Where the defendant fails to show cause why he should not furnish security, or fails to furnish the security required, within the time fixed by the Court, the Court may order that the property specified, or such portion thereof as appears sufficient to satisfy any decree which may be passed in the suit, be attached.

Attachment where cause not shown or security not furnished.

(2) Where the defendant shows such cause or furnishes the required security, and the property specified or any portion of it has been attached, the Court shall order the attachment to be withdrawn, or make such other order as it thinks fit.

"Property specified."—That is, the property specified by the plaintiff as required by r. 5, sub-r. (2). Such property may be within or beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. The words in s. 483 of the Code of 1882 were, "property within the jurisdiction of the Court." It was accordingly held by the High Courts of Madras and Bombay that the only property that could be attached before judgment was property within the jurisdiction of the Court (w). On the other hand, it was held by the High Court of Calcutta and recently also by the Madras High Court that s. 483 was to be read with s. 648 [now s. 136], and that the two sections read together enable the Court to attach before judgment property situate beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction (x). The omission of the words "within the jurisdiction of the Court" clearly shows that the Court may attach property before judgment, even though it may be situate beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (q)].

Form.—For form of attachment before judgment, see App. F, form no. 7.

7. [S. 486.] Save as otherwise expressly provided, the attachment shall be made in the manner provided for the attachment of property in execution of a decree.

8. [S. 487.] Where any claim is preferred to property attached before judgment, such claim shall be investigated in the manner hereinbefore provided for the investigation of claims to property attached in execution of a decree for the payment of money. O. 38,
rr. 8-10.

Investigation of claim to property attached before judgment.

9. [S. 488.] Where an order is made for attachment before judgment, the Court shall order the attachment to be withdrawn when the defendant furnishes the security required, together with security for the costs of the attachment, or when the suit is dismissed.

Removal of attachment when security furnished or suit dismissed.

Removal of attachment where suit dismissed.—The latter part of the rule which requires that the attachment shall be removed when the suit is dismissed is no more than directory. Hence even if no order is made withdrawing the attachment, the attachment falls to the ground on dismissal of the suit. A sues B and obtains an attachment before judgment. The suit is dismissed, but the Court omits to make an order withdrawing the attachment. A then appeals from the decree. Pending the appeal B sells the property that was attached before judgment to C. Thereafter the suit is decreed on appeal. A then applies for execution of the decree by the sale of the property on the footing that the attachment before judgment subsisted and that it was not therefore necessary to re-attach it. A is not entitled to have the property sold. The attachment before judgment came to an end on the dismissal of A's suit though no order was made withdrawing the attachment (y).

10. [S. 489.] Attachment before judgment shall not affect the rights, existing prior to the attachment, of persons not parties to the suit, nor bar any person holding a decree against the defendant from applying for the sale of the property under attachment in execution of such decree.

Attachment before judgment not to affect rights of strangers nor bar decree-holder from applying for sale.

Effect of vesting order on attachment before judgment.—Attachment before judgment does not confer any priority as against the Official Assignee, though the plaintiff at whose instance the attachment was made may ultimately obtain a decree in the suit. A sues B, and attaches B's property before judgment. A decree is then passed for A. Between the date of the attachment and the date of the decree B's property vests in the Official Assignee under a vesting order. The Official Assignee applies to the Court for removal of the attachment on the ground that the property has vested in him. A contends that the attachment being prior to the date of the vesting order, his claim has a priority over that of the Official Assignee. A's contention will not be upheld, and the attachment will be removed (z). See notes to s. 64 under the head "Effect of vesting order on attachment," p. 177 above.

O. 38,
rr. 10-12.

Attachment before judgment not to affect rights of persons not parties to the suit.—A and B are members of a joint Hindu family. C sues A, and obtains an attachment before judgment of A's interest in the joint family property. C then obtains a decree against A. A dies after the decree. On A's death, his interest in the property passes by survivorship to B, and C is not entitled to have A's share sold in execution of the decree (a).

Attachment before judgment not to bar rights of other decree-holders.—A institutes a suit against B, and obtains an attachment before judgment of B's property. Subsequently C, another creditor of B, obtains a decree against B. C is entitled to have the property attached and sold in execution of his decree. The attachment before judgment does not confer any right upon A to have his decree satisfied in priority to that of C (b).

11. [S. 490.] Where property is under attachment by virtue of the provisions of this Order and a decree is subsequently passed in favour of the plaintiff, it shall not be necessary upon an application for execution of such decree to apply for a re-attachment of the property.

Property attached before judgment not to be re-attached in execution of decree.

Scope of the rule.—The effect of this rule is merely to take away the necessity for a re-attachment of the property. But it does not exempt the plaintiff, when a decree follows the attachment, from making the usual application for execution under O. 21, r. 11 (2) (c). This is now made clear by the substitution of the words, "it shall not be necessary upon an application for execution of such decree to apply for re-attachment of the property," for the words, "it shall not be necessary to re-attach the property in execution of such decree." Nor does the rule give the decree-holder at whose instance the property was attached before judgment any right to preferential treatment over other decree-holders who may have applied for a rateable distribution under s. 73 (d).

Objection that property attached before judgment is not saleable.—

An omission on the part of the defendant to take objection that the property sought to be attached before judgment is not saleable within the meaning of s. 60, at the time when the application is made for attachment before judgment, does not preclude the defendant from raising that objection when an application is made for execution of the decree passed in the suit (e).

12. [New.] Nothing in this Order shall be deemed to authorize the plaintiff to apply for the attachment of any agricultural produce in the possession of an agriculturist, or to empower the Court to order the attachment or production of such produce.

Agricultural produce not attachable before judgment.

ORDER XXXIX.

Temporary Injunctions and Interlocutory Orders.

Cases in which temporary injunction may be granted.

1. [S. 402.] Where in any suit it is proved by affidavit or otherwise—

- (a) that any property in dispute in a suit is in danger of being wasted, damaged or alienated by any party to the suit, or wrongfully sold in execution of a decree, or
- (b) that the defendant threatens, or intends to remove or dispose of his property with a view to defraud his creditors, the Court may by order grant a temporary injunction to restrain such act, or make such other order for the purpose of staying and preventing the wasting, damaging, alienation, sale, removal or disposition of the property as the Court thinks fit, until the disposal of the suit or until further orders.

Temporary and perpetual injunctions.—Injunctions are of two kinds, temporary and perpetual. Temporary injunctions are regulated by rr. 1 and 2 of this Order: perpetual injunctions are regulated by ss. 55-57 of the Specific Relief Act I of 1877. A party against whom a perpetual injunction is granted is thereby restrained for ever from doing the act complained of. A perpetual injunction can only be granted by final decree made at the hearing and upon the merits of the suit. A temporary or interim injunction, on the other hand, may be granted on an interlocutory application at any stage of the suit. The injunction is called temporary, for it endures only until the suit is disposed of or until the further order of the Court (f). Thus if A's neighbour commences to build on a plot of land belonging to him a house which, if completed, would obstruct the access of light and air enjoyed by A over the said plot to the windows of his house in respect of which he claims an easement, he (A) may sue his neighbour for a perpetual injunction restraining him from building so as to disturb the easement claimed by him (A), and may at any time after the institution of the suit apply to the Court under r. 2 below for a temporary injunction restraining the defendant from building until the suit is disposed of. Interference with A's easement is an "injury" within the meaning of r. 2 below.

Principles governing temporary injunction.—"The granting of a temporary injunction under the powers conferred by this [rule] is a matter of discretion. True it is a matter of judicial discretion. But if the Court which grants the injunction rightly appreciates the facts and applies to those facts the true principles, then that is a sound exercise of judicial discretion" (g). One of those principles is that the Court in granting a temporary injunction must first see that there is a bona fide contention between the parties, and then, on which side, in the event of success, will lie the balance of inconvenience if the injunction does not issue (h). Or, as stated in the judgment of

(f) Specific Relief Act, 1877, s. 53.

(g) Per White, C. J., in Subba v. Haji Badsha (1903) 26 Mad. 168, 174.

(h) Doherty v. Allman (1878) 3 App. Cas. 706; Subba v. Haji Badsha (1903) 26 Mad. 168, 175.

- O. 39, r. 1. Cotton, L.J., in Preston v. Luck (i), to entitle a plaintiff to an interlocutory injunction the Court should be satisfied that there is a serious question to be tried at the hearing and that on the facts before it there is a probability that the plaintiff is entitled to relief. The real point, upon an application for a temporary injunction, is not how the question ought to be decided at the hearing of the case, but whether there is a substantial question to be investigated and whether matters should not be preserved in statu quo until that question can be finally disposed of (j). Another principle is that where a perpetual injunction is sued for, and the plaintiff applies for a temporary injunction, the Court should grant a temporary injunction if the effect of not granting such an injunction will be to deprive the plaintiff for ever of the right claimed by him in the suit (k). See notes to r. 2, "Principles governing temporary injunction to restrain breach of contracts."

Duration of temporary injunction.—A temporary injunction may be granted until the suit is disposed of or until the further order of the Court. When a temporary injunction is granted "until the further order of the Court," and the injunction is not dissolved pending the suit, it comes to an end when the suit is disposed of. After the decree is passed, the Court that passed the decree has no power to grant a further temporary injunction (l). But if an appeal is preferred from the decree, the Appellate Court, it would seem, may grant a temporary injunction under this rule (m).

Illustration.

A sues B in the Court of a Subordinate Judge for a declaration of his title to certain property, and obtains a temporary injunction restraining B from selling the property, which B was about to sell, "until the suit is disposed of." A fails to prove his title to the property, and the suit is dismissed. A appeals from the decree to the High Court. [The suit being dismissed, the injunction is dissolved, and B can therefore sell the property]. A then applies to the Court of the Subordinate Judge for a further injunction restraining B from selling the property until the appeal to the High Court has been heard. The Subordinate Judge has no power to grant the injunction: Gossain Money v. Guru Pershad (1885) 11 Cal. 146. In the above case, the Court said: "If any Court has a right to grant an injunction now, we presume it would be the Court of Appeal."

Effect of temporary injunction.—The effect of a temporary injunction granted under this rule is not to make a subsequent alienation of the property void. Hence if a party, against whom a temporary injunction is granted restraining him from alienating the property, sells or mortgages the property pending the injunction, the sale or mortgage is not void. The only penalty A incurs by alienating the property in spite of the injunction is that prescribed by r. 2 (3), namely, that his other property may be attached and sold for awarding out of the sale proceeds compensation to the party on whose application the injunction was granted, and he may also be detained in the civil prison. In this respect a temporary injunction has a different effect from an attachment, for it will be seen on referring to s. 64 that when property is attached, any private transfer of the property contrary to the attachment is void against all claims enforceable under the attachment (n).

"Property in dispute in a suit."—Note that the property in respect of which O. 39, r. 1. an injunction may be granted in the circumstances mentioned in cl. (a) of this rule must be property in dispute in the suit, and no other (o). Where a plaintiff who is out of possession claims possession, the Court will not grant an injunction against a defendant in possession under a claim of right unless the threatened injury will be irreparable. In any event the plaintiff must show a prima facie case in support of the title asserted by him (p). See notes to r. 7 below.

An application for an injunction restraining a party to the suit from interfering with the applicant's right to worship in, and to free access to, a temple which was the subject-matter of the suit, pending the disposal of the suit, does not fall either under cl. (a) or cl. (b) of this rule (q).

"Property in danger of being wrongfully sold in execution of a decree."—Certain property attached in execution of a decree obtained by A against B is notified for sale at the instance of A. C, alleging that the property belongs to him and not to B, sues A and B for a declaration of his title to the property, and applies for an injunction under this rule to restrain A from bringing the property to sell until the suit is disposed of. Has the Court power to grant the injunction under this rule? Yes, for the case is one in which the property in dispute in the suit is "in danger of being wrongfully sold in execution of the decree." It is immaterial that the Court in which the suit is brought is different from the Court executing the decree, or, so long as it has jurisdiction to entertain the suit, that it is a Court of lower grade than the Court executing the decree. Thus if the Court executing the decree is the Court of a District Judge, and the Court in which the suit is brought is the Court of a Subordinate Judge, the latter Court though a Court of inferior grade, has power under this rule to stay the sale and execution proceedings pending before the District Court (r).

Injunction against a person not a party to the suit.—No injunction can be granted under this rule against a person who is not a party to the suit (s).

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order refusing, as well as from one granting, a temporary injunction (t). An appeal also lies from an order purporting to be made under his rule, though not warranted by it (u). See O. 43, r. 1, cl. (r).

Revision.—No appeal lies to the High Court from an order made by the lower Appellate Court under this rule [s. 104, sub-s. (2)]. In two recent cases where a temporary injunction was refused by the lower Appellate Court, the High Court of Calcutta, without deciding whether it had power to revise the order, made an order granting an injunction in the exercise of powers conferred upon High Courts by s. 15 of the Charter Act (v).

Power of Chartered High Courts "to restrain a party" from proceeding with a suit pending in another Court.—As regards Chartered High Courts, it has been held that the powers of these Courts to grant an injunction are not confined to the terms of rules 1 and 2 of this Order. A carrying on business at D, sues B in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of D to recover from B a sum

It is clear that this case is not covered either by r. 1 or r. 2 of this Order. Has the High Court power to grant the injunction? It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that the powers of High Courts to grant a temporary injunction are not confined to the terms of rr. 1 and 2, and that these Courts have inherent power under their general equity jurisdiction to grant such an injunction independently of the provisions of the Code, and, further, that such power can be exercised by a single Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court (w). The same view has been recently taken by the High Court of Bombay, but the injunction granted in that case was rather peculiar in form, namely, that A should be restrained from proceeding with the suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at D in such a way as to delay or embarrass the trial of the suit in the High Court (x). The Calcutta decisions, however, are not uniform as to whether this power can be exercised if A did not reside within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court, it being held by Sale, J., that the power can be exercised even if A did not reside within the limits of the jurisdiction (y), while by Fletcher, J., (z) and Stephen, J., (a), that it cannot be exercised unless A resided within those limits. The point arose in a Bombay case but it was there held that as A had been served and had appeared in the suit without protest, he must be deemed to have submitted to the jurisdiction of the Bombay Court and the Court had therefore power to grant the injunction (b).

It has also been held by the High Court of Bombay that it has inherent power to restrain by injunction a defendant in a suit filed in the High Court from proceeding in the Small Causes Court at Bombay with a suit filed by the defendant referring to the same matter to which the High Court suit relates (c).

The next question to consider is, whether the power of a Chartered High Court to restrain a party from proceeding with a suit pending in another Court is confined to suits pending in a Court subordinate thereto, or whether it extends to suits pending in any Court in British India. In one of the cases cited above (d), the High Court of Calcutta made an order restraining a party from proceeding with a suit pending in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Bareilly, a Court subordinate to the High Court of Allahabad. In a recent Bombay case, Macleod, J., expressed the opinion that though the High Court has power to restrain a party from proceeding with a suit pending in a Court subordinate to it, it has no such power in respect of a suit pending in a Court not subordinate to it (e). In support of the above view, the learned Judge relied on the provisions of s. 56, cl. (b), of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, by which it is enacted that an injunction cannot be granted to stay proceedings in a Court not subordinate to that from which the injunction is sought.

A further question that arises in this connection is whether a British Indian Court has power to restrain a party from proceeding with a suit pending in a Court of a Native State. It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that it has not (f). The contrary, however, was assumed by the High Court of Bombay in a recent case (g).

No appeal lies from an order of a High Court refusing to restrain a defendant from prosecuting his suit in another Court. Such an order is not appealable under the Code. Nor is it a "judgment" within the meaning of cl. 12 of the Charter (h).

rr. 1,2.

Power of High Court "to stay proceedings" pending in a subordinate Court.—We have dealt in the preceding paragraph with the power of a Chartered High Court to restrain a party to a suit pending before it from proceeding with a suit pending in another Court. The question we have now to consider is whether a Chartered High Court has power in a suit pending before it to issue a prohibition to a subordinate Court in the mufassal from proceeding with a suit pending before the latter Court, and if so, whether that power can be exercised by a single Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court. It has been held by a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court that a Chartered High Court has power to make an order directing a Subordinate Court not to proceed further with a suit pending in the latter Court, but that such an order appertains to the Appellate and not to the Original Side of the High Court, and that it can therefore only be made by those Judges to whom the Appellate Side work is assigned by Rules made under s. 13 of the Charter Act, that is, by a Division Court consisting of two Judges, and that it cannot be made by a single Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court (i). In the case cited above, an order was made by Macleod, J., in a suit pending before him, staying a suit pending in the Ratnagiri Court. It was assumed by a majority of the Full Bench that such an order was a prohibition to the Ratnagiri Court, and not merely to the parties, from proceeding with the suit in that Court, and it was held that Macleod, J., had no jurisdiction to make the order. On the other hand, Macleod, J., who was one of the Judges constituting the Full Bench, declined to read his order as a direct prohibition to the Ratnagiri Court, and held that a single Judge sitting on the Original Side was competent to restrain the parties in a suit before him from proceeding with a suit in a Subordinate Judge's Court in the mufassal, and so in effect stay the proceedings within the meaning of s. 56, cl. (b) referred to above. As to transfer of suits from Presidency Small Cause Courts to High Court, see notes to cl. 13 of the Letters Patent.

This rule does not apply to probate proceedings.—An injunction cannot be granted under this rule in a probate proceeding. The reason is that the only question in controversy in such a proceeding is that of representation of the estate of the deceased; there is no question of title in such a proceeding, and it cannot therefore be said that there is "any property in dispute" in such a proceeding as contemplated by this rule. If the Court is satisfied that the estate of the deceased is in danger of being wasted or wrongfully alienated, it may appoint an administrator pendente lite, and it may also make an order under r. 7 below, but it cannot grant an injunction under this rule (j).

Form.—For form of temporary injunction, see App. F, form no. 8.

Injunction to restrain of breach.

O.39, r. 2. restrain the defendant from committing the breach of contract or injury complained of, or any breach of contract or injury of a like kind arising out of the same contract or relating to the same property or right.

(2) The Court may by order grant such injunction, on such terms as to the duration of the injunction, keeping an account, giving security, or otherwise, as the Court thinks fit.

(3) In case of disobedience, or of breach of any such terms, the Court granting an injunction may order the property of the person guilty of such disobedience or breach to be attached, and may also order such person to be detained in the civil prison for a term not exceeding six months, unless in the meantime the Court directs his release.

(4) No attachment under this rule shall remain in force for more than one year, at the end of which time, if the disobedience or breach continues, the property attached may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award such compensation as it thinks fit, and shall pay the balance, if any, to the party entitled thereto.

Alterations in the rule :—

1. The words " of any kind " after the word " injury " in sub-r. (1) are new. See notes below under the head " Scope of the rule."
2. The words, " unless in the meantime the Court directs his release " in sub-r. (3) are also new. See in this connection the undermentioned case (k).

Scope of the rule.—Rule 1 enables the Court to grant temporary injunctions in the cases specified in cls. (a) and (b) thereof. The present rule enables the Court to grant temporary injunctions to restrain a defendant from committing the breach of a contract or other injury of any kind. The words " of any kind " are new. They have been added to supersede an Allahabad decision where it was held that the words " other injury " in the old section did not include acts of trespass upon property (l). Such acts would now come under this rule.

Principles governing temporary injunction to restrain breach of contract.—Temporary injunctions to restrain the breach of a contract are regulated by the present rule. Perpetual injunctions to restrain the breach of a contract are regulated by the Specific Relief Act, 1877, s. 56, cl. (f), and s. 57. Section 56, cl. (f), of the Specific Relief Act, provides that a perpetual injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract the performance of which would not be specifically enforced. Now the performance of a contract is not specifically enforced where damages would afford adequate relief. Hence no injunction can be granted where damages afford adequate relief. " The very first of principle of injunction law is that you do not obtain injunctions for actionable wrongs [or for breach of contracts] for which damages are the proper remedy" (m). In the Bombay case of Nusserwanji v. Gordon (n), it was observed by Sir Charles Sargent that the issue of a temporary injunction is governed by the same principles as the granting of a permanent injunction at the trial of a case. Referring to these observations, Sir Arnold White in a recent Madras case said: "Now, having regard to the fact that the law with regard to the granting of a perpetual injunction is to be found in the Specific Relief Act and is laid down with great precision, and that the law with regard to the granting of a temporary injunction is to be found in the Code of Civil Procedure and is declared to be a matter for discretion, if it were necessary to consider the point, I am not sure I should be prepared to go quite so far as Sir Charles Sargent" (o). However that may be, the following two rules seem to govern all cases on the subject now under consideration:—

1. If a suit is brought for specific performance of a contract and for an injunction to restrain the defendant from committing a breach of the contract, and the plaintiff applies for a temporary injunction to prevent the breach of the contract until the suit is disposed of, the Court will decline to grant a temporary injunction if the plaintiff and the affidavits filed by the parties show on the face of them that the case is not one for a perpetual injunction or for specific performance. The refusal of the application for a temporary injunction in (1) Bhikaji v. Bapu Saju (p), (2) Haji Abdul v. Haji Abdul (q), (3) Nusserwanji v. Gordon (r), (4) Assur v. Ratanbai (s), and (5) Gunpat v. Rajun Koor (t) may be referred to this rule. In the first of these cases, the suit was by an association of artisans consisting of 57 members for an injunction against one of them to restrain him from committing the breach of a contract which provided that all the members of the association should bring the business of working and carving in wood into one shop and should divide the profits among them and that no member should take any order on his own account. The plaintiffs applied for a temporary injunction against the defendant to prevent the breach of the contract until the disposal of the suit, but the injunction was refused, for the agreement being on the face of it illegal (as the association, though it consisted of 57 members, was not registered as a Company), no specific performance or injunction could be granted. In the second case, the suit was for a perpetual injunction to prevent the breach of an agreement for a charter-party. The Court refused to grant a temporary injunction to restrain the breach on the ground that a perpetual injunction could not be granted to restrain the breach of such an agreement, though a perpetual injunction might be granted to prevent the breach of an actually completed charter-party. In the third case, an application for a temporary injunction was made by the agents of a company as plaintiffs to restrain the company from employing a firm of solicitors in contravention of an agreement between the company and the agents whereby the plaintiff's firm were appointed agents of the company for 25 years and the agents were empowered to employ solicitors for the company during that period. The Court refused the application on the ground that since a perpetual injunction could not be granted to restrain the company from employing persons other than the plaintiff's firm as agents of the company, a temporary injunction should not be granted to restrain the company from employing solicitors other than those of the plaintiff's choice. In the fourth case, the Court refused to grant a temporary injunction to restrain a Hindu widow from adopting a son in breach of an agreement entered into by her not to adopt a son. The order of refusal was based on the ground that the Court could not grant a perpetual injunction to prevent the breach of such a contract. In the

- O. 39, r. 2. last of the case cited above the parties were Hindus, and the suit was brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for specific performance of a contract whereby the defendant agreed to give his minor daughter in marriage to the plaintiff. The plaintiff applied for an interim injunction to restrain the defendant from giving away the girl in marriage to another person to whom the defendant was about to marry the girl, but the application was refused on the ground that the contract was not one of which specific performance could be enforced or the breach of which could be restrained by a perpetual injunction.

2. The converse of rule (1) is not always true; that is, the Court will not grant a temporary injunction before the hearing in every case where a perpetual injunction might fitly be granted at the hearing; for to justify a temporary injunction, not only must the case be such that an injunction is the appropriate relief, but there must be the further ingredient that unless the defendant is restrained forthwith by a temporary injunction, irreparable injury or inconvenience may result to the plaintiff before the suit is decided upon its merits (u). But if a case is a proper one for specific performance, and irreparable injury is likely to be caused to the plaintiff unless the breach of the contract is forthwith restrained, the Court will grant a temporary injunction to restrain the breach of the contract. Thus where A sued B for specific performance of a contract whereby in consideration of A having advanced money to B for working certain mica mines, B agreed to deliver all the mica produced from the mines to A, and not to deliver any portion thereof to any other person, and also for an injunction to restrain the breach thereof and applied for a temporary injunction to restrain B from delivering any portion of the mica to another firm to whom B had arranged in breach of his contract to consign a portion, the Court held that the case was a fit one for a temporary injunction, and the injunction was granted (v).

Sub-rule (3).—The powers conferred by this sub-rule can only be exercised if the Court is set in motion by a party who deems himself aggrieved; hence where a District Court committed a defendant to jail of its own motion for disobeying an injunction of the Court, it was held that the order of committal was ultra vires. Note, however, that a High Court has inherent power to commit a defaulting party for contempt; hence a High Court can commit a defendant to jail of its own motion for disobeying an injunction issued by such Court (w). See s. 151 above.

Under sub-r. (3) the Court can in its discretion order either arrest or attachment of property; it is not bound in the first instance to make an order of attachment and then order imprisonment. There is no foundation for the proposition that the Court can only make an order of imprisonment after an order of attachment.

If the application to commit was made while the suit was pending, the fact that the order on the application was made after the suit was dismissed does not affect the powers of the Court to take action for disobedience to the injunction (x).

Temporary mandatory injunction.—The Courts in England have the power to grant mandatory injunctions on interlocutory applications (y). And so have Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary original civil jurisdiction (z). The same power is possessed by Courts in the mofussal (a).

Appeal.—An appeal lies under O. 43, r. 1 (r), from an order declining to order arrest or attachment of property for disobedience of an interlocutory injunction granted under this rule, and the Appellate Court can on appeal pass the order which the lower Court should have passed (c).

3. [S. 494.] The Court shall in all cases, except where it appears that the object of granting the injunction would be defeated by the delay, before granting an injunction, direct notice of the application for the same to be given to the opposite party.

The Court may, on the application of any party to a suit, order the sale, by any person named in such order, and in such manner and on such terms as it thinks fit, of any moveable property, being the subject-matter of such suit, or attached before judgment in such suit, which is subject to speedy and natural decay, or which for any other just and sufficient cause it may be desirable to have sold at once.

and the Court in its decree may award against the default-er the amount so paid, with interest thereon at such rate as the Court thinks fit, or may charge the amount so paid, with interest thereon at such rate as the Court orders, in any adjustment of accounts which may be directed in the decree passed in the suit.

10. [S. 502.] Where the subject-matter of a suit is money or some other thing capable of delivery and any party thereto admits that he holds such money or other thing as a trustee for another party, or that it belongs or is due to another party, the Court may order the same to be deposited in Court or delivered to such last-named party, with or without security, subject to the further direction of the Court.

Deposit of money, etc.,
in Court.

Deposit of money in Court.—Suppose A sues B to recover a sum of Rs. 5,000. Suppose B admits Rs. 4,000 to be due to A, and contests A's claim as to the balance of Rs. 1,000. In such a case, A may apply to the Court to direct B to deposit Rs. 4,000 in Court, or to deliver the same to him (A).

Holds.—This rule applies only when the party making the admission holds the property or other thing which the party in whose favour the order is made seeks to have delivered to him (e).

"Appeal".—An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (r)].

ORDER XL.

Appointment of Receivers.

1. [S. 503.] (1) Where it appears to the Court to be just and convenient the Court may by order— O. 40, r. 1

Appointment of receivers.

- (a) appoint a receiver of any property, whether before or after decree ;
- (b) remove any person from the possession or custody of the property ;
- (c) commit the same to the possession, custody or management of the receiver ; and

O. 40, r. 1.

(h) confer upon the receiver all such powers as to bringing and defending suits and for the realisation, management, protection, preservation and improvement of the property, the collection of the rents and profits thereof, the application and disposal of such rents and profits, and the execution of documents as the owner himself has, or such of those powers as the Court thinks fit.

(2) Nothing in this rule shall authorize the Court to remove from the possession or custody of property any person ~~whom any party to the suit has not a present right so to remove.~~ not to be removed

Alterations in the rule—

1. The words "to be just and convenient" have been substituted for the words "to be necessary for the realization, preservation or better custody, or management of any property, moveable or immovable, the subject of a suit or attachment." The result is that the Court may now appoint a receiver not only in the particular cases specified in the old section, but in every case in which it appears to the Court to be just and convenient to do so. Thus a receiver may be appointed in a suit for partition (ee). See notes below under the head "Just and convenient." As to execution of decrees by appointment of a receiver, see s. 51, cl. (d).
2. The words "whether before or after decree" in cl. (a) are new. They give effect to the undermentioned decision under the old section (f).
3. The words "subject-matter of a suit" which occurred in the corresponding s. 503 of the Code of 1882 have been omitted. See notes below under the head "Receiver in proceedings other than a suit."

Receiver in proceedings other than a suit.—S. 503 of the Code of 1882 contained the words "subject-matter of a suit." The result was that under that section a receiver could only be appointed in a suit. Those words have been omitted in the present rule so that a receiver may now be appointed even in proceedings other than a suit (g).

Courts empowered under this order.—Under the Code of 1882 (s. 505), a receiver could only be appointed by High Courts and District Courts, and not by Courts subordinate to District Courts. This bar has been now removed by the omission of s. 505. A receiver may now be appointed by Subordinate Judges also.

A receiver is an officer of the Court.—"The object and purpose of the appointment of a receiver may generally be stated to be the preservation of the subject matter of the litigation pending a judicial determination of the rights of the parties thereto" (h). "The receiver is appointed for the benefit of all concerned; he is the representative of the Court and of all parties interested in the litigation, wherein he is appointed" (i). The appointment [of a receiver] is the act of the Court and made in the interests of justice. [A receiver] is an officer or representative of the Court, and subject to its orders. His possession is the possession of the Court by its receiver, and the tenants in possession, when he is appointed to receive rents and profits of immoveable property, become virtually tenants pro hac vice of the Court, their landlord. His possession is the possession of all the parties to the proceedings according to their titles. The moneys in his hands are in custodia legis for the person who can make a title to them (j).

Legal consequences arising from the fact that a receiver is an officer of the Court:—(1) Attachment.—Property in the hands of a receiver cannot be attached without the leave of the Court first obtained. Thus if a receiver is appointed of certain property in a suit between A and B, and C obtains a decree against A or B, C cannot in execution of his decree attach the property in the hands of the receiver without the leave of the Court; such an attachment is an interference with the Court's possession through its officer, the receiver (k). But if a receiver is appointed of certain property in a suit between A and B, and the property was mortgaged by A to C before the receiver was appointed, and C obtains a decree for sale of the mortgaged property, C may bring the property to sale, though it may be in the hands of the receiver, without the leave of the Court. The reason is that no attachment is necessary before sale in the case of a mortgage-decree, and no attachment being necessary, there cannot be any interference with the possession of the receiver (l).

(2) Suit by or against receiver: leave of Court.—A receiver cannot sue or be sued except with the leave of the Court by which he was appointed receiver (m). A party feeling aggrieved by the conduct of a receiver may seek redress against him in the very suit in which he was appointed receiver, or he may bring a separate suit against the receiver in which case he must obtain the leave of the Court (n). There is no statutory provision which requires a party to take the leave of the Court to sue a receiver. The rule has come down to us as a part of the rules of equity, binding upon all Courts of Justice in this country. It is a rule based upon public policy which requires that when the Court has assumed possession of a property in the interest of the litigants before it, the authority of the Court is not to be obstructed by suits designed to disturb the possession of the Court. The institution of such suits is in the eye of the law a contempt of the authority of the Court, and therefore the party contemplating such a suit is required to take the leave of the Court so as to absolve himself from that charge. The grant of such leave is made not in exercise of any power conferred by statute, but in exercise of the inherent power which every Court possesses to prevent acts which constitute or are akin to an abuse of its authority (o). In Pramatha Nath v. Khetra Nath (p), Bodilly, J., held that the leave of the Court to sue a receiver was a condition precedent to the right to sue, and that if the leave was not obtained before suit, it could not be granted subsequent to the institution of the suit and the suit should be dismissed. This decision was dissented from in subsequent Calcutta cases where it was held that the leave may be granted even after the institution of the suit (q). In a recent Bombay case (r), Pratt, J., after an exhaustive review of the case-law on the subject, came to the same conclusion; the learned judge held that failure to obtain leave prior to the

O. 40, r. 1. institution of the suit was cured by subsequent leave. As regards suits by a receiver, it has been recently held by the High Court of Calcutta that if the suit is instituted without the leave of the Court, the Court may grant leave after the institution of the suit to continue the suit (s).

It may here be noted that a receiver is not a necessary party to a suit for a declaration of title and possession of property of which he is appointed receiver (t); nor can he be made a party to a proceeding under sec. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code merely in his capacity of receiver (u).

(3) Debts incurred by receiver in business.—If a receiver is appointed of the estate of a deceased person with authority to continue the business carried on by the deceased, and in the course of such business debts are properly incurred by the receiver, the persons to whom the debts have become due may proceed not only against the receiver personally, but also against the estate of the deceased, for the recovery of their debts, and they are entitled to payment of their debts in priority to other creditors of the estate. The right to proceed against the estate is founded on the just and equitable principle that as the acts of a receiver acting within his authority are the acts of the Court, the estate cannot be permitted to enjoy the benefits of those acts without being held liable for the obligations arising out of them (v).

(4) Loss occasioned by receiver's default.—If any loss is occasioned to the property by the wilful default or gross negligence of the receiver, the loss is to be borne not by the party on whose application the receiver was appointed (for a receiver is not an agent of such party), but by the estate in the first instance. The party damaged by the loss may then proceed against the receiver (w). See r. 4 below.

(5) Agreement controlling receiver's powers.—A receiver being an officer of the Court, it is contempt of Court on the part of any of the parties to enter into an agreement with him restricting and controlling his powers. The Court alone has the power to determine the powers of a receiver (x).

(6) Remuneration.—A receiver being an officer of the Court, the Court alone has to determine his fees or remuneration (r. 2 below). Hence a promise by a party to pay the remuneration of a receiver without leave of the Court is against law, and is not binding on the promisor (y).

(7) Criminal Procedure Code, s. 145.—Where a receiver is appointed by a Court of property the subject of a suit, a Magistrate has no jurisdiction under sec. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to interfere with him in respect of his possession of the property without the sanction of the Court, his possession being the possession of the Court (z). It may here be noted that a Civil Court has no power under this rule to appoint a receiver in supersession of a receiver appointed by a Magistrate under sec. 146, cl. (2), of the Criminal Procedure Code (a). See sub-rule (2).

(8) Prosecution of receiver.—A receiver appointed by the High Court, who has under its orders taken possession of property, cannot be prosecuted for criminal breach of trust in respect thereof without first obtaining the leave of the Court (b).

"Just and convenient."—These words have been taken from the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. (8). The words in that Act are "just or convenient," but they have been construed to mean just and convenient (c). The words "just and convenient" do not mean that the Court is to appoint a receiver simply because the Court thinks it convenient; they mean that the Court should appoint a receiver for the protection of rights or for the prevention of injury according to legal principles (d). Hence the Court should not appoint a receiver of property in the possession of the defendant claiming the same by a legal title, unless the plaintiff can show prima facie that he has a strong case and a good title to the property (e). The mere circumstance that the appointment of a receiver will do no harm to any one is no ground for appointing a receiver (f). See notes "alterations in the rules," No. 1, p. 806 above, and notes below "Cases in which a receiver may be appointed" See also Specific Relief Act 1 of 1877, s. 44.

Which Court may appoint a receiver.—The power to appoint a receiver rests only with the Court in which the suit is brought in which it is sought to appoint a receiver. Hence a District Judge has no power to appoint a receiver of property which is the subject of a suit in another Court, even though such Court may be subordinate to his own (g).

Whether a receiver can be appointed when an executor is in possession.—In England the rule is that the Court will not appoint a receiver against an executor unless gross misconduct is shown, and the same rule, it is submitted, applies to the case of an executor of the will of a person subject to the provisions of the Indian Succession Act. This rule, however, does not apply in the case of an executor of the will of a Mahomedan. The reason is that while in the case of persons governed by the Succession Act, a testator can dispose of the whole of his property by his will, a Mahomedan testator cannot dispose of more than one-third of his property by his will (h).

Where a receiver is appointed of the estate of a deceased person, and the estate is being administered by the Court, the Court may authorise the receiver to pay out of the estate in his hands pressing claims against the estate (i).

Temporary injunctions and appointment of receiver.—The distinction between a case in which a temporary injunction may be granted and a case in which a receiver may be appointed is that while in either case it must be shown that the property should be preserved from waste or alienation, in the former case it is sufficient if it be shown that the plaintiff in the suit has a fair question to raise as to the existence of the right alleged, while in the latter case a good prima facie title to the property over which the receiver is sought to be appointed has to be made out (j).

Cases in which a receiver may be appointed.—A and B constitute members of a trading joint family. A sues B for partition of the joint family property, and applies for the appointment of a receiver on the ground that B has misappropriated large sums of money and thrown the accounts into confusion. Here it is just and convenient that a receiver should be appointed, for the object is the preservation of the property which is the subject of the suit (k). The removal of a large amount of property by the defendant under circumstances which might fairly give rise to suspicion during the

- O. 40, r. 1. pendency of a suit in which the question of title to that property would be determined. is a sufficient strong ground for the appointment of a receiver (l). Likewise a receiver may be appointed of mortgaged property in a suit for foreclosure or sale, if a proper case is made out (m). A receiver may also appointed in a testamentary suit (n).

Partnership suits.—In considering the question of the appointment of a receiver in partnership suits, a distinction has to be drawn between cases in which the contest is between partners and cases in which the contest is between partners on the one hand and non-partners on the other.

In the first class of cases, that is, where one partner seeks to have a receiver appointed against his co-partners, it is necessary to distinguish cases in which the partnership has already been dissolved from those in which the partnership is still subsisting. If the partnership is already dissolved, the Court usually appoints a receiver, almost as a matter of course (o). The jurisdiction of the Court to appoint a receiver is not ousted by an arbitration clause providing for a reference to arbitration of all matters in dispute between the parties (p). But if the partnership is still subsisting, no receiver will be appointed unless some special grounds for the appointment can be shown. There must be fraud or gross misconduct of some kind (q), or wilful denial of the complaining partner's rights (r), or persistence under cover of right in conduct endangering the assets (s).

In the second class of cases, that is, where the contest is between partners on the one hand and non-partners on the other, e.g., legal representatives of a late partner, a receiver will not be granted against a member of the firm at the instance of the legal representatives, unless some special grounds for the interference of the Court can be established. But it is a matter of course to appoint a receiver where such appointment is sought by a partner against the legal representatives of his late co-partner, or where all the partners are dead and an action is pending between their representatives (t).

Decree for maintenance.—Where a decree is passed for maintenance and a charge is created on a specified property to secure payment of the allowance, it is desirable, in order to avoid difficulty in executing the decree and to make a fresh suit unnecessary in case of default of payment, to appoint a receiver by the decree itself with directions, in case of default of payment to take possession of the property and sell the same, and out of the sale proceeds to pay the allowance (u).

Criminal Procedure Code, sec. 145.—The fact that there exists in respect of any immoveable property an order of a Magistrate passed under section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is no bar to the exercise by a Civil Court of the power conferred on it by this rule to appoint a receiver in respect of the same property (v). It is, however, different where a receiver is appointed by a Magistrate under s. 146, cl. (2), of that Code. See p. 808, case (7).

Receiver and administrator pendente lite.—A receiver may be appointed under this rule in a testamentary suit governed by the Probate Act, 1881 (vv). The Chancery Division of the High Court of England may appoint a receiver of the estate of the deceased, though proceedings have been commenced by the defendant in the Probate Court and though the defendant is prepared to apply at once in that Court for an administrator pendente lite (w).

Security not furnished by receiver.—Where the order whereby a person O. 40, r. 1. is appointed receiver requires him to give security so that the order is conditional upon his giving the security, he cannot be receiver until the security is given (x). It is otherwise where the order is not conditional but absolute in its terms; in such a case the order takes effect immediately it is made (y).

Receiver of future earnings of judgment-debtor.—The Court has no jurisdiction to enforce satisfaction of a judgment-debt by appointing a receiver of the future earnings of the judgment-debtor. "Unless a man has assigned or charged his future earnings or has made a sum payable out of them, they cannot be prospectively impounded by any of his creditors by any ordinary process of execution, whether legal or equitable" (z). Similarly, a receiver cannot be appointed of future allowances of maintenance payable to a judgment-debtor (a).

Receiver in execution proceedings—See notes to s. 51. See also notes to O. 21, r. 46, under the head "Procedure where garnishee denies debt," p. 595 above.

Receiver after decree.—A receiver may be appointed even after a decree has been passed (b). See cl. (a) of the rule.

"All such powers as to bringing and defending suits as the owner himself has."—These words are wide enough to empower the Court to authorise a receiver to sue in his own name; hence where a receiver is authorised in that behalf, he may sue in his own name (c). And it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that where a receiver is appointed with full powers under sub-r. (1), cl. (d), that is, with such powers as to bringing suits as the owner himself has, the receiver is entitled to sue in his own name though not expressly authorized to do so (d). As regards suits for possession, it is to be noted that though ordinarily a suit to recover possession of property can only be brought by him in whom there is a present title to it, yet if a receiver is appointed under this rule with such powers as to bringing suits as the owner himself has, he is entitled to sue for possession (e). But a receiver takes such title as the owner himself had in the property, and he cannot therefore sue for possession in a case in which the owner himself would not have been entitled to sue for possession (f).

"Realization of property."—After the dismissal of a suit in which a receiver has been appointed, the Court has no power to give the receiver any fresh power, as for instance, liberty to sell (g).

"All such powers as to the execution of documents which the owner himself has."—This includes a power to the receiver to execute a conveyance including the share of a minor defendant (h).

Suit by or against receiver—leave of Court—See notes under the same head, p. 807 above.

Contempt proceedings.—Where a receiver is appointed of property the subject of a suit, and the property is forcibly taken possession of by any person, not only the parties interested in the property, but also the receiver may proceed against such 40, r. 1. person for contempt. There is nothing to prevent the receiver from himself applying for a rule for contempt (i).

Appointment of new receiver in place of old receiver.—Where a receiver appointed under this rule institutes civil proceedings, and is then replaced by another receiver, it is necessary that the new receiver should be made a party to the proceedings (j).

Continuance of office.—A Court appointing a receiver may by its order provide that the office should continue permanently after the decree when such continuance is necessary, or for so long as it may be so (k).

A sues B in the Court of a Subordinate Judge. The suit is dismissed on a preliminary ground. A appeals to the High Court, and pending the appeal R is appointed receiver of the property in dispute in the suit. The High Court sets aside the decree of the lower Court, and the case is remanded to the lower Court for trial on the merits. After the appeal is over, T forcibly enters into possession of the property in the possession of R as receiver. R applies to the High Court that T may be committed for contempt. It is contended for T that the appeal being over, R must be decreed to have been discharged from the office of receiver when the appellate decree was passed. This contention will not prevail, for though the appeal may be over, R must be regarded as receiver of the property until he is finally discharged by the Court. Hence R is entitled to make the application to commit T for contempt (l).

Receiver's liability to account.—The Court appointing a receiver in a suit has authority, incidental to its jurisdiction, to order him to account, although the suit may be no longer pending (m). See r. 3 (b) below.

Suit by subsequent against former receiver.—A suit cannot be maintained by a present receiver of an estate against the former receiver for the recovery of money alleged to be due by the former receiver to the estate (n).

Receiver's lien.—A receiver, though discharged, is entitled to a lien on the estate for all his just claims and allowances. Hence the Court will not compel a receiver, who has been discharged, to make over the property in his possession, until his lien has been satisfied or provided for by a sufficient indemnity (o).

Joint receivers.—As a general rule appointment of more than one receiver whether by the same or a different Court, except in case of joint receivers, is not allowable (p).

Appeal.—An appeal lies not only from an order granting an application to appoint a receiver, but from an order rejecting such application (q) [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (s)]. But no appeal lies from directions given by a Court in passing receiver's accounts. Such directions do not come within any of the four clauses of sub-r. (1) (r). No appeal, however, lies to the Privy Council from an order refusing to appoint a receiver (s).

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta (t), Bombay (u), and Allahabad (v), that an order that a receiver be appointed without appointing anybody by name as receiver and adjourning the application to a later date for so appointing one is not an order within the meaning of this rule and it is not therefore appealable under O. 43, r. 1, cl. (s). The contrary has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court (w).

O. 40,
rr. 1-3.

A receiver is appointed of B's property in a suit by A against B. C claims to be in possession of the property under an agreement between him and B, and he objects to the appointment of the receiver, but the objection is dismissed. The order comes within this rule, though C is not a party to the suit and is therefore appealable (x). An order appointing a receiver pending an application for the appointment of a common manager under s. 93 of the Bengal Tenancy Act 8 of 1885 also falls under this rule, and is therefore appealable under O. 43, r. 1, cl. (s) (y).

Letters Patent appeal.—An order directing a receiver in a suit to advance money to a guardian ad litem to enable him to conduct the defence on behalf of a minor defendant is not a "judgment" within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, and no appeal lies therefrom (z).

A receiver cannot delegate his powers to others—Where a receiver is appointed to collect the rents of an estate, it is his duty to collect the rents himself, or where the rents are collected by a clerk on his behalf, to receive the rents and to keep proper accounts thereof. If the rents received by the clerk are misappropriated, the receiver is bound to make good the loss. He is not justified in delegating or entrusting to another a duty entrusted to him by the Court (a).

Summary jurisdiction.—Where the matter complained of rests on an agreement which has not been carried out, the Court may interfere to prevent its receiver giving effect to the proposed agreement, and this it may do on the mere application of a party to the suit (b). But where the matter has passed out of the stage of agreement as where a lease has already been granted by the receiver, no summary order could be passed to set aside the lease, but the party aggrieved must proceed by suit against the receiver (c).

Form.—For form of appointment of receiver, see App. F., no. 9.

- (b) fails to pay the amount due from him as the Court directs, or
- (c) occasions loss to the property by his wilful default or gross negligence.

the Court may direct his property to be attached and may sell such property, and may apply the proceeds to make good any amount found to be due from him or any loss occasioned by him, and shall pay the balance (if any) to the receiver.

Loss to property occasioned by wilful default of receiver.—"Property" includes the income of property (e). See notes to r. 1 "Loss occasioned by receiver's default," p. 808 above.

The Court may direct his property to be attached.—The property may be attached, even after the receiver's death, in the hands of his legal representatives (f).

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (s)]. But no appeal lies from an order declaring a receiver liable in respect of a sum of money unless the order includes a direction for the attachment of his property (g). ✓

ORDER XLI.

O. 41, r. 1

Appeals from Original Decrees.

1. [S: 541.] (1) Every appeal shall be preferred in the form of a memorandum signed by the appellant or his pleader and presented to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf. The memorandum shall be accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed from and (unless the appellate Court dispenses therewith) of the judgment on which it is founded.

Form of appeal. What to accompany memorandum.

(2) The memorandum shall set forth, concisely and under distinct heads, the grounds of objection to the decree appealed from without any argument or narrative; and such grounds shall be numbered consecutively.

Contents of memorandum.

Appeal from original decree.—See s. 96 and notes thereto.

Defective vakalatnama.—A memorandum of appeal cannot be said to be properly presented, if it is presented by a vakil whose name does not appear in the vakalatnama, though by an oversight. In such a case the appeal should be dismissed though the objection to its validity is taken at a very late stage of the proceedings (h).

Memorandum shall be accompanied by a copy of decree and of judgment.—O. 41, r. 1, makes it an inflexible rule that in the case of appeals from decrees the memorandum of appeal shall be accompanied by a copy of the decree. The Court cannot dispense with it. A copy merely of the judgment is not sufficient. If a copy of the decree is filed after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for the appeal, the appeal is time-barred; the reason is that there is no valid appeal until a copy of the decree is filed. The same rule applies where an appeal is preferred from an order; in such a case the memorandum should be accompanied by a copy of the order (i): see O 43, r. 2. On the same principle, if the memorandum is not accompanied by a copy of the judgment, the appeal must be dismissed as time-barred unless the appellate Court dispenses with such copy (j).

Grounds of objection.—The grounds of objection must be such as arise from the pleadings and evidence, and are necessary for the decision of the case (k). The appellant must not be allowed in appeal to make out a new case (l), or a case inconsistent with the case set up by him in the lower Court (m). Nor could an appellate Court make an entirely new case for a plaintiff which he never made for himself at any period of the trial (n).

O. 41,
rr. 1, 2.

In drawing up the grounds of appeal it should be remembered that no subsequent event or devolution of interest can affect the decision of a question as it stood at the time the decree appealed against was pronounced. To give effect to these, some supplementary proceeding, and not an appeal, is the right procedure (o).

Grounds of objection which may be taken for the first time in appeal.—There are certain points which, though not taken in the lower Court, may yet be taken for the first time before the appellate Court. Thus an objection to the jurisdiction of the lower Court to entertain the suit may be taken for the first time in appeal (p). Similarly an objection on the score of a defect fatal to the suit may be taken for the first time in appeal, e. g., that a person interested in the mortgaged property was not joined as a party to the suit as required by O. 43, r. 1 (q), or that a notice required to be given by a zamindar to a putnidar under s. 8 of Regulation 18 of 1819 was defective in some essential particulars (r). But the defect in each case must appear on the face of the proceedings, otherwise the objection will not be entertained (s). Similarly the plea of res judicata may be taken for the first time in appeal, provided it can be decided upon the record before the Court (t). But where in a suit for a declaratory decree, it was contended for the first time in appeal that the Court had no power to pass a declaratory decree having regard to the facts of the particular case, it was held that the objection should not be entertained. Such an objection does not go to the jurisdiction of the Court (u).

Limitation.—As to the period of limitation for appeals, see Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, arts. 151, 152 and 156. S. 5 of the Limitation Act provides that an appeal may be admitted after the period of limitation, if the appellant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not preferring the appeal within such period. S. 12 of the same Act provides that in computing the period of limitation provided for an appeal, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree appealed from should be excluded. See notes to r. 2 below, "Leave of Court: Limitation."

When appellate Court may not interfere with findings of fact.—Generally speaking it is undesirable for an appellate Court to interfere with the findings of fact of the trial judge who sees and hears the witnesses and has an opportunity of noting their demeanour, especially in cases where the issue is simple and depends on the credit which attaches to one or other of conflicting witnesses. The view of the trial judge as to the credibility of witnesses should not be put aside on a mere calculation of probabilities by the appellate Court (v).

Form.—For form of memorandum of appeal, see App. G, form no. 1.

2. [s. 542.] The appellant shall not, except by leave of the Court, urge or be heard in support of any ground of objection not set forth in the memorandum of appeal; but the appellate Court, in deciding the appeal, shall not be confined to the grounds of objection set forth in the memorandum of appeal or taken by leave of the Court under this rule : b. 41, r. 2.

Provided that the Court shall not rest its decision on any other ground unless the party who may be affected thereby has had a sufficient opportunity of contesting the case on that ground.

Leave of Court: Limitation.—The appellant cannot, except by leave of the Court, urge or be heard in support of any ground of objection not set forth in the memorandum of appeal. Thus if the plea that the suit is barred by limitation is not taken in the memorandum of appeal, the appellant cannot urge that plea in appeal without the leave of the Court. The appellate Court may grant leave, but it is not bound to do so. But the leave should not be refused if the point of limitation arises on the face of the plea (w). And, further, under the latter part of this rule, the appellate Court can of its own motion take cognizance of the question as to whether the suit is barred by limitation, though the plea of limitation has not been taken in the memorandum of appeal and rest its decision on that ground provided the opposite party is given an opportunity of being heard on the point. In either case, however, the bar of limitation must be patent on the face of the proceedings (x). The same rules apply where the plea that the suit is barred by limitation is raised for the first time in second appeal (y).

The case put above must be distinguished from the case contemplated by s. 3 of the Limitation Act, 1908. That section provides that every suit instituted and every appeal preferred after the period of limitation shall be dismissed although limitation has not been set up as a defence. This means that under s. 3 it is the duty of the Court of first instance to dismiss a suit if it is barred by limitation, whether the plea of limitation has been taken by the defendant or not (z). Similarly it is the duty of the appellate Court to dismiss an appeal before it, if the appeal was barred by limitation when presented, whether limitation has been set up as a defence or not; that is to say, if it is a first appeal, the appeal should be dismissed by the first appellate Court, and if it is a second appeal it should be dismissed by the second appellate Court. But that section does not impose any duty upon an appellate Court to entertain the plea of limitation, if the question is not whether the appeal before it is barred by limitation, but whether the suit was so barred. Similarly the said section does not impose any duty upon the second appellate Court to entertain the plea of limitation, if the question is not whether the second appeal is barred by limitation, but whether the first appeal was so barred. It is the provisions of the present rule that apply to the two last-mentioned cases, and not the provisions of s. 3 of the Limitation Act. Hence in those cases the plea of limitation must be specifically taken in the memorandum of appeal or by leave of the Court under this rule.

Proviso to the rule.—The appellate Court is not precluded from basing its decision upon a ground not set forth in the memorandum of appeal nor taken by leave of the Court under this rule (a); but this power is to be exercised by the Court alone and neither party can claim it as of right (b). But though the appellate Court may rest its decision on a ground not set forth in the memorandum of appeal, it has no power to do so where a particular point taken in the pleadings has been deliberately abandoned by a party at the trial of the suit before the lower Court (c).

New questions of fact.—In this connection we may note the following observations made in the course of a judgment in a Madras case: "Though we may perhaps consider in appeal any question of law arising from facts which are either admitted or undisputed, we cannot allow without any satisfactory reason new questions of fact to be raised for the first time in appeal (d).

* Making a new case in appeal.—A Court of appeal is not justified in exposing a party after he has obtained his decree to the brunt of a new attack of which he had never had notice during the hearing of the suit (e).

3. [S. 543.] (1) Where the memorandum of appeal is not drawn up in the manner herein-before prescribed, it may be rejected or be returned to the appellant for the purpose of being amended within a time to be fixed by the Court or be amended then and there.

Rejection or amendment of memorandum.

(2) Where the Court rejects any memorandum, it shall record the reasons for such rejection.

(3) Where a memorandum of appeal is amended, the Judge, or such officer as he appoints in this behalf, shall sign or initial the amendment.

Returned for amendment.—When a memorandum of appeal is returned for amendment, the Court should fix a time for its return (f). See s. 107.

Appeal.—A decision rejecting a memorandum of appeal on the ground that it is barred by limitation (g), or that it is insufficiently stamped (h), or that it was not duly presented (i), has the force of a decree within the meaning of s. 2, and is therefore appealable.

Appellate Court to have same power as Courts of original jurisdiction.—It is important to note at this stage the provisions of s. 107. That section provides that the appellate Court shall have the same powers and shall perform as nearly as may be the same duties as are conferred and imposed on Courts of original jurisdiction in respect of suits instituted therein.

4. [S. 544.] Where there are more plaintiffs or more defendants than one in a suit, and the decree appealed from proceeds on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants, any one of the plaintiffs or of the defendants may appeal from the whole decree, and thereupon the appellate Court may reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or defendants, as the case may be.

One of several plaintiffs or defendants may obtain reversal of whole decree where the proceeds on ground common to all.

(i) Ayyanna v. Nagabhooshanam (1893) 6 Mad. 285.

Ground common to all the defendants.—This rule provides that where O. 41, r. 4. there are more defendants than one, and the decree appealed from proceeds on any ground common to all the defendants, any one of the defendants may appeal from the whole decree, and thereupon the appellate Court may reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the defendants (j). It is not necessary for the application of this rule that the decree should proceed on every ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants; it is quite sufficient if it proceeds on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants. A sues B, C and D for recovering possession of certain lands on declaration of title thereto alleging that he was dispossessed by all the defendants together in pursuance of a conspiracy between them. B, C and D file separate written statements denying A's title and also denying dispossession and each claiming to hold separate parcels of land from third parties. The Court of first instance finds in favour of the title and the possession of A and that A was dispossessed by B, C and D. B alone appeals from the decree. The appellate Court finds that A had failed to prove the title set up by him or that he was in possession of the land. Should the appellate Court reverse the decree of the lower Court in favour of B alone who appealed from the decree, or should it reverse the decree of the lower Court in favour also of C and D though they did not join in the appeal? The answer is that if the decree of the lower Court proceeded on a ground common to all the three defendants, the decree should be reversed under this rule not only in favour of B but also in favour of C and D. Now the ground of defence common to all the defendants was that A had no title to the lands and the decree of the lower Court proceeded on the ground that A had a title to the lands. The decree therefore proceeded on a ground common to all the defendants. The appellate Court should therefore reverse the decree not only in favour of B but also in favour of C and D. It is quite immaterial that the defendants claimed to be interested by different titles in separate portions of the lands. It is enough if any one ground on which the decree appealed from proceeds is common to all the defendants (k). But the provisions of this rule do not apply, unless the lower Court whose decree is appealed from has proceeded upon some ground common to all the plaintiffs, or all the defendants. If the lower Court has not proceeded upon any such ground, it is not competent to the appellate Court to reverse the decree as to all the plaintiffs or all the defendants upon a ground which the appellate Court considers to be common to all the plaintiffs or all the defendants (l).

If in the case put above, the appellate Court while reversing the decree in favour of B, refuses to reverse it in favour also of C and D on the ground that it has no power to do so, the decree of the appellate Court will be subject to revision for failure of exercise of jurisdiction (m). See s. 115, cl. (b). If the decree appealed from proceeds on a ground common to all the defendants, the appellate Court may reverse the decree in favour of all the defendants even if some of the defendants suffered the decree to be passed ex parte against them (n).

Ground common to all the plaintiffs.—A and his son B jointly sue C to recover Rs. 2,000. A decree is passed for the plaintiffs for Rs. 500 only. A alone appeals from the decree. C files cross-objections under r. 22 below. The appellate Court rejects the plaintiff's claim in toto, and reverses the decree of the lower Court. Subsequently B, who did not join in the appeal, applies for execution of the original decree against C. B is not entitled to take out execution, for although he was not a party to the appeal, he is bound under this rule by the decree of the appellate Court (o).

rr. 4,5.

See notes to r. 22 below under the head "A respondent may urge cross-objections against the appellant but not as a rule against a co-respondent."

May reverse decree in favour of all plaintiffs or defendants.—The word "may" shows that the appellate Court is given a discretion in the matter. It may therefore reverse the decree in favour of some only of the plaintiffs or defendants. It is not bound to do so in favour of all of them (p).

Death of one of several appellants in cases where the decree appealed from proceeds on a ground common to all of them.—See notes to O. 22, r. 3, 'The suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned,' p. 663 above.

Stay of proceedings and of execution.

5. [S. 545.] (1) An appeal shall not operate as a stay of proceedings under a decree or order appealed from except so far as the appellate Court may order, nor shall execution of a decree be stayed by reason only of an appeal having been preferred from the decree; but the appellate Court may for sufficient cause order stay of execution of such decree.

(2) Where an application is made for stay of execution of an appealable decree before the expiration of the time allowed for appealing therefrom, the Court which passed the decree may on sufficient cause being shown order the execution to be stayed.

(3) No order for stay of execution shall be made under sub-rule (1) or sub-rule (2) unless the Court making it is satisfied—

- (a) that substantial loss may result to the party applying for stay of execution unless the order is made;
- (b) that the application has been made without unreasonable delay; and
- (c) that security has been given by the applicant for the due performance of such decree or order as may ultimately be binding upon him.

(4) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-rule (3), the Court may make an ex parte order for stay of execution pending the hearing of the application.

Alterations in the rule :—

O. 41, r. 5.

1. The first part of sub-r. (1), namely, "An appeal shall not operate as a stay of proceedings under a decree or order appealed from except so far as the appellate Court may order" is new. The object is to make express provision for a stay of proceedings from a decree pending an appeal from the decree. Thus if a preliminary decree is passed in a suit for accounts between a principal and an agent [O. 20, r. 16], and an appeal is preferred from the decree, the appellate Court may under this rule stay the inquiry into the accounts pending the appeal from the decree. Under the Code of 1882 the Court directed a stay in cases like these in the exercise of its inherent power, as there was no express provision in the Code in that behalf (q).
2. Sub-r. (4) is new. It authorizes an ex parte stay. The need for such an order constantly arises in practice.

"Stay of proceedings under a decree."—See notes above, "Alterations in the rule."

Stay of execution.—Once an appeal is preferred from a decree, it is the appellate Court alone that is seized of the matter, and an application for a stay of execution should be made to that Court. Where no appeal is preferred, the application should be made to the Court which passed the decree, but the application will not be entertained unless the decree is one from which an appeal lies, and the application is made before the expiry of the time allowed by law for appealing therefrom (r).

Although the appellate Court may under this rule stay proceedings in execution when an appeal is preferred from a decree, it has no power to stay execution of a decree when an appeal is preferred from an order appealable under s. 104. A obtains a decree ex parte against B. B applies under O. 9, r. 13, to have the decree set aside, but the application is rejected. B appeals from the order rejecting the application under O. 43, r. 1, cl. (d), and applies to the appellate Court to stay execution of the ex parte decree against him. It is not competent to the appellate Court to stay execution of the decree there being no appeal preferred from the decree (s). Contrast r. 8 below.

Where decree has been executed.—An order for a stay of execution implies that the decree has not been executed. Therefore where a decree has been executed, no order can be made under this rule (t). See r. 6 below.

Circumstances under which stay of execution may be granted.—The Court has the power under this rule to make an order for a stay of execution for "sufficient cause." But no order should be made for a stay of execution unless the Court is satisfied that substantial loss may result to the party applying for a stay of execution if the execution is not stayed (u). And even if the Court is satisfied that substantial loss may result, no order should be made unless the application has been made without unreasonable delay, and, further, unless the Court is satisfied that security has been given by the applicant for the due performance of such decree as may ultimately be binding upon him [sub-r. (3)]. The Court should not accept a security the validity of which is not free from reasonable doubt and the enforcement of which may lead to protracted litigation (v).

O. 41, r. 5. Notice to decree-holder.—It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that a final order staying execution should not be made without notice to the decree-holder; if it is made without notice, it is illegal and it may be set aside under s. 115 above (w). The High Court of Patna has held differently (x). An interim stay, however, may be granted ex parte [see sub-r. (4)].

Application of the rule.—A obtains a decree against B for the recovery of certain immoveable property, and applies for execution of the decree. If B has preferred an appeal from the decree, B may apply to the appellate Court for a stay of execution on the ground that if execution is not stayed and the property is delivered to A, A may do away with the property which may result in substantial loss to him. If the appellate Court is satisfied that substantial loss may result if the execution is not stayed, and if the application has been made without unreasonable delay, the appellate Court may order execution to be stayed under this rule upon security being given by B that if the decree of the lower Court is confirmed, he will deliver possession of the property to A. If the decree of the lower Court is confirmed, and if B fails to deliver possession of the property to A, A may proceed against the surety.

Security for performance of decree.—The nature and extent of the liability of a surety under this rule depends on the words of the security-bond (y). Thus where the bond was to perform all orders and decrees passed in appeal, it was held that the obligation under the bond extended to the final decree passed in second appeal (z). When immoveable property is given by a judgment-debtor as security for the due performance of a decree under sub-r. (3) (c), it can be realized in execution without attachment. The provision of O. 34, r. 14, do not apply to such a case, and, further, the matter being one relating to execution within s. 47, a separate suit does not lie (a). As to the mode of enforcing a security-bond given under this rule, see notes to s. 145 under the head "Security for the performance of any decree," p. 316 above.

A security-bond given under this rule mortgaging immoveable property exceeding Rs. 100 in value requires registration under the Transfer of Property Act, s. 59, and the Registration Act, s. 17, in order to make it effective against the property (b).

Effect of uncommunicated order staying execution.—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta (c), that where an order is made by an appellate Court staying execution of a decree, but before the order is communicated to the Court executing the decree, the property of the judgment-debtor is sold in execution, the sale is invalid and cannot stand, the reason given being that when an unconditional order for stay of execution is made, the order becomes operative the moment it is made and suspends the power of the lower Court to continue the proceedings in execution. On the other hand, it has been held by the Madras High Court (d) that such sale is valid, the reason given being that the Court of first instance still retains jurisdiction to execute its decree notwithstanding an appeal from it, and that the power to execute the decree can only be taken away by some communication to it of the order of the appellate Court. The latter view, it is submitted, is correct.

Costs.—The applicant who asks for stay of execution should, as a rule, pay the costs of the application, even if the application is successful. The reason is that an applicant asking for stay of execution asks for an indulgence which will have the effect of interfering for the time being with the enforcement of the decree, and he who seeks such an indulgence should in the absence of special circumstances pay for it (e).

rr. 5, 6.

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order by the appellate Court refusing to stay execution under this section. Such an order is not a “decree” within the meaning of s. 2, cl. 2 (f). It is not settled whether such an order is a “judgment” within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, and therefore appealable as such. It has been held by the High Court of Madras that an order refusing to stay execution is not a “judgment” within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, and that no appeal lies from it under that clause (g). The contrary has been held by the Calcutta High Court (h). The view taken by the Calcutta Court has been approved in a recent Madras case (i).

Where an order is made for stay of execution on security being furnished by the judgment-debtor, and such security is furnished, no appeal lies from the order at the instance of the decree-holder. Such an order cannot be said to conclusively determine any question relating to the rights and liabilities of parties with reference to the relief granted by the decree, and it does not therefore come within s. 47 and s. 2, cl. (2) (j). See notes to s. 47, “Appeal,” p. 136.

Review.—The Court making an order under this rule may cancel [or vary] it at any time (k).

Form.—For form of security bond, see App. G, form no. 2.

6. [S. 546.] (1) Where an order is made for the execution of a decree from which an appeal is pending, the Court which passed the decree shall, on sufficient cause being shown by the appellant, require security to be taken for the restitution of any property which may be or has been taken in execution of the decree or for the payment of the value of such property and for the due performance of the decree or order of the appellate Court, or the appellate Court may for like cause direct the Court which passed the decree to take such security.

(2) Where an order has been made for the sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree, and an appeal is pending from such decree, the sale shall, on the application of the judgment-debtor to the Court which made the order, be stayed on such terms as to giving security or otherwise as the Court thinks fit until the appeal is disposed of.

Alterations in the rule:—

1. The words "or has been taken" have been added in sub-r. (1) to make it clear that security may be required though the property has already been taken in execution. These words give effect to a Calcutta decision (l).
2. The words "of money," which occurred in the old section after the words "in execution of a decree," have been omitted.
3. The words "to the Court which made the order" in sub-r. (2) are new. These words show that an application for a stay of sale is to be made to the Court which made the order for sale.

Application of the rule.—This rule does not apply unless (1) there is an order made for the execution of a decree and (2) there is an appeal pending from that decree (m). A judgment-debtor whose application for a stay of execution is refused under r. 5 may apply under this rule. The application contemplated by sub-r. (1) is an application by the judgment-debtor (who has appealed from the decree) for security to be given by the decree-holder for the restitution of any property that may be taken in execution or for the payment of the value of such property if the decree of the lower Court is reversed in appeal. Thus if A obtains a decree against B for the recovery of certain immovable property and an order is made for execution of the decree, B may, after filing an appeal from the decree, apply for an order requiring A to give security for the restitution of the property to him (B), or for the payment of the value thereof, if the appeal is decided in his favour. The application may be made to the Court which passed the decree or to the appellate Court (n). If the application is made to the Court which passed the decree, such Court shall, on sufficient cause being shown by B for requiring the security, direct A to give the security. But if the application is made to the appellate Court, that Court may, in its discretion, require security to be given.

No security to be required from the Government or a public officer in certain cases.

8. [New.] The powers conferred by rules 5 and 6 shall be exercisable where an appeal may be or has been preferred not from the decree but from an order made in execution of such decree.

Scope and object of the rule.—This rule is new. It has been added to meet particularly the case where the litigant does not quarrel with the decree, but appeals from an order passed in execution of that decree. In such a case the rule provides that the appellant may apply for a stay of execution of the decree under r. 5 or for security for restitution under r. 6. A obtains a decree against B, and applies for execution. B objects to the execution, but the objection is disallowed. B prefers an appeal from the order disallowing his objection. B may apply for a stay of execution of the decree under r. 5 pending the disposal of the appeal from the order. This is in accordance with the undermentioned decision under the Code of 1882 (o).

(2) Such book shall be called the Register of Appeals.

10. [S. 549.] (1) The appellate Court may in its discretion, either before the respondent is called upon to appear and answer or afterwards on the application of the respondent, demand from the appellant security for the costs of the appeal, or of the original suit, or of both.

Appellate Court may require appellant to furnish security for costs.

Provided that the Court shall demand such security in all cases in which the appellant is residing out of British India, and is not possessed of any sufficient immoveable property within British India other than the property (if any) to which the appeal relates.

Where an appellant resides out of British India.

(2) Where such security is not furnished within such time as the Court orders, the Court shall reject the appeal.

Scope and object of the rule—The object of the rule is to secure the respondent in an appeal from the risk of having to incur further costs which he might never succeed in getting out of the appellant. Under sub-r. (1) the appellate Court may, in its discretion, require security for costs. Under the proviso to that sub-rule the Court shall demand security for costs. If no security is furnished, the Court should reject the appeal, whether the order for security is made under the sub-rule or the proviso (p).

O.41, r. 10. Application of the rule.—This rule applies not only to appeals from substantive decrees, but also to appeals from interlocutory orders under s. 104 and to appeals from orders in execution under s. 47 (q), but it does not apply to appeals under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent (r). The opinion has also been expressed that every appeal from a decree of a single Judge of a Chartered High Court passed in the exercise of ordinary original civil jurisdiction to other Judges of the same Court is an appeal not under the Code, but under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. The reason given is that the provisions of the Code relating to appeals, that is, ss. 96 and 104, relate to appeals from one Court to another of higher grade, and that the only provision of law which allows an appeal from the decree of one or more Judges of a Chartered High Court to other Judges of the same Court is that contained in cl. 15 of the Letters Patent (s). As stated by Jenkins, C.J., "the Code makes no provision for an appeal within the High Court, that is to say, from a single Judge of the High Court. This right of appeal depends on cl. 15 of the Charter (t). From this point of view, neither this rule nor any other rule of this Order can apply to an appeal from a decree of a single Judge of a Chartered High Court passed in the exercise of ordinary original civil jurisdiction. However this may be, it is clear that the provisions of this rule do not apply if there be a rule inconsistent therewith made by a Chartered High Court as it is empowered to do under s. 129 of the Code (u).

Appeals in forma pauperis.—It has been held by the High Court of Madras (v) that this rule applies to pauper appeals: thus an appellant, who has presented his appeal in forma pauperis, may be called upon to give security for costs under this rule, but very special grounds must be shown to support such an application. On the other hand, it has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta (w) and Bombay (x) that this rule does not apply to appeals preferred in forma pauperis.

When power to require security for costs is discretionary.—Except in the case referred to in the proviso to sub-r. (1), the power of the appellate Court to require security for costs is discretionary. The mere fact that the appellant is poor or insolvent is no ground for demanding security for costs (y). Similarly mere non-payment of the costs of the original hearing is no ground for calling upon the appellant to furnish security under this rule, unless his conduct be shown to be vexatious, that is such as indicates a wilful determination on his part not to obey the order of the Court in respect of costs (z). But the Court will, as a general rule, demand security for costs from a poor or insolvent appellant, if it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the appellant is not the real litigant, but a mere puppet in the hands of others who are well able to furnish security (a), or if the merits of the case are plainly in favour of the respondent (b). See notes to O. 25, r. 1, under the head "Poverty of plaintiff," p. 674 above.

At what stage respondent should apply for security.—The respondent should apply promptly, or else it might be urged that he had waived his right (c).

Order for security.—When an order is made under this rule for security for costs, it is not necessary that any specific sum should be named in the order. It is sufficient if the order directs the appellant to furnish security “for the costs of the original suit” or “for the costs of the appeal” or “for the costs of the appeal and the original suit” (d).

Extension of time for furnishing security.—The appellate Court may, under exceptional circumstances, extend the time for furnishing security [see s. 148]. Thus where the appellant alleged that he was unable on account of plague in Bombay to raise the money required for security within the time fixed by the Court, the Court extended the time for giving security. The time for giving security may be extended either before its expiry or afterwards (e).

“Court shall reject the appeal.”—The appeal should not be rejected if the order for security has been made without notice to the appellant (f).

Restoring of appeal.—An appeal, although it may have been rejected by the appellate Court under this rule upon failure of the appellant to furnish security, may be restored on sufficient grounds at the Court’s discretion (g). But no appeal lies from an order refusing to restore it (h).

Appeal from order rejecting appeal under sub-rule (a).—An order rejecting an appeal under this rule is not appealable as an order under O. 43, for it is not one of the orders specified therein. Nor is it appealable as a decree, for it does not conclusively determine the rights of the parties with regard to any of the matters in controversy in the appeal within the meaning of the definition of decree [s. 2, cl. (2) (i)].

Appeal from order dismissing petition praying Court to receive security for costs.—An order is made under sub-rule (1) directing an appellant to furnish security for costs. The order is indefinite in that it does not fix the exact date on or before which security is to be given. The appellant, believing that the time for giving security has expired, applies to the Court to receive the amount fixed by the order as security. The Court holds that the time for furnishing security has expired, and refuses the application. The appellant is entitled to appeal from the order under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, as the effect of the order would be to finally deprive the appellant of his power of prosecuting his appeal (j).

Insolvency appeal.—There is a conflict of decisions as to whether this rule applies to the case of an appeal from an order passed by a Judge in insolvency under the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act 3 of 1908, it being held by the High Court of Madras that it does not (k), while by the High Court of Calcutta that it does (l). The latter view, it is submitted, is the correct view. See Act 3 of 1908, s. 8 (2) (b).

Form.—For form of security for costs of appeal, see App. G., form No. 4.

11. [S. 551.] (1) The appellate Court, after sending for the record if it thinks fit so to do, and after fixing a day for hearing the appellant or his pleader and hearing him accordingly if he appears on that day, may dismiss the appeal without sending notice to the Court from

(2) If on the day fixed or any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned the appellant does not appear when the appeal is called on for hearing, the Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed.

(3) The dismissal of an appeal under this rule shall be notified to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred.

Alterations in the rule :—

1. In sub-r. (1) the words "after sending for the record if it thinks fit to do so" are new. These words have been added to empower the Court to send for the record if it thinks fit to do so before summarily dismissing an appeal without giving notice to the respondent.
2. The words "the Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed" have been substituted for the words "the appeal shall be dismissed for default," to make it clear that no appeal lies from an order of dismissal for default. See s. 2, cl. (2), sub-cl. (b). Under the old section it was held that a decision dismissing an appeal for default was a decree and was therefore appealable (m).

Dismissal of appeal under sub-rule 1: whether judgment necessary.—Under the corresponding section of the Code of 1882 it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that the dismissal of an appeal under sub-r. (1) did not relieve the lower appellate Court from the necessity of writing a judgment in the manner prescribed by s. 571 of that Code [now r. 31 of this Order] (n). A different view, however, was taken by the High Court of Allahabad (o). The present Order is divided into distinct parts under appropriate headings, an arrangement which did not appear in the corresponding Chapter of the Code of 1882. Rule 11 comes under the heading "Procedure on admission of appeal." The next heading of the Order is "Procedure on hearing," and r. 31 comes under the next following heading "Judgment in appeal." Relying upon this classification, it was held by the High Court of Bombay in Tanaji v. Shankar (p) that under the present Code it is not obligatory upon the lower appellate Court, in dismissing an appeal under this rule, to write a judgment as required by r. 31. But this decision has since been overruled by a full Bench of the same Court, on the ground that it was in conflict with the previous practice of that Court which was based on a Civil Circular being Circular 51, published in 1890 under the provisions of the High Courts Act, 1861, by which it is provided that when an appellate Court dismisses an appeal under s. 551 [now r. 11 of this Order], a judgment should be written and a formal decree drawn up. In the course of the judgment Sir Basil Scott, C.J., said: "There is nothing in the new Code of Civil Procedure which introduces any change in the law, except in so far as the rules commencing with rule 9 of Order XLI are headed 'Procedure on admission of appeal.' That change is not sufficient to abrogate the rule published under the High Courts Act which is quite consistent with the provisions of the Code (q)." The result is that, according to the Bombay High Court, when an appeal is dismissed under this rule, a judgment should be written and a formal decree drawn up.

Transmission of papers to appellate Court.

(3) Either party may apply in writing to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, specifying any of the papers in such Court of which he requires copies to be made; and copies of such papers shall be made at the expense of, and given to, the applicant.

Copies of exhibits in Court whose decree appealed from.

Alteration in the rule.—In sub-rule (1) the words "where the appeal is not dismissed under r. 11" have been substituted for the words "when the memorandum of appeal is registered."

Form.—For form of intimation to lower Court of admission of appeal, see Appendix G, form no. 5.

O.14,
rr. 14-17.

14. [S. 553.] (1) Notice of the day fixed under rule 12 shall be affixed in the appellate Court-house, and a like notice shall be sent by the appellate Court to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, and shall be served on the respondent or on his pleader in the appellate Court in the manner provided for the service of a defendant of a summons to appear and answer and all the provisions applicable to such summons, and to proceedings with reference to the service thereof, shall apply to the service of such notice.

Publication and service of notice of day for hearing of appeal.

(2) Instead of sending the notice to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, the appellate Court may itself cause the notice to be served on the respondent or his pleader under the provisions above referred to.

Appellate Court may itself cause notice to be served.

Form.—For form of notice to respondent, see Appendix G, form no. 6.

15. [S. 554.] The notice to the respondent shall declare that, if he does not appear in the appellate Court on the day so fixed, the appeal will be heard ex parte.

Contents of notice.

Procedure on hearing.

16. [S. 555.] (1) On the day fixed, or on any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned, the appellant shall be heard in support of the appeal.

Right to begin.

(2) The Court shall then, if it does not dismiss the appeal at once, hear the respondent against the appeal, and in such case the appellant shall be entitled to reply.

Right to begin.—The mere fact that the respondent calls in question the right of the appellant to appeal does not give the respondent the right to begin (t).

17. [S. 556.] (1) Where on the day fixed, or on any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned, the appellant does not appear when the appeal is called on for hearing, the Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed.

Dismissal of appeal for appellant's default.

(2) Where the appellant appears and the respondent does not appear, the appeal shall be heard ex parte. O. 41, rr. 17-18.

Alteration in the rule.—The words “the Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed” have been substituted for the words “the appeal shall be dismissed for default,” to make it clear that no appeal lies from the order of dismissal for default (u). See s. 2, cl. (2), sub-cl. (b), and notes “Order of dismissal for default,” p. 8 above.

“Where the appellant does not appear.”—See notes to O. 9, r. 9, under the head “Meaning of appearance,” on p. 451 above.

Re-admission of appeal dismissed under this rule.—See r. 19 below.

Order that the appeal be dismissed.—See notes above, “Alteration in the rule.”

18. [s. 557.] Where on the day fixed, or on any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned, it is found that the notice to the respondent has not been served in consequence of the failure of the appellant to deposit, within the period fixed, the sum required to defray the cost of serving the notice, the Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed:

Dismissal of appeal where notice not served in consequence of appellant's failure to deposit costs.

Provided that no such order shall be made although the notice has not been served upon the respondent, if on any such day the respondent appears when the appeal is called on for hearing.

“The Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed.”—The language of the rule clearly shows that the order of dismissal should not be made before the day fixed for the hearing of the appeal (v).

Re-admission of appeal dismissed under this rule.—See r. 19 below.

Appeal.—An order under this rule is not open to appeal. The proper remedy is an application under r. 19 below for re-admission (w).

Effect of dismissal of appeal against one of several respondents for non-service of notice.—A, B and C obtain a decree for joint possession against D. D appeals from the decree. A and B are served with the notice of appeal, but C is not. The appeal is thereupon dismissed as against C. Is D entitled to proceed with the appeal as against A and B? No, for even if the appellate Court heard the appeal and reversed the decree of the lower Court as regards A and B, the decree of the lower Court not being reversed as regards C, C could execute the entire decree (the decree being a joint decree) so as to nullify the decree of the appellate Court (x). See notes to O. 22, r. 4, “Cases in which suit or appeal held to abate, as a whole,” p. 668 above.

19. [S. 558.] Where an appeal is dismissed under rule 11, sub-rule (2) or rule 17 or rule 18, the appellant may apply to the appellate Court for the re-admission of the appeal; and, where it is proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the appeal was called on for hearing or from depositing the sum so required, the Court shall re-admit the appeal on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

Re-admission of appeal dismissed for default.

"Shall re-admit the appeal."—These words have been substituted for the words "may re-admit the appeal." The word "may" in the old section was construed by the High Court of Madras to mean "shall" (y).

"Sufficient cause."—See for an illustration the undermentioned case (z).

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order of refusal to re-admit an appeal [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (t)]. But no appeal lies from an order re-admitting an appeal (a).

Dismissal of appeal for failure to deposit costs of paper book.—Where an appeal is dismissed under the rules of a High Court for failure to deposit the costs of preparation of the paper book as required by the rules, the decree may be set aside not by an order under this rule, but by an order on an application for a review (b).

Inherent power to restore appeal dismissed for default.—Although a cause may not amount to a "sufficient cause" within the meaning of this rule, the Court has inherent power to pass an order of restoration if it considers that a case for such an admission has been made out (c). See notes to O. 9, r. 9, "Inherent power of Court to restore suit dismissed for default," p. 453 above.

20. [S. 559.] Where it appears to the Court at the hearing that any person who was a party to the suit in the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, but who has not been made a party to the appeal, is interested in the result of the appeal, the Court may adjourn the hearing to a future day to be fixed by the Court and direct that such person be made a respondent.

ing interested to be made respondents.

"Interested in the result of the appeal."—See notes to r. 33 below.

Limitation.—A person who was a party to the proceedings in the Court below may be added as a respondent, though the time to appeal against him has expired (d).

Adding of parties under this rule discretionary.—It is a question for the Court in its discretion to determine in each case whether or not it will make an order for the addition of a party as contemplated by this rule (e).

Adding of parties in second appeal.—Supposing a person to be a party to a suit, but not a party to the appeal before the lower appellate Court. Has the High Court power in second appeal to add such a person as a party to the appeal? No, according to the Allahabad High Court (f). Yes, according to the Madras High Court (g). O. 41,
rr. 20-22.

Form.—For form of notice to a party to a suit not made a party to the appeal, see Appendix G, form no. 7.

21. [S. 560.] Where an appeal is heard ex parte and judgment is pronounced against the respondent, he may apply to the appellate Court to re-hear the appeal; and, if he satisfies the Court that the notice was not duly served or that he was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing when the appeal was called on for hearing the Court shall re-hear the appeal on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit to impose upon him.

Re-hearing on application of respondent against whom ex parte decree made.

See O. 9, r. 13, and notes thereto.

“Sufficient cause.”—Where counsel for respondent was unable to appear at the hearing as the respondent's agent had taken away the papers, it was held that it was not “sufficient cause” for re-hearing the appeal (h).

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order of refusal to re-hear an appeal [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (t)].

22. [S. 561.] (1) Any respondent, though he may not have appealed from any part of the decree, may not only support the decree on any of the grounds decided against him in the Court below, but take any cross-objection to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal, provided he has filed such objection in the appellate Court within one month from the date of service on him or his pleader of notice of the day fixed for hearing the appeal, or within such further time as the appellate Court may see fit to allow.

Upon hearing, respondent may object to decree as if he had preferred separate appeal.

(2) Such cross-objection shall be in the form of a memorandum, and the provisions of rule 1, so far as they relate to the form and contents of the memorandum of appeal, shall apply thereto.

Q. 41, r 22. (3) Unless the respondent files with the objection a written acknowledgment from the party who may be affected by such objection or his pleader of having received a copy thereof, the appellate Court shall cause a copy to be served, as soon as may be after the filing of the objection, on such party or his pleader at the expense of the respondent.

(4) Where, in any case in which any respondent has under this rule filed a memorandum of objection, the original appeal is withdrawn or is dismissed for default, the objection so filed may nevertheless be heard and determined after such notice to the other parties as the Court thinks fit.

(5) The provisions relating to pauper appeals shall, so far as they can be made applicable, apply to an objection under this rule.

Alterations in the rule.—The words “upon the hearing” which occurred in the first paragraph of s. 561 of the Code of 1882 [now sub-r. 1] between the words “may” and “not only support,” have been omitted, and sub-rule (4) has been added. See notes below under the head “Sub-rule (4): where the appeal is withdrawn or dismissed for default.” The words “the party who may be affected by such objection” in sub-r. (3) have been substituted for the words “the appellant” which occurred in s. 561.

Cross-objections.—Suppose that in a suit brought by A against B, B sets up two defences, and the Court of first instance determines in his favour as to one of them and against him as to the other, and dismisses A's suit. If A appeals, B may support the decree at the hearing of the appeal not only on the ground decided in his favour, but also on the ground decided against him, without filing any cross-objections (i). In the case put above the decree was entirely in B's (respondent's) favour. Suppose now that A's claim is decreed in part. In such a case A may appeal from the decree, alleging that the decree ought to have been for the full amount claimed by him. And B also may appeal from the decree, alleging that the suit ought to have been dismissed altogether. If A appeals from the decree, and B also appeals, B's appeal is called a cross-appeal. But B may not file a cross-appeal and he may file cross-objections under this rule. In the cross-objections filed by B under this rule, B may take any objection to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal (j). If no cross-objections are filed at all by a respondent, the appellate Court has no power to grant any relief to him in a case where the granting of such relief is not necessarily incidental to the relief granted to the appellant (k), nor has it the power, in the absence of cross-objections, to disturb so much of the original decree as is favourable to the appellant so as to place the appellant in a worse position (l).

Sub-rule (4): where the appeal is withdrawn or dismissed for default.—The old section commenced with the words, “any respondent . . . may upon the hearing not only support the decree," etc. It was accordingly held that a respondent could be heard in support of his cross-objections only upon the hearing of the appeal. If the appeal was withdrawn before the hearing, the respondent, it was held, had no right to be heard in support of his cross-objections (m), though the Court might in such a case allow him to prefer a regular appeal from the decree (n). But if the hearing had once commenced, the appeal, it was held, could not be withdrawn so as to prevent the cross-objections being heard and determined (o). This distinction has now been done away with by the omission of the words, "upon the hearing" in sub-r. (1) and by the addition of sub-r. (4). Under the present rule the withdrawal of an appeal is no bar to the hearing of cross-objections filed by a respondent, whether the appeal is withdrawn before or after the hearing. Similarly the dismissal of an appeal for default is no bar to the hearing of cross-objections. The dismissal of an appeal upon the appellant's failure to give security for costs is a dismissal "for default" within the meaning of sub-r. (4) (p).

Under the old section it was held by the High Court of Allahabad that the dismissal of an appeal as filed out of time was a bar to the hearing of cross-objections (q). It has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court that the law is the same under the present rule (r). Similarly it has been held that where an appeal is dismissed on the ground of insufficiency of Court-fee stamp, the Court has no power to hear cross-objections (s). The last mentioned decision is based on the ground that except in the case of the original appeal being "withdrawn or dismissed for default" as expressly provided for in sub-r. (4), the general rule that cross-objections cannot be heard unless the appeal is decided on the merits is still in force. But the dismissal of an appeal on the ground of non-joinder of a party in a mortgage suit has been held not to be a bar to the hearing of cross-objections, the reason given being that in such a case the appeal is heard, the question of non-joinder being one that arises in the appeal itself and is not extraneous to it as would be a question as to whether it was presented in proper time or not (t).

Who may file cross-objections.—Cross-objections under this rule can only be filed by a party who might have appealed from the decree of the Court below, but has not done so. It is not open to the party who has appealed, and whose appeal has been dismissed, subsequently to prefer cross-objections under this rule. A sues B for damages. A's claim is decreed in part. A appeals from that part of the decree which is against him. B also appeals from that part of the decree which is against him. A's appeal is heard and dismissed. Before B's appeal is heard, A files cross-objections in B's appeal setting up the very grounds upon which in his own appeal he had asked for relief. A's cross-objections should not be heard (u).

A respondent may urge cross-objections against the appellant, but not as a rule against a co-respondent.—It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta, Bombay and Allahabad, that as a general rule the right of a

O. 41, r. 22. respondent to urge cross-objections should be limited to his urging them only against the appellant; and that it is only by way of exception to this general rule that one respondent may urge cross-objections as against other respondents, the exception holding good in those cases in which the appeal opens up questions which cannot be disposed of completely without matters being allowed to be opened up as between co-respondents (v). Thus in suits for dissolution of partnership and for accounts, it is open to any respondent to prefer cross-objections against a co-respondent on any item in dispute between them. The reason is that in such suits accounts are taken not between the plaintiff on the one hand and the defendants on the other, but between all the partners. A, B and C constitute a partnership firm. A sues B and C for dissolution of partnership and for accounts. A decree is passed in the suit declaring the amount coming to the share of each partner on the taking of accounts. A appeals from the decree. B and C are joined as respondents to the appeal. In such a case it is open to B to prefer cross-objections against C in respect of an item in dispute between B and C (w). Similarly, when the decree appealed from proceeds on a ground common to all the parties against whom it is passed, and the appeal is preferred by some only of such parties, e.g., where the suit is—A v. B and C, and a decree is passed both against B and C, and the appeal is—B v. A and C, A who is the plaintiff-respondent may prefer cross-objections not only against B the appellant, but against C the co-respondent. A sues B and C to recover Rs. 5,000, alleged to be his share of the profits of certain lands. A decree is passed for A for Rs. 3,000 against B and C. B appeals from the decree. C does not join B in the appeal, and he is therefore made a party respondent. The appeal thus is—B v. A and C. In such a case, it is open to A to prefer cross-objections not only against B, but also against C, in respect of that portion of his claim that was disallowed by the Court of first instance, namely, Rs. 2,000 (x). According to the Madras High Court, a respondent may urge cross-objections against a co-respondent in any and every case (y). Note in this connection the substitution in sub-r. (3) of the words “the party who may be affected by such objection” for the words “the appellant” which occurred in s. 561 of the Code of 1882.

“Or within such further time.”—This rule requires that cross-objections should be filed by the respondent within one month from the date of the service of notice of the appeal. But the time may be extended if sufficient cause is shown (z).

Application of the rule.—Cross objections may be filed not only in first appeal, but also in second appeal (O. 42). They may also be filed in appeals from orders preferred under s. 104 and O. 43 [See O. 43, r. 2]. But they cannot be filed in Letters Patent appeals, unless the rules of the High Court allows it (a).

Second Appeal.—A second appeal will lie from a decree of the first appellate Court disallowing the cross-objections of a respondent (b).

Form.—As to form of memorandum of cross-objections, see App. G, form no. 8.

23. [S. 562.] Where the Court from whose decree an appeal is preferred has disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point and the decree is reversed in appeal, the appellate Court may, if it thinks fit, by order remand the case, and may further direct what issue or issues shall be tried in the case so remanded, and shall send a copy of its judgment and order to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, with directions to re-admit the suit under its original number in the register of civil suits, and proceed to determine the suit; and the evidence (if any) recorded during the original trial shall, subject to all just exceptions, be evidence during the trial after remand.

Remand of case by appellate Court.

Alterations in the rule.—The words, “ and the evidence (if any) recorded during the original trial shall, subject to all just exceptions, be evidence during the trial after remand,” at the end of the rule are new.

Scope of the rule.—It is not competent to the appellate Court under this rule to remand the case for further evidence to the lower Court and to require that Court to pass another decree. All that the appellate Court is empowered to do is to frame an issue and to send down that issue to the Court below for the return of a finding; and it is the duty of the appellate Court after receiving that finding to dispose of the appeal upon the evidence before it (c).

Preliminary point.—This rule enables the appellate Court to remand a case to the lower Court for determination on the merits, if the lower Court has disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point, and the decree of that Court is reversed in appeal. The expression “ preliminary point ” is not confined to such legal points only as may be pleaded in bar of a suit, but comprehends all points or issues whether of fact or of law, the determination of which has precluded the necessity for determining other points or issues, and such other points or issues have therefore been left undetermined (d). Thus where the lower Court dismisses the plaintiff's suit on the ground that it is barred by limitation, or that the Court has no jurisdiction to hear the suit, or that the necessary leave has not been obtained, or that the plaint does not on the face of it disclose any cause of action (e), and the appellate Court reverses the decree of the lower Court on those grounds it may remand the case to the lower Court to be proceeded with on the merits. Where several issues are raised in a suit one of which is that of undue influence, and the Court dismisses the suit on a finding that there was undue influence without a finding on the other issues, the decision amounts to a disposal of the suit upon a preliminary point within the meaning of this rule (f). Similarly if A sues B to recover a sum of money on the basis of an award, and four issues are framed one of which is whether the award is valid and binding, and the Court after recording evidence on all the issues dismisses the suit on the ground that the award is invalid leaving the other issues undecided, the appellate Court may, if it finds that the decision of the lower Court on the issue as to the validity of the award is wrong, remand the case to the

O. 41, r. 23. lower Court to be disposed of on the merits. It does not matter that evidence has been recorded on all the issues (g). But where the first Court has decided a suit on the merits of the whole case, as where the suit is decided on all the evidence and on all the issues, the appellate Court cannot remand the case under this rule (h). Where the first Court heard the entire suit, and found all issues in favour of the plaintiff except one, namely, whether the suit was maintainable having regard to the provisions of O. 21, r. 92, and dismissed the suit on the finding that the suit was not maintainable, it was held by the Patna High Court that the suit was disposed of on a preliminary point within the meaning of this rule (i). This decision is in conflict with the decisions referred to above, and, it is submitted, is not good law. To pass a decree in favour of the plaintiff on the strength of a plan put in by the plaintiff in a suit for possession of land is not a decision of the suit on a preliminary point, and no remand can be made in such a case under this rule (j).

No order of remand can be made under this rule unless the lower Court has disposed of the whole suit upon a preliminary point. This rule authorises a remand only where the entire suit, and not only a portion of it, has been disposed of by the Court below on a preliminary point (k). Assuming that the entire suit is decided on a preliminary point, it is further necessary, before an order of remand can be made under this rule, that the appellate Court should also find that the decision on the preliminary point is wrong. It is not a good ground, therefore, for making an order under this rule, to say that the preliminary issue, e.g., an issue of limitation, has been decided by the Court of first instance on a wrong view of the burden of proof, unless the appellate Court finds that the issue has been wrongly decided (l).

Inherent power of remand : Remand in case of error, omission or irregularity.—No order of remand can be made under the present rule except when the suit has been disposed of on a preliminary point. There are, however, cases in which suits have not been disposed of on a preliminary point, and yet the Courts have claimed the power to remand the case professing to do so in the exercise of their inherent power [see s. 151]. These are cases in which the lower Court has committed any error, omission or irregularity, by reason of which there has not been a proper trial or an effectual or complete adjudication of the suit, and the party complaining of such error, omission or irregularity has been materially prejudiced thereby. Thus if a suit is defective for misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action, the proper course is to return the plaint to the plaintiff for amendment, and not to dismiss the suit (see notes to O. 2, r. 3, p. 368 above). If the lower Court dismisses the suit instead of returning the plaint for amendment, the appellate Court may set aside the decree, and remand the suit with a direction to the lower Court to return the plaint to the plaintiff for amendment and to proceed with the suit after the plaint is amended (m). Similarly where a suit is brought in the name of a wrong person as plaintiff, the appellate Court may direct the plaint to be amended and remand the case for re-trial (n). Where time was granted to the plaintiff to produce his evidence, but neither he nor his pleader appeared on the day to which the hearing was adjourned, and the lower Court instead of proceeding to dispose of the suit under O. 17, r. 3, dismissed the suit for default under O. 17, r. 2, it was held that the appellate Court had power to remand the case to be disposed of in the manner O. 41, r. 23, prescribed by O. 17, r. 3 (o). A case may also be remanded where the decision of the lower Court is given without taking the defendant's evidence (p).

Sections 562 and 566 of the Code of 1882 [now rr. 23 and 25 of this Order] were the only sections that provided for a remand. The cases cited in the preceding paragraph did not fall under either of those sections. Moreover, the Code of 1882 contained a section, being s. 564 which prohibited the appellate Court from remanding a case except as provided by s. 562. That section was found in its working to be embarrassing, and to get over the difficulty presented by cases of the kind cited in the preceding paragraph, the Courts resorted to their inherent jurisdiction. That section has been omitted in this Code on the ground that it was unduly restrictive. The absolute prohibition of s. 564 having been removed, the Court, it is said, is free under s. 151 to make an order of remand though the case may not fall either under this rule or rule 25 (q). It has accordingly been held that as under the old Code, so under the new Code, an order of remand can be made though the suit was not disposed of on a point which can be called a preliminary point within the meaning of this rule, provided such an order is necessary for the ends of justice (r). In Nabin Chandra v. Prankrishna (s), however, Stephen and Mullick, JJ., expressed the opinion that if the appellate Court had at all any inherent power to remand, that power was taken away by s. 107 read with O. 41, rr. 23 and 25, and that under s. 107 an appellate Court can only remand a case "subject to such limitations as may be prescribed," that is, prescribed by rules 23 and 25 of O. 41. The view so expressed ignores entirely the specific provisions of s. 151 of the Code. In Mani Mohan v. Ramtaran (t), Jenkins, C.J., after observing that the combined effect of s. 107 and O. 41, r. 23, was to limit the power of remand to the position described in O. 41, r. 23, said: "And this is the general rule except under special conditions which have no application in the circumstances of this case." The view taken by Stephen and Mullick, JJ., was dissented from by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Ghuznavi v. The Allahabad Bank, Ltd. (u), where it was held that the powers of the appellate Court as regards remand are not restricted to the case specified in O. 41, r. 23, but that the Court, by reason of its inherent jurisdiction recognized and preserved in the Code [s. 151] may order a remand in cases other than the case specified in O. 41, r. 23, if it be necessary for the ends of justice. It has thus been held that an appellate Court may direct a plaint to be amended by adding parties and remand the whole case to the Court below (v). The High Court of Patna has followed the Full Bench ruling in Ghuznavi's case (w). See notes to r. 33 below, "Remand."

Remand in appeal from ex parte decree.—See notes to s. 96 under the head "Appeal from a decree ex parte," p. 246 above.

Remand in appeal from an order refusing to set aside an ex parte decree.—In an appeal from an order refusing to set aside an ex parte decree the only case which can be remanded is the application under O. 9, r. 13, and not the original suit. A obtains a decree ex parte against B. B applies under O. 9, r. 13, for an order to set aside the decree on the ground that he was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing at the hearing, but the application is refused. B appeals from the order rejecting the

- O. 41, r. 23. application [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (d)]. If the order is reversed by the appellate Court, the proper course for that Court is to remand the application to the lower Court to dispose of that application with due regard to the conditions of O. 9, r. 13, but not to remand the original suit for re-trial (x).

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order remanding a case, where an appeal would lie from the decree of the appellate Court [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (u)]. This means that the order of remand is appealable only in cases in which the decree, which would have been passed by the appellate Court had that Court instead of remanding the case under this rule decided the whole case and passed a decree, is appealable (y). If no appeal is preferred from the order of remand, the party aggrieved by the order cannot afterwards dispute its correctness in an appeal from the final decree; see s. 105, sub-s. (2), and notes thereto. But though an appeal lies from an order of remand, it must be preferred according to the Calcutta High Court before the final disposal of the remanded suit, otherwise it cannot be entertained. The reason given is that the right of appeal given by s. 104 and O. 43 from orders specified therein ceases with the disposal of the suit (z). On the other hand it has been held by the High Court of Allahabad, that the appeal may be preferred even after the decision of the remanded suit, provided it is within the period of limitation. The Allahabad Court proceeds on the ground that there is no provision in the Code imposing any such restriction on the right of appeal (a). The period of limitation for an appeal from an order of remand is 90 days from the date of the order [Limitation Act, art. 156].

Though an appeal lies under rule 1 of Order 43 from an order of remand, no appeal will lie from the order when the order is itself made in an appeal preferred under any other clause of that rule. Thus if an appeal is preferred under O. 43, r. 1, cl. (a), from an order under O. 7, r. 10, or under O. 43, r. 1, cl. (j), from an order under O. 21, r. 92, or under O. 43, r. 1, cl. (q), from an order under O. 38, r. 6, or under any other clause of Order 43, r. 1, and the appellate Court allows the appeal and makes an order of remand, no appeal will lie from the order of remand under O. 43, r. 1, cl. (u). The reason is that cl. (u) of r. 1 of O. 43, is subject to s. 104, sub-s. (2), which provides that no appeal shall lie from any order passed in appeal [it may be an order of remand] under that section (b).

Powers of High Court in appeals from orders of remand.—In an appeal from an order of remand preferred under O. 43, r. 1, cl. (u), the High Court is not confined to the question whether the order satisfies the requirements of the present rule, but may also determine the correctness of the lower appellate Court's decision on the "preliminary point" on which the Court of first instance disposed of the case. Thus if the Court of first instance dismisses a suit as barred by limitation and the appellate Court reverses the decree and remands the case under this rule, and an appeal is preferred to the High Court from the order of remand, the High Court has the power to determine whether the point of limitation was correctly decided by the lower appellate Court (c).

Letters Patent appeal.—An order of remand made by a single Judge of the High Court in second appeal is a "judgment" within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, and is appealable as such (d).

Improper order of remand.—Under the Code of 1882 an order under s. 562 was appealable, and a party might impeach the order of remand on appeal from the final decree. When no appeal was preferred from the order of remand, but the order was impeached on appeal from the final decree, and the Court found that the order was improperly made, the question arose as to whether the order should be treated as illegal or merely irregular. It was held by the High Court of Allahabad that if a remand was ordered in a case in which it ought not to have been ordered, both the order of remand and all the proceedings subsequent thereto are void and illegal (e). On the other hand, it was held by the Calcutta High Court that the remand order and the subsequent proceedings are not in such a case illegal, but merely irregular, and the subsequent proceedings should not be set aside unless the remand had substantially affected the decision of the remanded suit on the merits and the party complaining of the irregularity was materially prejudiced thereby (f) [see s. 99]. The Madras High Court held that though an order of remand made in contravention of the provisions of s. 562 is illegal, yet the error may be cured by the consent of parties or by waiver (g). The whole difficulty has been got over in the present Code by enacting that a party who does not appeal from an order of remand in the first instance cannot afterwards dispute the correctness of the order on appeal from the final decree: see s. 105, sub-s. (2).

O. 41,
rr. 23-25.

Remand of case by consent for trial on issues not raised in appeal.—The effect of an appeal is to re-open the decree of the lower Court, and it is competent to the appellate Court on the agreement of parties to remand the case to the lower Court for trial on issues not raised in the memorandum of appeal (h).

24. [S. 565.] Where the evidence upon the record is sufficient to enable the appellate Court to pronounce judgment, the appellate Court may, after re-settling the issues, if necessary, finally determine the suit, notwithstanding that the judgment of the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has proceeded wholly upon some ground other than that on which the appellate Court proceeds.

Where evidence on record sufficient, appellate Court may determine case finally.

Scope of the rule.—The scope of this rule is limited to cases in which the evidence upon the record is sufficient to enable the appellate Court to determine the suit (i).

This rule does not enable an appellate Court to declare a right in favour of one of the parties, where no issue has been framed on the point, and the right has not been set up in the lower Court (j).

Second appeal.—See s. 103 and notes thereto.

25. [S. 566.] Where the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has omitted to frame or try any issue, or to determine any question of fact, which appears to the appellate Court essential to the right decision of the suit upon the merits, the appellate and in such case shall direct such Court to take the additional evidence required ;

and such Court shall proceed to try such issues, and shall return the evidence to the appellate Court, together with its findings thereon and the reasons therefor.

The words " and the reasons therefor " in paragraph 2 are new.

Scope of the rule.—This rule refers to cases in which the evidence upon the record is not sufficient to enable the appellate Court to determine the suit.

"May, if necessary, frame issues."—In framing issues under this rule the appellate Court should have regard to the provisions of O. 14, r. 3, which indicate the materials from which issues are to be framed. See notes to O. 14, rr. 1 to 5.

Power of Court to which issues are referred for trial under this rule.—The Court to which issues are referred for trial under this rule has no power to try and decide the case, but to try the issues only. It should then return the evidence to the appellate Court together with its findings thereon and the reasons therefor (k).
Nor has it the power to make an order of reference under schedule II, para. 3, of the Code (l).

Court by which issues should be tried.—Where issues are referred for trial under this rule, they are triable only by the Court which was originally seized of the case, and by no other Court (m).

New issue raised before High Court.—" Even if it be competent to the High Court [in second appeal] to remit a case for rehearing on an issue not raised in the pleadings nor even suggested in the Courts below, this ought only to be done in exceptional cases for good cause shown and on payment of all costs thrown away " (n).

Appeal.—No appeal lies under the Code from an order referring issues for trial under this rule (o). Nor does an appeal lie under the Letters Patent (p).

26. [S. 567.] (1) Such evidence and findings shall form part of the record in the suit ; and either party may, within a time to be fixed by the appellate Court, present a memorandum of objections to any finding.

Findings and evidence

tions to finding.

(2) After the expiration of the period so fixed for presenting such memorandum the appellate Court shall proceed to determine the appeal.

Where no memorandum of objection is filed.—This rule provides that O. 41, r.26 either party may file a memorandum of objections to the findings by the lower Court on the issues referred to it by the appellate Court. It is not to be supposed, however, that if no objections are filed by either party, the appellate Court is absolved from hearing the appeal (q). Sub-r. (2) clearly indicates that even if no objections are filed, the appellate Court “shall proceed to determine the appeal.” That is to say, even if no objections are filed to the findings, the appellate Court is bound to examine the correctness of the findings, and to state in its judgment the reasons (r. 31) for which it either accepts or rejects the findings (r). It should not accept the findings blindly without examining the evidence on which they are based (s). See notes to r. 31, “Shall state the reasons for the decision.”

Where the appellate Court has heard arguments on some of the issues and has expressed its views thereon and remitted other issues under r. 25, it is not bound, on the return of findings, to hear the case de novo, but may confine counsel to argument upon the findings (t).

The appellate Court shall proceed to determine the appeal.—When an appellate Court has made an order referring issues for trial under r. 25, the return to such order must be made to the same Court, and such Court is not competent to transfer the appeal for disposal to another Court (u).

Where order referring issues was unnecessary.—In the case of an unnecessary remand under r. 25, it is competent to the Judge before whom the appeal subsequently comes to disregard the findings on the order of remand (v).

Second appeal.—The provisions of this and the preceding rule apply so far as may be, by virtue of O. 42, to second appeals. Hence the High Court may in second appeal refer issues of fact for trial to the lower appellate Court, but when the finding and evidence upon such issues are returned to the High Court, the finding is conclusive, and it cannot be challenged upon the evidence before the High Court as in first appeal. The reason is that a second appeal is not allowed on questions of fact. The only grounds on which a second appeal is allowed are those mentioned in s. 100, and these relate to errors of law or usage having the force of law or a substantial error or defect in procedure which may possibly have produced error or defect in the decision of the case on the merits. The objections to the findings must therefore be restricted to the limits within which the original pleas in second appeal are confined (w).

Sending back case for a revised finding.—An appellate Court has no power to send back a case to the lower Court to submit a revised finding on the facts, and evidence already recorded. Such a course is not warranted by any one of the rules 23 to 26 of this Order (x). But if it does so, it is a mere irregularity within the meaning of s. 99, and if the appellate Court, on the revised finding being returned to it, itself considers the evidence on which it is based, the decree will not be set aside in appeal (y).

27. [S. 568.] (1) The parties to an appeal shall not be entitled to produce additional evidence, whether oral or documentary, in the appellate Court. But if—

Production of additional evidence in appellate Court.

(a) the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has refused to admit evidence which ought to have been admitted, or

(b) the appellate Court requires any document to be produced or any witness to be examined to enable it to pronounce judgment, or for any other substantial cause, the appellate Court may allow such evidence or document to be produced, or witness to be examined.

(2) Wherever additional evidence is allowed to be produced by an appellate Court, the Court shall record the reason for its admission.

When additional evidence may be admitted.—Under this rule “the admissibility of additional evidence is made to depend, not upon the relevancy or materiality to the issue before the Court of the evidence sought to be admitted, or upon the fact whether or not the applicants had an opportunity of adducing evidence at some earlier stage, but upon whether or not the appellate Court requires the evidence to enable it to pronounce judgment or for any other substantial cause” (2). Additional evidence under this rule should not be taken until the appellate Court has examined the evidence on the record, and has after such examination come to the conclusion that the evidence as it stands is inherently defective. Until this is done, the appellate Court has no power to admit additional evidence, not even if the evidence offered be the evidence of new matter discovered after the Court of first instance had pronounced its judgment. As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Kessowji Issur v. G. I. P. Ry. (a), “the legitimate occasion for [the application of the present rule] is when, on examining the evidence as it stands, some inherent lacuna or defect becomes apparent, not where a discovery is made, outside the Court, of fresh evidence and the application is made to import it.” It must, however, be noted that where additional evidence is taken by the High Court with the assent of both sides, it is not open to either party to complain of it (b).

The power given under this rule should be exercised very sparingly by the Courts, and great caution should be exercised in admitting new evidence (c). Additional evidence must not be allowed to enable a plaintiff to make out a fresh case in appeal. If cases were remanded for the purpose of allowing parties to make out a new case or to improve their case by calling further evidence, there would be no end to litigation (d). An appellant who has ample opportunity of giving evidence in the lower Court, and elects not to do so, but rests his case on the evidence as it stood, ought not to be allowed to give evidence which he could have given below (e). Similarly, the appellate Court should not admit a document tendered by a party, if, having the opportunity of tendering it in the Court below, he omitted to do so (f). Nor should it allow additional evidence to prove the genuineness of a document held by the lower Court to be a fabrication (g).

Where the lower Court has refused to admit evidence.—An appellate Court should not reverse the decree of the first Court without allowing the decree-holder to give evidence which he offered in the first Court, and which that Court declined to take (h).

Where the appellate Court requires any document to be produced.—The appellate Court has no power under this rule to require a document to be produced unless it is required to enable it to pronounce judgment. Where judgment could be pronounced in the absence of the document, the appellate Court should not allow the document to be produced (i). The word “requires” means nothing more than “needs” or “finds needful” (j).

Where the appellate Court requires a witness to be examined.—An appellate Court should not under cl. (b) of this rule allow to be produced before it additional evidence which impeaches the testimony of a witness called in the Court below, without that witness also being called and being given an opportunity to contradict or explain the additional evidence so given; otherwise no witness, whatever his standing would be safe from adverse judicial comment (k). Where a witness was examined and cross-examined in the Court of first instance, and there was no gap in the evidence or new matter about which it was necessary to examine him, and the appellate Judge merely cross-examined him on his previous evidence on the chance of getting to the bottom of the matter, it was held that the examination of the witness by the Court under those circumstances was not warranted by the provisions of this rule (l).

“Or for any other substantial cause.”—The “cause” referred to here need not be ejusdem generis with the causes stated in the earlier part of the rule (m). The expression “any other substantial cause” confers a wide discretion on the appellate Court to admit additional evidence when the ends of justice require it (n). It has accordingly been held that the discovery after the filing of the appeal of fresh evidence not known to and available to the appellant after due diligence during the pendency of the proceedings in the first Court is a “substantial cause” within the meaning of this rule justifying the admission of such evidence in appeal (o).

Recording of reason for admission of additional evidence.—The provision requiring an appellate Court to record its reason for admitting additional evidence is merely directory, and not imperative. Hence the omission to record the reason would not render the evidence inadmissible (p).

Second appeal.—Except in the case provided in s. 103 the High Court is precluded in second appeal, by virtue of the provisions of s. 100, from entering into questions of fact. Hence where the Court of first appeal has admitted additional evidence under this rule, the hearing in the Court of second appeal will not for that reason be treated as a first appeal so as to entitle the parties to go into questions of fact (q).

No appeal lies from a refusal by the lower appellate Court to admit fresh evidence under this rule (r). Hence if the lower appellate Court refuses to admit a document as additional evidence in appeal under this rule, the High Court cannot interfere in second appeal and hold that such additional evidence ought to have been admitted by the lower appellate Court (s).

Appeal to Privy Council.—The rejection of an application under this rule does not give a right of appeal to the Privy Council (t).

28. [s. 569.] Wherever additional evidence is allowed to be produced, the appellate Court may either take such evidence, or direct the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, or any other subordinate Court, to take such evidence and to send it when taken to the appellate Court.

Mode of taking additional evidence.

It need hardly be stated that where the additional evidence taken by the Court consists of documents, they should be exhibited in the case (u).

29. [s. 570.] Where additional evidence is directed or allowed to be taken, the appellate Court shall specify the points to which the evidence is to be confined, and record on its proceedings the points so specified.

Points to be defined and recorded.

Judgment in Appeal.

30. [s. 571.] The Appellate Court, after hearing the parties or their pleaders and referring to any part of the proceedings, whether on appeal or in the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, to which reference may be considered necessary, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day, of which notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders.

Judgment when and where pronounced.

After hearing the parties or their pleaders.—This rule authorizes the Court to pronounce judgment after hearing the parties or their pleaders. Hence a judgment pronounced without hearing the parties or their representatives, if they are dead, is unauthorized by the Code. Thus where an appellate Court heard and decided an appeal without being aware of the death of the appellant, the decree was held to be a nullity (v). See notes to s. 47, case (4), p. 109.

Contents, date and signature of judgment.

31. [S. 574.] The judgment of the appellate Court shall be in writing and shall state—

- (a) the points for determination ;
- (b) the decision thereon ;
- (c) the reasons for the decision ; and
- (d) where the decree appealed from is reversed or varied, the relief to which the appellant is entitled ;

and shall at the time that it is pronounced be signed and dated by the Judge or by the Judges concurring therein.

Shall state the reasons for the decision.—The judgment of the appellate Court should state the reasons for the decision. The reason of the rule has been stated to be to afford the litigant parties an opportunity of knowing and understanding the grounds upon which the decision proceeds with a view to enable them to exercise, if they see fit, and are so advised, the right of second appeal conferred by s. 100. If an appellate Court could dispose of appeals coming before it in a judgment which does not state the reasons for the decisions, the right of second appeal might altogether be neutralized (w). The reason for the decision should be stated not only when the decree of the first Court is varied or set aside, but also when it is confirmed (x). If this rule is not observed, the proper form of the order to be made by the High Court in second appeal is to set aside the decree of the lower appellate Court and send back the case to that Court in order that the appeal may be disposed of according to law (y). This course was adopted where the judgment was “the appeal dismissed with costs” (z), and in another case where the judgment was “appeal rejected under s. 551 [now O. 41, r. 11] of the Civil Procedure Code” (a). Where the decree of the first Court is confirmed in appeal, the Judge of the appellate Court should state his own reasons of the case, and should not confine himself to approving of the reasons of the Court of first instance (b). The reason is that the judgment should show on the face of it that the points in dispute were clearly before the mind of the Judge and that he exercised his own discrimination in deciding them. Thus where the judgment was—“To deal with the grounds of appeal would be simply to repeat the judgment of the District Munsif. I concur with the decision the District Munsif has given on each point. The judgment of the lower Court is confirmed for the reasons therein set forth, and this appeal is dismissed with costs,” the judgment was set aside (c). In the last mentioned case the Court observed : “Such a general and wholesale adoption of the judgment of the Court of first instance cannot be considered as a sufficient compliance with the law.” The same was held where the judgment was “there is no

If the reasons for the decision are not stated by the appellate Court as fully as they ought to have been, but the High Court is satisfied upon the judgment that the Judge of the lower Court had read the evidence and meant to find upon that evidence as a whole, the decree of the lower Court will not be interfered with in second appeal. The proper course to be followed in such a case is to require the Judge, if still holding office, to supplement his judgment by giving in greater detail the reasons on which it is based (e).

Shall state the points for determination.—The object of the legislature in making it incumbent by this rule on the appellate Court to raise points for determination is to clear up the pleadings and focus the attention of the Court and of the parties on the specific and rival contentions of the latter (f). The exact questions which arise in the appeal and require determination must be stated in the judgment. It is not sufficient to state, "the point to be determined on appeal is whether or not the decision is consistent with the merits of the case." A proposition so roundly worded is no "point" at all (g).

Form of order.—Where there has been a failure by the first appellate Court to comply with the requirements of this rule, the proper form of the order to be made by the second appellate Court is to set aside the decree and remand the case to the first appellate Court for disposal according to law. If the Judge of the Court to which the case is remanded is the Judge who heard the appeal in the first instance, he need not re-hear the appeal unless he is of opinion that he cannot properly dispose of the remanded case without a re-hearing. But where the Judge of the Court to which the case is remanded is not the Judge who heard the appeal in the first instance, a re-hearing is always necessary in order that there may be a compliance with the order of the second appellate Court that the case be disposed of according to law (h). See notes above, "Shall state the reasons for the decision."

High Court.—Where a suit was decided by a District Court, and the decree was confirmed in appeal by the High Court, and the High Court did not state in its judgment the reasons for its decision, it was said by Edge, C.J., on an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council on the ground that the requirements of this rule were not complied with, that the present rule was not intended to apply to cases where the High Court, after hearing the judgment of the lower Court and arguments thereon, comes to the conclusion that both the judgment and the reasons given by the Court below for its decision are completely satisfactory (i). And the opinion has been expressed by Mahmood, J., that this rule does not apply at all to judgments of High Courts in second appeal (j). See s. 122.

Appeal to Privy Council.—Non-compliance with the requirements of this rule is not a ground of appeal to the Privy Council (k).

form which the decree in appeal shall take, or as to the order to be made in appeal, the appellate Court may pass a decree or make an order accordingly. O. 41,
rr. 32, 33.

33. [New.] The appellate Court shall have power to pass any decree and make any order which ought to have been passed or made and to pass or make such further or other decree or order as the case may require, and this power may be exercised by the Court notwithstanding that the appeal is as to part only of the decree and may be exercised in favour of all or any of the respondents or parties, although such respondents or parties may not have filed any appeal or objection.

Illustration.

A claims a sum of money as due to him from X or Y, and in a suit against both obtains a decree against X. X appeals, and A and Y are respondents. The appellate Court decides in favour of X. It has power to pass a decree against Y.

Cases to which rule applies—This rule is new. It is taken for the most part from O. 58, r. 4, of the Rules of the Supreme Court of Judicature in England. The object of the rule is to empower the appellate Court to do complete justice between the parties. The illustration to the rule indicates a type of case for which provision is intended to be made. The following are further instances :—

(1) A sues B and C for contribution. A decree is passed against B, but as against C the suit is dismissed. B appeals making A alone respondent to the appeal. A does not appeal from the decree dismissing the suit as against C. If the appellate Court is of opinion that C is liable, and not B, it may under r. 20 direct that C be added as a respondent as being a person "interested in the result of the appeal," and may under the present rule alter the decree so as to make C liable, though there was no appeal preferred by A from the dismissal of the suit against C. This is in accordance with the Calcutta rulings under the Code of 1882 (l). According to the Allahabad rulings under that Code C could neither be added as a respondent, nor even if he were joined as a respondent from the first could any decree be passed against him, no appeal having been preferred against him (m). The Allahabad ruling that C could not be added as a respondent (under r. 20) was followed by the Madras High Court (n). The present rule gives effect to the Calcutta rulings and supersedes the Allahabad and Madras rulings.

(2) A suit is brought on behalf of the public for (1) a declaration that the public are entitled to use certain locks on a certain river without payment of tolls, and (2) a declaration that the defendant is under an obligation to keep the locks in repair. A decree is passed for the plaintiff awarding the relief as to the use of the locks without

O. 41, rr. 33, 34. payment of tolls, but declaring that the defendant is under no obligation to repair the locks. The defendant appeals. The plaintiff neither files a cross-appeal nor objections. The appellate Court finds that the public are not entitled to use the locks without payment of tolls to the defendant. At the same time it finds that the defendant is under an obligation to keep the locks in repair. The appellate Court has power, while declaring by its decree that the public are liable to pay tolls, also to declare that the defendant is liable to keep the locks in repair, notwithstanding that no appeal or objection was taken to that part of the decree by the plaintiff (o).

The appellate Court has power under this rule to vary the decree of the lower Court, though the variation may benefit a defendant who has not appealed from the decree (p). Similarly it has power to make an order for extension of time for making an award in a matter governed by the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899 (q).

Cases to which rule does not apply.—A sues B to recover rent, Rs. 295. A decree is passed in favour of A for Rs. 95. A appeals against the disallowance of the balance of the amount claimed. B neither files a cross-appeal nor objections against the decree. The appellate Court finds that nothing is due to A from B. It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the appellate Court has no power to dismiss A's claim in toto. If B was aggrieved by the decree against him for Rs. 95, he ought to have appealed or filed objections (r).

Such other decree as the case may require.—The power of the appellate Court is not limited to determining the question whether the original Court was right according to the law in force at the date of its judgment; it may pass such decree as is in accordance with any later enactment which came into operation subsequent to such date (s).

Remand.—A sues B for three sums of money, X, Y and Z. A's claim is allowed as to items X and Y, but disallowed as to item Z. A appeals from the decree as to item Z. B appeals from the decree as to items X and Y. The appellate Court dismisses A's appeal, and allows B's appeal as to item X only with the result that item Y is decreed in A's favour. A then appeals to the High Court as to items X and Z. The High Court has power under this rule to remand the whole case for determination on the merits. The effect of such an order is to empower the lower Court to reopen the case even as to item Y which was decided by the lower appellate Court in favour of A and from which decision B had not preferred an appeal to the High Court (t).

34. [s. 576.] Where the appeal is heard by more Judges than one, any Judge dissenting from the judgment of the Court shall state in writing the decision or order which he thinks should be passed on the appeal, and he may state his reasons for the same.

Dissent to be recorded.

rr. 35-37.

Date and contents of decree.

(2) The decree shall contain the number of the appeal, the names and descriptions of the appellant and respondent and a clear specification of the relief granted or other adjudication made.

(3) The decree shall also state the amount of costs incurred in the appeal, and by whom, or out of what property, and in what proportions such costs and the costs in the suit are to be paid.

(4) The decree shall be signed and dated by the Judge or Judges who passed it ;

Provided that where there are more Judges than one and there is a difference of opinion among them, it shall not be necessary for any Judge dissenting from the judgment of the Court to sign the decree.

Judge dissenting from judgment need not sign decree.

Costs.—Where a decree is confirmed in appeal upon grounds wholly different from those relied on in the lower Court, the proper course is to dismiss the appeal without costs (u).

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their appellate jurisdiction [O. 49, r. 3].

Form.—For form of decree in appeal, see App. G, form no. 9.

36. [s. 580.] Certified copies of the judgment and decree in appeal shall be furnished to the parties on application to the appellate Court and at their expense.

Copies of judgment and decree to be furnished to parties.

37. [s. 581.] A copy of the judgment and of the decree, certified by the appellate Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, shall be sent to the Court which passed the decree appealed from and shall be filed with the original proceedings in the suit, and an entry of the judgment of the appellate Court shall be made in the register of civil suits.

Certified copy of decree to be sent to Court whose decree appealed from.

ORDER XLII.

Appeals from Appellate Decrees.

Procedure.

1. [S. 587.] The rules of Order XLI shall apply, so far as may be, to appeals from appellate decrees.

See s. 108, cl. (a).

Rules relating to first appeals to apply, so far as may be, to second appeals.—We shall note here only those rules relating to first appeals as to the applicability of which to second appeals there have been reported decisions. Rr. 1 and 2 of Order 41, which require a memorandum of appeal in first appeals, have been held to apply to second appeals (v). R. 22, which relates to cross-objections, has been held to apply to second appeals (w). Rr. 25 and 26, which empower the Court of first appeal to frame and refer issues for trial to the lower Court and to determine the appeal after return of findings on such issues, apply to second appeals to the extent indicated in the notes to r. 26 under the head "Second appeal." Rr. 27 and 28, which relate to additional evidence in first appeal, apply to second appeals to the extent mentioned in the notes to r. 27, under the head "Second appeal." As to the applicability to second appeals of r. 31, which relates to the contents of judgment of the first appellate Court, see notes to that rule under the head "High Court."

Inherent power of High Court to remand in second appeal.—Where the Court of first instance declined to record oral evidence tendered by the plaintiff on the ground that the documentary evidence produced by him was sufficient, and the decree in favour of the plaintiff was reversed in appeal, but the appellate Court declined to allow the plaintiff-respondent to produce oral evidence before it, it was held by the High Court in second appeal, that though there was no provision in the Code strictly applicable to the case, the High Court was warranted ex debito justitiæ in setting aside the proceedings of both the Courts below and in directing the first Court to re-try the case (x). See notes to O. 33, "Remand."

ORDER XLIII.

Appeals from Orders.

O. 43, r. 1.

Appeal from orders.

1. [S. 588.] An appeal shall lie from the following orders under the provisions of section 104, namely :—

- (a) an order under rule 10 of Order VII returning a plaint to be presented to the proper Court ;
- (b) an order under rule 10 of Order VIII pronouncing judgment against a party ;
- (c) an order under rule 9 of Order IX rejecting an application (in a case open to appeal) for an order to set aside the dismissal of a suit ;

(v) Ahmad Ali v. Wari Hussain (1893) 15 All. 128, 127. | (w) Kausalia v. Gulab Kuar (1899) 21 All. 297. | (x) Durga Dihal v. Anoraji (1895) 17 All. 29.

- (d) an order under rule 13 of Order IX rejecting an application (in a case open to appeal) for an order to set aside a decree passed ex parte ;
- (e) an order under rule 4 of Order X pronouncing judgment against a party ;
- (f) an order under rule 23 of Order XI ;
- (g) an order under rule 10 of Order XVI for the attachment of property ;
- (h) an order under rule 20 of Order XVI pronouncing judgment against a party ;
- (i) an order under rule 34 of Order XXI on an objection to the draft of a document or of an endorsement ;
- (j) an order under rule 72 or rule 92 of Order XXI setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale ;
- (k) an order under rule 9 of Order XXII refusing to set aside the abatement or dismissal of a suit ;
- (l) an order under rule 10 of Order XXII giving or refusing to give leave ;
- (m) an order under rule 3 of Order XXIII recording or refusing to record an agreement, compromise or satisfaction ;
- (n) an order under rule 2 of Order XXV rejecting an application (in a case open to appeal) for an order to set aside the dismissal of a suit ;
- (o) an order under rule 3 or rule 8 of Order XXXIV refusing to extend the time for the payment of mortgage-money ;
- (p) orders in interpleader-suits under rule 3, rule 4 or rule 6 of Order XXXV ;
- (q) an order under rule 2, rule 3 or rule 6 of Order XXXVIII ;
- (r) an order under rule 1, rule 2, rule 4 or rule 10 of Order XXXIX ;
- (s) an order under rule 1 or rule 4 of Order XL ;

O. 43,
rr. 1, 2.

- (t) an order of refusal under rule 19 of Order XLI to re-admit, or under rule 21 of Order XLI to re-hear, an appeal ;
- (u) an order under rule 23 of Order XLI remanding a case, where an appeal would lie from the decree of the appellate Court ;
- (v) an order made by any Court other than a High Court refusing the grant of a certificate under rule 6 of Order XLV ;
- (w) an order under rule 4 of Order XLVII granting an application for review.

Section 104.—This rule forms part of s. 104 [see s. 104, sub-s. (1), cl. (i)]. The result is that no second appeal lies from an order passed in an appeal preferred under this rule (y).

Clause (a): order returning plaint to be presented to the proper Court.—Where an order is made by the first Court of appeal returning a plaint under O. 7, r. 10, by virtue of the powers conferred on it by s. 107, the order is appealable under this clause, and an appeal will lie to the High Court under s. 106 (z). But no appeal lies from an order of an appellate Court returning a memorandum of appeal to be presented to the proper Court. The terms of cl. (a) of this rule do not cover such a case nor can the reading of O. 7, r. 10, with s. 107 justify the interpolation of the words “memorandum of appeal” after the word “plaint” in cl. (a) of the present rule (a).

Other clauses.—These have already been considered in their proper place.

2. [s 590.] The rules of Order XLI shall apply, so far as may be, to appeals from orders.

Procedure.

See s. 108, cl. (b).

ORDER XLIV.

Pauper Appeals.

- O 44, r. 1. 1. [s. 592.] Any person entitled to prefer an appeal, who is unable to pay the fee required for the memorandum of appeal, may present an application accompanied by a memorandum of appeal, and may be allowed to appeal as a pauper, subject, in all matters including the presentation of such application, to the provisions relating to suits by paupers, in so far as those provisions are applicable :

Provided that the Court shall reject the application unless, upon a perusal thereof and of the judgment and decree appealed from, it sees reason to think that the decree is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law, or is otherwise erroneous or unjust.

Procedure on application for admission
of appeal.

Alterations in the rule.—The words “in all matters including the presentation of such application” in the first paragraph are new. See notes below under those words.

“In all matters including the presentation of such application.”

—The present rule provides that the provisions relating to suits by paupers shall apply so far as may be to appeals by paupers. Therefore the application referred to in this rule for leave to appeal as a pauper must be presented by the applicant in person just as an application for leave to sue as a pauper [see O. 33, r. 3]. This is now made clear by the addition of the words “in all matters including the presentation of such application.” In the absence of these words in the old section it was held by the Madras High Court that the rule as to the presentation of a pauper's petition (now contained in O. 33, r. 3) did not apply to pauper appeals (b). The Madras decision is no longer law.

“Subject to the provision relating to suits by paupers.”—A sues B to recover certain properties as the heir of her deceased husband. The suit is dismissed. A applies for leave to appeal as a pauper. It is found on inquiry that A had before instituting the suit entered into an agreement falling within the terms of O. 33, r. 5 (d), which would have disentitled A to sue as a pauper. The appellate Court should under these circumstances refuse leave to A to appeal as a pauper (c).

Application and memorandum of appeal.—This rule requires two separate documents to be presented,—a memorandum of appeal, and an application for leave to appeal as a pauper. When the Judge disposes of the pauper application, he does not thereby necessarily dispose of the appeal. He may still treat it as an existing appeal if the appellant desires to pay the full court-fees on the appeal and to continue it as an ordinary appeal. The Judge is under no legal obligation to dismiss the appeal when he refuses the appellant leave to appeal as a pauper (d). Following this reasoning, it has been held by the High Court of Madras that where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is rejected owing to the memorandum of appeal which accompanied it being unstamped, the rejection of the application does not carry with it the rejection of the memorandum of appeal. The result is that if the pauper applies for time to pay the court-fee, and time is granted to him [s. 149], and the court-fee is paid within the time fixed by the Court, the appeal must be held to be in time, though the court-fee may have been paid after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for filing the appeal (e).

Proviso to the rule.—The proviso is a necessary safeguard introduced by the legislature for the benefit of litigants who find themselves opposed by paupers. To Appeal.—No appeal lies under the Code from an order refusing leave to appeal as a pauper. It was held in a Madras case that no appeal lies from such an order under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent (g), but that decision has been dissented from by a Full Bench of the same High Court in a recent case (h). There is an Allahabad case in which it was held that no appeal lies under the Letters Patent from an order refusing leave to appeal as a pauper (i). That decision, however, proceeded on grounds no longer tenable, and it cannot, therefore, be treated as a precedent. See notes to s. 104, "Letters Patent Appeal," p. 264 above.

Limitation.—The period of limitation for leave to appeal as a pauper is 30 days from the date of the decree appealed from (j). See Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 170.

Power of High Court to grant leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council in forma pauperis.—It has recently been held by the High Courts of Calcutta (l), Patna (m), and Madras (n), that O. 44, r. 1, does not apply to appeals to His Majesty in Council, and that the High Court has no power to grant leave to appeal in forma pauperis to His Majesty in Council. The point arose in an earlier Calcutta case, but it was not decided (o). In a still earlier case it was said that the usual security for costs must be given (p).

Limitation.—See notes to s. 109 above.

3. [S. 600.] (1) Every petition shall state the grounds of appeal and pray for a certificate either that, as regards amount or value and nature, the case fulfils the requirements of section 110, or that it is otherwise a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council.

Certificate as to value or fitness.

(2) Upon receipt of such petition, the Court shall direct notice to be served on the opposite party to show cause why the said certificate should not be granted.

Alteration in the rule.—In sub-rule (2) the word “shall” has been substituted for the word “may.”

Certificate.—The certificate of leave to appeal, and not the order for such certificate, is the document which the Judicial Committee are bound to consider and act upon in determining whether leave to appeal has been properly granted or not; and unless the certificate upon which the leave to appeal is based is in such a form as to justify that leave, they ought to hold that leave has not properly been given (q). The assent of the respondent to the issue of a certificate under this rule cannot give effect to it in the absence of the conditions under which alone it could be issued (r).

Certificate as to fitness.—Where a case fulfils the requirements of s. 110, the petitioner is entitled to a certificate as of right in the ordinary course of procedure otherwise, that is, where a case does not fulfil the requirements of s. 110, as where the matter is under the appealable value or is not measurable by money, the granting of the certificate is entirely in the discretion of the Court (s). In the former case, the High Court should certify the sufficiency of the amount for appeal to the Privy Council, and should also certify, when the decision of the lower Court is affirmed, that the appeal involves a question of law. In the latter case, it is quite enough if the certificate states that the case is a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council (t). In a recent case their Lordships of the Privy Council laid down a rule to be followed in future in Indian cases, that where a party applies to the Committee for special leave to appeal, the matter being under the appealable value or not measurable by money, he should first have applied to the Court below for a certificate under this rule and s. 109, cl. (c), that the case is otherwise a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council, and observed that unless this was done, special leave to appeal would not be granted by the Committee except in special cases (u). See notes to s. 109 under the head "Certificate as to fitness," p. 270, and notes to s. 110 under sub-head "Where the matter is under the appealable value or is not capable of valuation," p. 276.

Procedure.—If the petitioner does not prosecute his petition, it may be struck off for non-prosecution (v).

Appeal.—An order granting a certificate that the case is a fit one for appeal to the Privy Council is not a "judgment" within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. Hence no appeal lies from such an order (w). Nor does an appeal lie under that clause from an order refusing an application for leave to the Privy Council where the refusal is based on the ground that the case did not fulfil the requirements of s. 110 above (x).

Form.—For form of notice under sub-r. (2), see App. G, form no. 12.

4. [New.] For the purposes of pecuniary valuation suits involving substantially the same questions for determination and decided by the same judgment may be consolidated: but suits decided by separate judgments shall not be consolidated, notwithstanding that they involve substantially the same questions for determination.

Consolidation of suits.

Consolidation of suits.—This rule is new. In the absence of any such rule in the Code of 1882, it was held by the High Court of Allahabad that suits involving substantially the same questions for determination could be consolidated for the purpose of reaching the pecuniary limit necessary for an appeal, if the property affected by the suits was the same, notwithstanding that the suits were decided by separate judgments (y). According to the Calcutta decisions, however, such consolidation was not permissible unless the suits, besides involving the same question for determination, were decided by the same judgment (z). The present rule gives effect to the Calcutta rulings. It need hardly be observed that suits that could be consolidated for the purposes of pecuniary valuation must be suits actually instituted and not merely suits in gremio futuri (a).

Inherent power to consolidate cases.—This rule provides for consolidation of cases "for the purposes of pecuniary valuation." The High Court of Patna has held that the High Court has inherent powers to permit consolidation of cases on ground other than those specified in this rule. Accordingly where two appeals to His Majesty in Council were in substance one, the two were ordered to be consolidated and tried together, the Court observing that "in the interest of justice and to save unnecessary expense the appeals ought to be consolidated (b).

5. [New.] In the event of any dispute arising between the parties as to the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit in the Court of first instance, or as to the amount or value of the subject-matter in dispute on appeal to His Majesty in Council, the Court to which a petition for a certificate is made under rule 2 may, if it thinks fit, refer such dispute for report to the Court of first instance, which last-mentioned Court shall proceed to determine such amount or value and shall return its report together with the evidence to the Court by which the reference was made.

Remission of dispute to Court of first instance.

Dispute as to value of subject-matter.—This rule is new. It gives legislative recognition to the practice followed under the Code of 1882 in cases where there was a dispute as to the value of the subject-matter of the suit. This practice is referred to in the undermentioned Calcutta case (c) where it was held that a plaintiff in a suit for damages cannot ensure an appeal to the Privy Council by merely placing his damages at a sufficiently high figure. A claims Rs. 10,000 as damages for an alleged defamation. The suit is dismissed on the ground that the libel was privileged, and the decision is affirmed in appeal. A applies for leave to appeal to the Privy Council. The mere fact that A claimed Rs. 10,000 as damages is not sufficient proof that the amount of the matter in dispute is Rs. 10,000. Hence if the other party disputes the correctness of the amount A must show that the amount of the matter in dispute is Rs. 10,000. When there is a contest as to the true value of the matter in dispute it has been the invariable practice—a practice sanctioned by the Judicial Committee—to ascertain by evidence and enquiry what the true value is. But where an inquiry has already been made at the trial of the suit by the Court of first instance as to the value of the subject-matter of the suit, and the finding as to the value has been acquiesced in by the applicant, the High Court may not direct any fresh inquiry under this rule (d). Where a reference is made under this rule to the Court of first instance, the inquiry should be held by that Court: the Court of first instance has no power to remit the investigation to some other officer (e).

Effect of refusal of certificate.

6. [S. 601.] Where such certificate is refused, the petition shall be dismissed.

Costs.—Where the petition is made to the High Court and it is dismissed with costs, the proper Court to execute the order is the lower Court (f).

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order made by any Court other than a High Court refusing the grant of a certificate under this rule [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (v)].

7. [S. 602.] (1) Where the certificate is granted, the applicant shall, within six months from the date of the decree complained of, or within six weeks from the date of the grant of the certificate, whichever is the later date,—

 - (2) papers which the parties agree to exclude;
 - (3) accounts, or portions of accounts, which the officer empowered by the Court for that purpose considers unnecessary, and which the parties have not specifically asked to be included ; and

(2) Where the applicant prefers to print in India the copy of the record, except as aforesaid, he shall also, within the time mentioned in sub-rule (1), deposit the amount required to defray the expense of printing such copy.

Date of the decree.—This means the date on which the decree is pronounced, not that on which it is signed (g).

Extension of time.—It has been held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council that the High Court may extend the time allowed for giving the security and making the deposit provided there are “ cogent reasons ” for doing so (h). According to the Madras High Court the “ cogent reasons ” must be such as would lead the Court to believe that the party was diligent in due time to be prepared to lodge the deposit within the limited period, and that he was prevented from doing so not owing to the absence and difficulty of getting funds, but owing to some circumstances accidental or otherwise over which he had no control or owing to mistake which the Court would consider not unreasonable or caused by negligence (i). On the other hand, it has been held by the Chief Court of the Punjab that poverty is a cogent reason for extending the time if the amount required is large and the applicant has deposited a substantial portion of the amount within the time originally allowed (j).

Security in case of consolidated appeal.—Where two or more appeals are consolidated for purposes of pecuniary valuation, the security required by this rule is the whole security which the appellants together have to furnish and not only a

O. 45, r. 13.

1. The words "admitting the appeal" which occurred in the first paragraph of the old section after the word "Court" have been omitted. Those words gave rise to a conflict of decisions on the question whether the Court had power under the old section to stay the execution of the decree appealed from after a petition had been presented for leave to appeal but before the appeal was admitted. It was held by the High Court of Bombay that the Court had the power (m). On other hand, it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that the Court had no such power, the decision being based on the ground that the words "the Court admitting the appeal" indicated that no stay could be granted until the appeal was admitted (n). The words "admitting the appeal" have been omitted to make it clear that the power conferred by this rule may be exercised at any time after the presenting of the petition, and even before the grant of a certificate for the admission of the appeal.

Another result of the omission of the words "admitting the appeal" after the word "Court" is to invest the High Court with power to stay execution, notwithstanding that an appeal has been admitted by special leave of His Majesty in Council (o). Under the Code of 1882 it was held that since the powers conferred by the corresponding s. 608 could only be exercised by the Court admitting the appeal, the High Court had no power to stay execution where the appeal was admitted by special leave of His Majesty in Council (p).

2. The words "by the appointment of a receiver or otherwise" at the end of cl. (d) are new.

"The Court."—The "Court" referred to in this rule and r. 14 is the High Court (q).

Stay of execution before grant of certificate.—See notes above, "Alterations in the rule," No. 1.

Stay of execution in view of an application for special leave to appeal.—The High Court has an inherent power to make an order for stay of execution in view of an application by the judgment-debtor to the Judicial Committee for special leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council (r).

Security after execution.—The Court has power to require security to be given under this rule even after the decree has been executed wholly or in part (s). It has also the power to stay further execution after the decree has been partially executed (t).

Stay of execution where appeal admitted by special leave.—See notes above "Alterations in the rule," No. 1, second paragraph.

Appointment of receiver where appeal admitted by special leave.—The High Court has power to appoint a receiver under cl. (d) notwithstanding that the appeal was admitted by special leave of His Majesty in Council (u).

Practice.—Applications of the character mentioned in this rule ought always to be made in the first instance, at any rate, to the Court in India, which has ample power to deal with the matter according to the circumstances of the peculiar case, and has knowledge of details which the Judicial Committee cannot possess on an interlocutory application (v). If the application is refused by the High Court, and the Judicial Committee is of opinion that the application ought to have been granted, it may grant a stay of execution. But more than this it will not do; for instance, it will not appoint a receiver of the property under attachment nor take the security referred to in cls. (b) and (c) of sub-rule (2). In such cases, the Judicial Committee will grant leave to the applicant to apply to the High Court with an intimation of its opinion. The High Court is bound to take notice of such order, it being an order of His Majesty the King in Council, and to govern itself accordingly (w).

Appeal.—No appeal lies under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent from an order refusing to stay execution pending appeal to the Privy Council (x).

(b) if the original security was furnished by the respondent, the Court shall, so far as may be practicable, stay the further execution of the decree, and restore the parties to the position in which they respectively were when the security which appears inadequate was furnished, or give such direction respecting the subject-matter of the appeal as it thinks fit.

(2) Such Court shall transmit the order of His Majesty in Council to the Court which passed the first decree appealed from, or to such other Court as His Majesty in Council by such order may direct, and shall (upon the application of either party) give such directions as may be required for the execution of the same; and the Court to which the said order is so transmitted shall execute it accordingly, in the manner and according to the provisions applicable to the execution of its original decrees.

(3) When any monies expressed to be payable in British currency are payable in India under such order, the amount so payable shall be estimated according to the rate of exchange for the time being fixed at the date of the making of the order by the Secretary of State for India in Council with the concurrence of the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury for the adjustment of financial transactions between the Imperial and the Indian Governments.

Alterations in the rule.—Paragraphs 3 and 4 of the old section which related to the enforcement of the liability of a surety for the costs of the respondents have been omitted in view of the general rule now laid down in s. 145.

Jurisdiction of Patna High Court.—The Patna High Court has no jurisdiction to execute an order of His Majesty in Council passed in an appeal from a decree of the Calcutta High Court on appeal from a subordinate Court in Behar. The application for execution of such an order should be made to the Calcutta High Court (y).

“Whoever desires to obtain execution.”—It may be that where a decree has been passed in favour of a number of persons jointly, an application under this rule by one or more of them would be sufficient to entitle all of them to apply for execution in the Court below. But it is not so where several persons are by a decree declared entitled to separate specific shares, say of an ijmali share, in which case each person obtains by the decree a right to a separate share. In such a case no single plaintiff is entitled to execute the decree on behalf of all the plaintiffs, from which it follows that an application under sub-r. (1) by some of the plaintiffs does not entitle all of them to apply under sub-r. (2) for execution to the Court to which the order of His Majesty in Council is sent for execution under that sub-rule (z).

O. 45, r. 15. Functions of High Court under this rule.—The act of the High Court in receiving and filing orders of His Majesty in Council under this rule is a purely ministerial function. The High Court, therefore, has no power, under this rule to discuss the effect of the order of His Majesty in Council on an application to file the order. If the order is impeached as erroneous, the proper course for the party aggrieved by the order is to apply to His Majesty in Council to make the necessary alteration or modification in the order (a).

“Execution.”—The word “execution” includes restitution as described in s. 144. A person, therefore, who desires to obtain execution, though it be by way of restitution, must apply in the first instance to the Court indicated by this rule (b).

Application for execution of order of His Majesty in Council by assignee of order.—Where an order of His Majesty in Council is transmitted by the High Court for execution under sub-r. (2) to the Court which passed the first decree appealed from, the latter Court is not in the position of a Court to which a decree is transferred for execution, and it is not therefore precluded from entertaining an application for execution of the order by an assignee of the order (c). See O. 21, r. 16, and notes thereto, “Application for execution by a transferee should be made to the Court which passed the decree,” p. 562 above.

Enforcement of liability of surety.—A obtains a decree against B in a High Court for possession of certain immoveable property. B appeals to the Privy Council, and C stands surety for A's costs of the appeal [r. 7, sub-r. 1, cl. (a)]. If the appeal is dismissed with costs, A may proceed against C for costs by an application for execution [s. 145].

Suppose now that in the case put above A applies for execution of the decree, and that possession of the property is delivered to him on D standing surety for re-delivery of the property to B, and for the payment of mesne profits in the event of B's appeal being successful [r. 13, sub-r. (2), cl. (b)]. Suppose further that the Privy Council allows B's appeal, and reverses the decree of the High Court. If A fails to re-deliver the property or to pay the mesne profits to B, B may proceed against D by an application for execution [s. 145] (d).

Restitution.—A obtains a decree against B for possession of certain immoveable property. Possession of the property is delivered to him in execution. The decree is then set aside in appeal to the Privy Council. Pending the appeal to the Privy Council the property is sold in execution of a decree obtained by C against A, and it is purchased by P. B is entitled on reversal of the decree by the Privy Council to restitution of the property as against P, the latter being a “representative” of A within the meaning of s. 47 (e). See notes to s. 144 under the head “Against whom restitution may be claimed,” p. 313 above.

Mesne profits.—Where a party is dispossessed of land in pursuance of a decree of the High Court, and the decree is reversed in appeal to the Privy Council, he is entitled not only to restoration of the land, but to mesne profits during the period of dispossession, though the order of His Majesty in Council may be silent as to such profits (f). See s. 144.

Rate of exchange.—The Courts have differed on the question whether the words “for the time being” refer to the rate of exchange at the date of the passing of the order or to that current when the amount is realised. The former view is held by the Calcutta High Court (g), the latter by the Allahabad High Court (h).

Interest on costs.—Where interest on costs is not allowed in the order of His Majesty in Council, such interest cannot be given by any Court in this country (i).

Letters Patent appeal.—An appeal lies under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent from an order of a single Judge of a High Court refusing to transmit for execution the order of His Majesty in Council as provided by sub-rule (2) of this rule (j).

Limitation.—An application for execution under this rule is governed by Act 183 of the Limitation Act, 1908 (k).

Dismissal of appeal for want of prosecution.—Where an appeal is preferred to the Privy Council from the decree of a High Court, but the appeal is dismissed for want of prosecution, the order of His Majesty in Council does not amount to a decree at all for purposes of limitation or for any other purpose. Such an order does not deal judicially with the matter of the suit, but merely recognizes authoritatively that the appellant had not complied with the conditions under which the appeal was open to him, and that therefore he is in the same position as if he had not appealed at all (l).

16. [S. 611.] The orders made by the Court which executes the order of His Majesty in Council¹, relating to such execution, shall be appealable in the same manner and subject to the same rules as the orders of such Court relating to the execution of its own decrees.

Appeal from order relating to execution.

O. 46, r. 1. statement of the facts of the case and the point on which doubt is entertained, and refer such statement with its own opinion on the point for the decision of the High Court.

Alterations in the rule.—

1. The words "is not subject to appeal" have been substituted for the word "final," as the expression "final decree" is now used in this Code in contradistinction to a "preliminary decree."
2. The words, "or the construction of a document, which construction may affect the merits," which occurred in the old section after the words "having the force of law," have been omitted, as they are sufficiently covered by the power to refer any question of law.

Hearing of a suit or appeal.—A reference can be made to the High Court under this rule only in a suit or an appeal in a suit, and not in every matter before the court in which a point arises on which the Court entertains reasonable doubt (m). Thus where a pleader was fined Rs. 25 by a Subordinate Judge for refusing to act on behalf of his client after receipt of retaining fee, and on appeal the District Judge referred the matter to the High Court under this rule, it was held that no reference could properly be made under this rule as there was no suit or appeal in a suit (n). Nor can any reference be made in a proceeding other than a suit or an appeal in a suit even by virtue of the provisions of s. 141 above (o). See note to s. 141, "The procedure provided in this Code" p. 309 above.

Decree not subject to appeal.—This rule does not authorize a reference to the High Court except in a suit or appeal in which the decree is not subject to appeal. Therefore no reference can be made to the High Court in a matter in which an appeal lies, for in appealable cases a remedy to correct possible error is provided by the appeal. It is only when a decree is not subject to appeal that a reference can be made under this rule (p). In Ramphul v. Durga (q), a Munsif, being of opinion that he had no jurisdiction to entertain a particular suit, returned the plaint to be presented to the proper Court. On appeal, the District Judge referred the matter to the High Court. The High Court held that the order of the Munsif returning the plaint being an appealable order [O. 43, r. 1, cl. (a)], the High Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the reference. On the same ground it is held that there could be no reference under this rule in a matter of probate, and that an order made by a District Judge on an application for probate being appealable, it cannot be referred for the opinion of the High Court under this rule though, when referred the High Court may deal with the case as a Court of concurrent jurisdiction under s. 264 of the Indian Succession Act (r).

Jurisdiction.—A Judge who has no jurisdiction to hear a suit or an appeal has no jurisdiction to make a reference before or at the hearing of such suit or appeal (a).

Reasonable doubt.—A reference under this rule can only be made when a Judge entertains a reasonable doubt on a question of law or usage having the force of law. A Judge cannot ordinarily entertain a reasonable doubt on a point clearly decided

3. [S. 619.] The High Court, after hearing the parties if they appear and desire to be heard, shall decide the point so referred, and shall transmit a copy of its judgment, under the signature of the Registrar, to the Court by which the reference was made ; and such Court shall, on the receipt thereof, proceed to dispose of the case in conformity with the decision of the High Court.

Judgment of High Court to be transmitted, and case disposed of accordingly.

"Such Court shall proceed to dispose of the case in conformity with the decision of the High Court."—In Yule & Co. v. Mahomed Hossein (u) the Calcutta Small Cause Court passed a decree for the plaintiffs contingent on the opinion of the High Court. The High Court held that upon the case presented by the plaintiffs they could not recover. The judgment of the High Court was transmitted to the Small Cause Court, and the Small Cause Court Judge, instead of entering judgment for the defendants, allowed the suit to be withdrawn by the plaintiffs with liberty to them to bring a fresh suit [O. 23, r. 1]. Upon a petition for revision it was held by the High Court that the Small Cause Court was bound on receipt of the decision of the High Court 'to dispose of the case in conformity with that decision,' and to enter judgment for the defendants, and that the order allowing the plaintiffs to withdraw from the suit was illegal.

6. [S. 646A.] (1) Where at any time before judgment a Court in which a suit has been instituted doubts whether the suit is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes or is not so cognizable, it may submit the record to the High Court with a statement of its reasons for the doubt as to the nature of the suit.

Power to refer to High Court questions as to jurisdiction in small causes.

(2) On receiving the record and statement, the High Court may order the Court either to proceed with the suit or to return the plaint for presentation to such other Court as it may in its order declare to be competent to take cognizance of the suit.

At any time before judgment.—A reference under this rule can only be made before judgment (v).

7. [S. 646-B] (1) Where it appears to a District Court that a Court subordinate thereto has, by reason of erroneously holding a suit to be cognizable by a Court of Small Causes or not to be so cognizable, failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law, or exercised a jurisdiction not so vested, the District Court may, and if required by a party shall, submit the record to the High Court with a statement of its reasons for considering the opinion of the subordinate Court with respect to the nature of the suit to be erroneous.

Power to District Court to submit for revision proceedings had under mistake as to jurisdiction in small causes.

(2) On receiving the record and statement the High Court may make such order in the case as it thinks fit.

(3) With respect to any proceedings subsequent to decree in any case submitted to the High Court under this rule the High Court may make such order as in the circumstance appears to it to be just and proper.

(4) A Court subordinate to a District Court shall comply with any requisition which the District Court may make for any record or information for the purposes of this rule.

Provincial Small Cause Courts' Act 9 of 1887, sec. 16.—Section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts' Act runs as follows: "Save as expressly provided by this Act or by any other enactment for the time being in force, a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes shall not be tried by any other Court having jurisdiction within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes by which the suit is triable."

"If required by a party shall."—It has been held by the High Courts O. 46, r. 7. of Madras and Calcutta that a District Court is bound to make a reference under this rule if one of the parties requires it to do so (w). On the other hand, it has been held by the Allahabad High Court that the word "shall" is not mandatory, but merely directory, and that a District Court should not make a reference under this rule, unless it is satisfied that a Court subordinate thereto has erroneously held upon the point of Jurisdiction in regard to the particular suit before it (x).

Statement of reasons.—Where a reference is made to the High Court under this rule, the District Court which makes the reference should state its reasons for considering the opinion of the subordinate Court with respect to the nature of the suit to be erroneous (y).

Powers of High Court under this rule.—There is a conflict of decisions as to the powers of the High Court under this rule as will be seen from the cases considered below :—

Illustration.

A suit cognizable by a Small Cause Court is tried by a District Munsif on the original side without objection to his jurisdiction, and a decree is passed for the plaintiff. The defendant appeals to the District Court, making no reference to the question of jurisdiction in his grounds of appeal. The District Court reverses the decree passed by the Munsif. The plaintiff applies to the High Court under s. 115 for a revision of the decision of the District Court. It is clear that the suit being one of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, the District Munsif had no jurisdiction to entertain it under his ordinary jurisdiction having regard to the provisions of section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts' Act set forth above. Nor had the District Court jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from the decree in such a suit. What order should the High Court make, assuming, of course, that the suit was one of a nature cognisable by a Small Cause Court and which of the following courses should it adopt ?—

- (1) Should the High Court set aside the decrees of both the Courts below and return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court ?
- (2) Or has it power to consider the case on the merits and to decline to interfere in the matter even though in strict law the suit should have been tried under a different procedure ?
- (3) Or should it not set aside at least the decree of the District Court as having been made without jurisdiction, and then dispose of the case on its merits leaving the decree passed by the Munsif to stand or not as may in its discretion appear best ?

The first course was adopted by White, C.J., in a Madras case where the learned Judge observed that there was no alternative but to adopt that course (z).

The second course was adopted by the High Court of Calcutta in the undermentioned cases (a), where the Court declined to interfere on the ground that they had a complete discretion in the matter.

 wari v. Jagat* (1914) 19 C. W. N. 900.

O. 46, r. 7. The third course was adopted in a recent case by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court (b). The Full Bench held, dissenting from the Calcutta decision cited above, and overruling an earlier Madras case (c) in which the Calcutta decision was followed, that the decree of the District Judge should be set aside as having been passed without jurisdiction. That decree was accordingly set aside, and the decree passed by the Munsif was restored. The same course was adopted in a Bombay case (d).

As regards the Allahabad High Court, it declined to interfere in one case on the ground that the present rule did not apply unless there was an erroneous holding as to jurisdiction, and that there could be no "holding" at all if no objection to jurisdiction was taken by either party in the Courts below (e). In a later case, it followed the Full Bench ruling of the Madras Court, and set aside the decree of the District Court and restored the decree passed by the Munsif (f).

ORDER XLVII.

O. 47, r. 1. Application for review of judgment.

1. [s. 623.] (1) Any person considering himself aggrieved—

- (a) by a decree or order from which an appeal is allowed, but from which no appeal has been preferred,
 (b) by a decree or order from which no appeal is allowed, or
 (c) by a decision on a reference from a Court of Small Causes, and who, from the discovery of new and important matter or evidence which, after the exercise of due diligence was not within his knowledge or could not be produced by him at the time when the decree was passed or order made, or on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record, or for any other sufficient reason, desires to obtain a review of the decree passed or order made against him, may apply for a review of judgment to the Court which passed the decree or made the order.

(2) A party who is not appealing from a decree or order may apply for a review of judgment notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal by some other party except where the ground of such appeal is common to the applicant and the appellants, or when, being respondent, he can present to the appellate Court the case on which he applies for the review.

(b) Kollipara v. Kankipati (1908) 33 Mad. 323.
 (c) Parameswaram v. Vishnu (1898) 27 Mad. 478.

(d) Shankarbhai v. Soomabhai (1900) 25 Bom. 417.
 (e) Ram Lal v. Kabul Singh (1908) 25 All. 185.
 (f) Abdul Majid v. Bedyadhar (1916) 39 All. 101.

In what cases a party may apply for a review.—A party aggrieved by a O. 47, r. 1 decree or a decision specified in clause (a), (b) or (c) of sub-rule (1) [see s. 114] may apply for a review in any of the following cases :—

- I on the ground of the discovery of new and important matter or evidence which, after the exercise of due diligence, was not within the knowledge of the party or could not be produced by him at the time when the decree was passed or order made; or
- II on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record; or
- III for any other sufficient reason.

Order on application.—Where a party aggrieved by a decree applies for a review, the application may either be granted or rejected (r. 4 below).

If the application is rejected the case ends there, and the parties are relegated to the old decree. The order rejecting the application is final, and no appeal lies therefrom (r. 7), but the party aggrieved may appeal from the old decree.

If the application is admitted, the case is re-heard, and it may result in a repetition of the decree or in some variation of it. In either case, the whole matter having been re-opened, there is a fresh decree (g).

1. Discovery of new and important matter or evidence.—When a review is sought on the ground of the discovery of new evidence, the evidence must be (1) relevant and (2) of such a character that if it had been given in the suit it might possibly have altered the judgment (h). As stated by Lord Loreburn, L.C., in Brown v. Dean (i), “it [new evidence] must at least be such as is presumably to be believed, and if believed would be conclusive.” It is not only the discovery of new and important evidence that entitles a party to apply for a review, but the discovery of any new and important matter which was not within the knowledge of the party when the decree was made. A sues B to recover a sum of money alleged to be due under a certain agreement, and obtained a decree. B appealed to the Privy Council. Pending the appeal A brought another suit against B to recover another sum of money alleged to have become due under the same agreement, and obtained a decree on the strength of the former decree. Their Lordships of the Privy Council reversed the first decree. B then applied for a review of the second decree, and the application was allowed on the ground that in the circumstances of the case the Privy Council decision was “new and important matter” on which to apply for a review of the second decree (j). This decision stands on the special facts of the case. In Amrit Lal v. Madho Das (k), it was held that where a decree is based upon a decision of a Divisional Bench of the High Court, and that decision is subsequently overruled by the Full Bench, the reversal is no ground for a review of the decree. Nor is the production of a new ruling or authority, which if brought to the notice of the Judge at the first hearing might have altered the judgment, “new and important matter” within the meaning of this rule (l).

It is not to be supposed that the discovery of new evidence is by itself sufficient to entitle a party to a review of judgment. The provision relating to review contemplates grounds which would alter or cancel the decree. Thus if a suit is dismissed on two grounds, namely, (1) that no notice of suit was given, and (2) that the plaintiff was illegitimate, (g) Vadial v. Fulchand (1906) 30 Bom. 56.

 (l) Ellen v. Basheer (1876) 1 Cal. 184; Abdul Sadiq v. Abdul Aziz (1899) 21 All. 152, 158.

O. 47, r. 1. and the plaintiff applies for a review on the ground of discovery of new evidence on the question of legitimacy, it is a good ground for rejecting the application that even if the Court held on the reception of new evidence that the plaintiff was legitimate, it would not lead to the modification or setting aside of the original decree, the absence of notice being fatal to the suit (m).

II. Mistake or error apparent on the face of the record. A review may be granted, whether on any ground urged at the original hearing of the suit or not whenever the Court considers that it is necessary to correct an evident error or omission (n). Thus a review was granted where an error on a point of law was apparent on the face of the judgment (o). Similarly a review was granted when the provisions of the second paragraph of s. 575 [now s. 98, sub-s. (2)] were wrongly applied (p). See s. 152.

III. "For any other sufficient reason."—These words mean that the reason must be one sufficient to the Court to which the application for review is made, and they cannot be held to be limited to the discovery of new and important matter or evidence, or the occurring of a mistake or error apparent on the record (q). Thus in Ghansham v. Lal Singh (r), a reference to the Full Bench was disposed of in the absence of the respondent. The respondent proved that his absence at the hearing was due to the fact that the notice of reference was not served upon him. It was held that this constituted a "sufficient reason" for granting a review. In Sulleman v. The New Oriental Bank Corporation, Ltd. (s), a review was granted on the ground that the question that had cropped up at the hearing was one of great general commercial importance. In Gopal v. Solomon (t), all the parties, counsel on both sides, and the Judge, were at the trial of the suit under a misapprehension as to the contents of a document. It was held that this was a "sufficient reason" for granting a review. In Patna case, where an auction-purchaser applied for an order for delivery of possession and the order was made, it was held that it was sufficient ground for reviewing the order that the application was on the face of it barred by limitation (u). But a party who not only had an opportunity of raising a question but who did raise it and on argument abandoned it, cannot under ordinary circumstances be allowed to agitate that question in review (v). Nor is it a sufficient reason for granting a review that if another opportunity was given to the applicant, he would satisfy the Court that its previous order was wrong (w).

The ground of review must be something which existed at the date of the decree and the rule does not authorize the review of a decree which was right when it was made, on the ground of the happening of some subsequent event (x).

Review granted on particular ground.—Where a review is granted on a particular ground, it is in the discretion of the Court to re-hear the whole case or only the particular point on which the review has been granted (y).

Where an appeal dismissed summarily under O. 41, r. 11, is admitted on an application for review, the appeal is not restricted to the single ground which was made the basis of the application for review (z).

"Order."—An order under O. 33, r. 7, refusing leave to sue as a pauper, is open O. 47, r. 1. to review under this rule (a). And so is an order rejecting an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council (b). But an order under s. 39 (h) of the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, is not open to review (c).

Where an appeal has been preferred before application for review.—After an appeal has been preferred from a decree, no application can be made for a review of that decree. This clearly appears from cl. (a) of sub-r. (1). An appeal is not the less "preferred" within the meaning of this rule though it may be dismissed summarily under O. 41, r. 11. Hence a party against whom a decree has been passed is precluded, after dismissal of his appeal under O. 41, r. 11, from applying for a review (d). But if the appeal is withdrawn, it is as though no appeal had been "preferred," and hence it is open to the party to apply for a review (e). See notes to O. 41, r. 27, under the head "Or for any other substantial cause."

Filing of appeal pending application for review.—Where an application for review has been presented by a party to the suit, and an appeal is afterwards preferred from the same decree, whether by the same party or by the other party to the suit, the Court to which the application for review is made is not thereby deprived of jurisdiction to entertain the application (f). But that power exists so long as the appeal is not heard, because once the appeal is heard, the decree on appeal is the final decree in the case, and the application for review of judgment of the Court of first instance can no longer be proceeded with (g). On the other hand, if the application for review is granted, and a new decree is passed, the appeal cannot be heard and it must be dismissed, for the decree appealed from is superseded by the new decree (h).

No review allowed on a question of fact after decision of second appeal.—The High Court cannot in second appeal allow an application for a review of judgment on the ground of discovery of new evidence, after the appeal is disposed of by that Court. The reason is that the High Court is bound in second appeal by the findings of fact of the lower appellate Court. But if the application is made before the disposal of the appeal, it may be a ground for allowing the appellant to withdraw the appeal to enable him to apply to the lower appellate Court for a review of its judgment on the ground of discovery of new evidence (i).

Application to set aside order made by another judge.—One Judge of a High Court cannot set aside an order made by another Judge of that Court even though the order be wrong. The remedy lies in review on the grounds mentioned in this rule (j).

Review of judgment passed in appeal preferred under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent.—It is competent to the High Court to review judgments passed in appeals preferred under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. The words "decree or order" include a "judgment" (k).

O. 47,
rr. 2, 3.

2. [S. 624.] An application for review of a decree or order of a Court, not being a High Court, upon some ground other than the discovery of such new and important matter or evidence as is referred to in rule 1 or the existence of a clerical or arithmetical mistake or error apparent on the face of the decree, shall be made only to the judge who passed the decree or made the order sought to be reviewed; but any such application may, if the Judge who passed the decree or made the order has ordered notice to issue under rule 4, sub-rule (2), proviso (a), be disposed of by his successor.

To whom applications for review may be made.

To whom application for review may be made.—This is s. 624 recast with proviso (c) to s. 628 superadded to it. The alteration of language does not involve any alteration of law.

Rule 1, sub-r. (1), provides that the application for review of a decree or order should be made to the Court which passed the decree or order sought to be reviewed. Reading rule 1 with the present rule, we have the following result :—

I. Where a decree is passed by a High Court Judge, the application for review of the decree may be made to that Judge or to his successor in office, whatever be the ground on which the review is sought.

II. (1) Where a decree is passed by a Judge other than a High Court Judge, the application for review of the decree may be made to the Judge who delivered the judgment or to his successor in office, provided the review is sought on the ground of—

- (a) the discovery of new and important matter or evidence, or
- (b) some clerical or arithmetical mistake or error apparent on the face of the decree.

(2) Where a decree is passed by a Judge other than a High Court Judge, and the review is sought, not upon the grounds mentioned above, but upon other grounds, the application shall be made to the very Judge who passed the decree; it cannot be made to his successor in office (i). Thus if a review is sought of a decree passed by a Judge other than a High Court Judge on the ground of a supposed error of judgment (m), or if a review is sought of an order made by such a Judge on the ground that the order was made in the absence of the applicant and without giving him notice of the hearing (n), the application for review shall be made only to the Judge who passed the decree or made the order. Such an application, however, may be disposed of by the successor of the Judge who passed the decree, provided that the Judge who passed the decree has ordered notice to issue under rule 4, sub-rule (2), proviso (a). It is not necessary that the application should also be disposed of by the Judge who passed the decree (o).

Rule 5 provides for the hearing of applications for review.

3. [S. 625.] The provisions as to the form of preferring appeals shall apply, mutatis mutandis to applications for review.

Form of applications for review.

4. [S. 626.] (1) Where it appears to the Court that O. 47, r. 4. there is not sufficient ground for a review, it shall reject the application.

Application where rejected.

- (2) Where the Court is of opinion that the application for review should be granted, it shall grant the same :

Application where granted.

Provided that—

- (a) no such application shall be granted without previous notice to the opposite party, to enable him to appear and be heard in support of the decree or order, a review of which is applied for : and
- (b) no such application shall be granted on the ground of discovery of new matter or evidence which the applicant alleges was not within his knowledge, or could not be adduced by him when the decree or order was passed or made, without strict proof of such allegation.

Alterations in the rule.—The words “and the Judge shall record with his order his reasons for such opinion,” which occurred in the old section after the words “it shall grant the same” in sub-r. (2), have been omitted. Those words were construed by the Privy Council as being no more than a direction to the Judge how to act when he had decided to grant the application (p).

“No such application shall be granted without previous notice to the opposite party.”—The expression “opposite party” means the party interested to support the order sought to be vacated or modified upon the application for review. Where an appeal is summarily dismissed under O. 41, r. 11, the order of dismissal may be set aside on an ex parte application for review without notice to the respondent. The respondent in such a case cannot be said to be “the opposite party” within the meaning of cl. (a) of this rule (q).

Form.—As to form of notice required by sub-r. 2 (a) see App. G., form No. 14.

Second application for review.—See notes under the same head to r. 7 below.

Appeal.—It is provided in general terms by O. 43, r. 1, cl. (w), that an appeal lies from an order under this rule granting an application for review. Cl. (w), however, is to be read with and subject to rule 7 below (r). See notes to r. 7, under the head “Appeal.”

5. [S. 627.] Where the Judge or Judges, or any one of the Judges, who passed the decree or made the order, a review of which is applied for, continues or continue attached to the Court at the time when the application for a review is presented, and is not or are not precluded by absence or other cause for a period of six months next after the application from considering the decree or order to which the application refers, such Judge or Judges or any of them shall hear the application, and no other Judge or Judges of the Court shall hear the same.

more Judges.

6. [S. 628.] (1) Where the application for a review is heard by more than one Judge and the Court is equally divided, the application shall be rejected.

Application where rejected.

(2) Where there is a majority, the decision shall be according to the opinion of the majority.

7. [S. 629.] (1) An order of the Court rejecting the application shall not be appealable; but an order granting an application may be objected to on the ground that the application was—

Order of rejection not appealable. Objections to order granting application.

- (a) in contravention of the provisions of rule 2,
- (b) in contravention of the provisions of rule 4, or
- (c) after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed therefor and without sufficient cause.

Such objection may be taken at once by an appeal from the order granting the application or in any appeal from the final decree or order passed or made in the suit.

(2) Where the application has been rejected in consequence of the failure of the applicant to appear, he may apply for an order to have the rejected application restored to the file, and, where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when such application was called on for hearing, the Court shall order it to be restored to the file upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for hearing the same.

(3) No order shall be made under sub-rule (2) unless O. 47, r. 7. notice of the application has been served on the opposite party.

Alterations in the rule :—

1. The words "shall not be appealable" have been substituted for the word "final." This is merely a verbal alteration.
2. The words "the Court shall order it to be restored" in sub-r. (2) have been substituted for the words "the Court may order it to be restored."
3. The last paragraph of the old section has been transferred to r. 9.

Appeal :—

(i) Order "rejecting" application for review.—No appeal lies under the Code from an order rejecting an application for review. Nor does an appeal lie from such an order under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, for the said clause is controlled by the express provisions of this rule which says that such an order "shall not be appealable," and even if it is not so controlled, an order rejecting an application for review is not a "judgment" within the meaning of that clause (s). Nor is the order open to revision under s. 115 of the Code for even if it is wrong, it is no more than an erroneous exercise of discretion (t). But where there is no exercise of discretion at all, as where the Court rejects the application, not after considering whether there are sufficient grounds for a review [r. 4, sub-r 1], but on the erroneous view that it has no jurisdiction to entertain the application, the order is open to revision, for it is a case of failure to exercise a jurisdiction vested in the Court by law (u).

(ii) Order "granting" application for review.—An appeal lies from an order admitting an application for review; O. 43, r. 1, cl. (w). It is clear, however, from sub-r. (1) that an appeal from such an order can lie only in the three cases mentioned therein, for otherwise the provisions of sub-r. (1), so far as they relate to appeal, would be quite superfluous (v). In cases other than those specified in the rule, no appeal can lie either under this rule or under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent (w). Thus if an appeal is preferred from an order admitting an application for review on the ground that the alleged "sufficient reason" for which the application was admitted did not constitute "sufficient reason" within the meaning of r. 1 of this Order, the appeal should not be entertained (x). If the appeal is entertained, the order of the appellate Court may be set aside in revision under s. 115 on the ground of "material irregularity" (y).

(iii) Second appeal from order passed in appeal under this rule.—No second appeal lies from an order passed in appeal from an order granting an application for review. This is now sufficiently clear from the provisions of O. 43, r. 1, cl. (w), read with s. 104, sub-s. (2). A applies for a review, and the application is granted. B appeals from the order granting the application. Whether the appellate Court confirms or sets aside the order of the lower Court, no second appeal lies to the High Court from the order of the appellate Court (z).

O. 47,
rr. 7-8.

Sub-rule (1), cl. (b): application in contravention of the provision of rule (4).—It is provided by r. 4 above that no application for review should be granted on the ground of discovery of new matter without strict proof of the allegation as to such discovery. The words “strict proof” mean proof according to the formalities of law. Where an order therefore is made granting a review on proof of discovery of new matter according to the formalities of law, no appeal lies from the order on the ground that the evidence adduced in proof of the allegation as to discovery of new matter was not sufficient to prove the allegation. The words “strict proof” do not refer to sufficiency of proof in securing the conviction of the judicial mind on the fact in dispute (a).

Grounds of objection in appeal.—An order granting an application for review can only be objected to upon the three grounds specified in the rule and no other, whether the objection is taken by an appeal from the order (b) or in an appeal from the final decree passed in the suit (c).

Second application for review.—Though no appeal lies from an order rejecting an application for review, it does not preclude a second application for review on grounds different from those taken in the first application (d).

Where application for review is time-barred.—The period for an application for review of judgment by a Provincial Court of Small Causes is 15 days from the date of the decree, by the High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction 20 days, and by other Courts 90 days [Limitation Act, 1908, arts. 161, 162, 173]. But the Court may admit the application after the period of limitation, if the applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application, within the prescribed period [Limitation Act, 1908, s. 5]. Where a second application for review is made after the period of limitation, the mere fact that the second application was not made because the first was pending does not constitute “sufficient cause” for admitting the second (e). If an application for review is admitted after the period of limitation on the ground that the applicant has shown sufficient cause, the order granting the application may be appealed from as provided by cl. (c) of sub-r. (1), and the order may be set aside in appeal if the appellate Court holds that there was not sufficient cause for admitting the application after the period of limitation (f).

Review granted without jurisdiction.—If a review is granted in a case where the Court has no jurisdiction to grant it, it is not clear whether an appeal lies from the order granting the review. But the order being one made without jurisdiction, it comes within the purview of s. 115, and is therefore open to revision (g).

8. [s. 630.] When an application for review is granted, a note thereof shall be made in the register and the Court may at once re-hear the case or make such order in regard to the rehearing as it thinks fit.

THE SECOND SCHEDULE.

ARBITRATION.

Arbitration in Suits.

1. [S. 506.] (1) Where in any suit all the parties ~~interested~~ agree that any matter in difference between them shall be referred to arbitration, they may, at any time before judgment is pronounced, apply to the Court for an order of reference.

Parties to suit may apply or order of reference.

(2) Every such application shall be in writing and shall state the matter sought to be referred.

Alterations in the rule:—

1. The word "interested" in clause (1) has been added after the word "parties".
See notes below under the head "All the parties interested must join in the application."
2. The words "in person, or by their respective pleaders specially authorized in writing in this behalf," which occurred in the old section after the word "apply" and before the words "to the Court," have been omitted.

Scope of the Schedule.—The present Schedule deals with arbitration under three heads (a):—

I. Where a suit has been instituted and all the parties interested agree to refer to arbitration any matter in difference between them in the suit. In that case all proceedings from first to last are under the supervision of the Court and they are governed by the provisions of paras. 1 to 16 of this Schedule. The first step is to apply to the Court for an order of reference under para. 1. If all the parties interested have joined in the application, an order of reference will be made under para. 3.

II. Where parties without having recourse to litigation agree to refer their differences to arbitration and it is desired that the agreement of reference should have the sanction of the Court. In that case the parties to the agreement or any of them may apply to the Court under para. 17 to have the agreement filed in Court and to make an order of reference thereon. If an order of reference is made, all further proceedings will be under the supervision of the Court, and they will be governed by the provisions of paras. 3 to 16 so far as they are consistent with the agreement (para. 19). See paras. 17 to 19.

III. Where the agreement of reference is made and the arbitration itself takes place without the intervention of the Court and the assistance of the Court is only sought in order to give effect to the award. In that case any person interested in the award may apply to the Court under para. 20 to have the award filed in Court. See paras. 20-21.

Arbitration.

All the parties interested must join in the application.—In order to give jurisdiction to the Court to make an order of reference under this and para. 3, it is necessary that all the parties interested must apply to the Court (b). If all the parties interested do not apply, and an order of reference is made, the order is illegal, and if an award is made on such reference, the award also is illegal (c). Thus where in a suit for partnership accounts brought by A against B and C, A and B alone applied to the Court to refer the matters in dispute to arbitration, and an order of reference was made, it was held, on an objection raised by B to the validity of the award, that C not having joined in the application, the order of reference as well as the award made in pursuance thereof were illegal (d).

Sch. II,

The word "interested" is new. It has been added to give effect to a recent Allahabad decision (e). It refers to the succeeding words "any matter in difference between them." A party to a suit who is not interested in a matter in difference between the other parties to the suit need not join in an application under this paragraph for an order of reference. A sues B and C, praying as against B for a declaration of his title to certain property and as against C for possession of the property. A and B alone apply to the Court to refer to arbitration the question as to the ownership of the property. The Court has jurisdiction to make an order of reference, though C has not joined in the application, for the question of ownership is not in issue between A and C. But C not being a party to the reference, the award is not binding upon him, though it is binding as between A and B (f).

It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that a defendant who does not put in an appearance and does not contest the suit is not a "party" within the meaning of this paragraph. The mere fact, therefore, that such a defendant has not joined in the application for an order of reference will not invalidate an award (g). On the other hand, it has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta (h) and Madras (i), that the mere fact that the defendant has not put in an appearance and does not contest the suit is no ground for holding that he is not a party "interested" within the meaning of this paragraph. The latter view, it is submitted, is correct. A person, however, who is not a necessary party to a suit is not a party "interested" within the meaning of this para. (j). See O. 1, r. 10 (2).

"Apply."—This section requires that all the parties interested should not only agree to a reference, but that they should all apply to the Court for an order of reference. Therefore, if one of the parties interested agrees to a reference, but he changes his mind, subsequently and does not join in the application, the application for an order of reference should be refused (k).

Application shall be in writing.—The provision requiring the application to be in writing is directory only, and not imperative; hence an award is not invalid merely because the application for the order of reference was not made in writing (l). In

Sch. II, para. 1. a recent case before the Judicial Committee where the agreement was in writing, but it was not signed by one of the parties, it was held that para. 1 of this Schedule did not require that the writing should of necessity be signed (m). For form of application for an order of reference see the Appendix to this Schedule, form No. 1.

"Court."—Section 107 of the Code provides that an appellate Court shall have the same powers as a Court of original jurisdiction. It follows therefore that an appellate Court can act under this paragraph, and refer matters in dispute in the appeal to arbitration if all the parties interested agree to a reference (n). But a Court to which certain issues have been referred for trial under O. 41, r. 25, cannot act under this paragraph, as the duty of such Court is to try the issues as directed by the appellate Court and to return to the appellate Court its findings thereon together with the evidence (o). Similarly a Court dealing with petitions under the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1907, has no power to refer the proceedings to arbitrators to decide whether the petitioner should or should not be declared an insolvent (p).

Revocation of arbitrator's authority.—When a matter is referred to arbitration by an agreement between the parties without the intervention of a Court of Justice, the agreement to refer to arbitration cannot be revoked by any party without good cause and a mere arbitrary revocation will not be permitted by the Court (q). Where a claimant did not proceed with the reference for a period of nine months without any just cause, it was held that it amounted to a good cause sufficient to entitle the other party to revoke the submission (r). Similarly if the arbitrator is indebted to one of the parties at the time of the reference or becomes so indebted after the reference, and this fact is not disclosed to the other party, the non-disclosure is a sufficient cause for revoking the submission upon discovery of the fact (s).

But when a matter is referred to arbitration by an order of the Court, the Court alone can revoke the authority of the arbitrator, and that too in the cases specified in para. 5, 8 and 15. The Court has no power to revoke the authority of an arbitrator in any other case. Thus where after an order of reference was made under para. 3, the defendant applied to the Court for an order to revoke the authority of the arbitrator and to appoint a new arbitrator in his place on the ground that he had come to know of certain facts which showed that the arbitrator was not worthy of the confidence reposed in him, it was held that the Court had no power to make the order, as the case did not come either under para. 5, 8 or 15. It was further held that the objection raised by the defendant could only be considered after the award was made and filed in Court, and that too to the extent permitted by para. 15 (t). Note the words "or being otherwise invalid" in para. 15, cl. (c).

Where a party dies after application but before order of reference.—

The death of a party to an application made under this rule for a reference to arbitration before the order of reference is made does not operate as a revocation of the authority of the proposed arbitrator; therefore, if the right to sue survives, it is competent to the Court to make an order of reference after substitution of the representative of the deceased party (u).

Arbitration.

Withdrawal of suit after reference to arbitration.—See notes to O. 23, Sch. 11,
r. 1, under the head “Arbitration,” p. 681 above. paras. 1-3

Form.—For form of application for an order of reference see the Appendix to this schedule, form no. 1.

2. [S. 507, 1st para.] The arbitrator shall be appointed in such manner as may be agreed upon between the parties.

Appointment of arbitrator.

3. [S. 508.] (1) The Court shall, by order, refer to the arbitrator the matter in difference which he is required to determine, and shall fix such time as it thinks reasonable for the making of the award, and shall specify such time in the order.

Order of reference.

(2) Where a matter is referred to arbitration, the Court shall not, save in the manner and to the extent provided in this Schedule, deal with such matter in the same suit.

The word “making” has been substituted for the word “delivery.” In fact the word “delivery” was construed as meaning “making.” See notes below under the head “Making of award.”

Fixing of time for the making of award.—The present paragraph provides that the Court shall fix a reasonable time for the making of the award and specify such time in the order of reference. Paragraph 8 enables the Court from time to time to enlarge the period for the making of the award. Paragraph 15 provides that an award made after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court may be set aside by the Court. The provision contained in this paragraph requiring the Court to fix a reasonable time for the making of the award is not merely directory, but imperative. Hence this provision should be strictly followed. At the same time it has been held that if no time is fixed for delivery of the award in the order of reference, but the Court subsequently makes an order for enlarging the time (para. 8), and fixes in that order the time within which the award should be made, the omission to fix the time in the order of reference is not fatal to the award (v). See para. 15, cl. (1), sub-cl. (c) and notes thereto.

Making of award.—An award is said to be “made” when it is completed and signed by the arbitrators. Hence it is sufficient if the award is made, that is, completed and signed by the arbitrators, within the period limited under this paragraph; it is not necessary to the “making” of the award that it should actually reach the hands of the Court within such period. The validity of the award depends upon the making of it within the period allowed, and it is immaterial on what date it is actually delivered to the Court. Thus where the time fixed by the Court for the delivery of an award in a suit pending before it was 16th April, 1900, and the award was completed and signed on the 16th April, but did not reach the hands of the Court until the 17th of April, it was held that the award was within time (w).

Arbitration.

Sch. II, Clause (2).—Where a matter is referred to arbitration, the Court should not deal with it in the same suit except in the manner provided in this Schedule. Hence paras. 3,4 the Court has no power to grant permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit, for there is no paragraph in this Schedule corresponding to O. 23, r. 1 (x). Nor can the Court revoke the authority of the arbitrator and appoint a new arbitrator except in the cases specified in paragraph 5 (y). Nor is it open to the Court to hear the suit on the merits, unless the arbitration has been superseded under para. 5, 8 or 15 (z). Similarly, the Court has no power to confirm an order passed by the arbitrators making payments of their fees a condition precedent to the hearing of the reference, there being no paragraph in this Schedule empowering the Court to make an order in that behalf (a). On the same principle where an award is once set aside, on the ground, e.g., that one of the parties to the reference had died before the termination of the arbitration proceedings, the Court has no power to send back the case to the arbitrators for decision (b).

Form.—For form of order of reference see form no. 2 to the Appendix to this Schedule.

4. [S. 509.] (1) Where the reference is to two or more arbitrators, provision shall be made in the order for a difference of opinion among the arbitrators—

Where reference is to two or more, order to provide for difference of opinion.

- (a) by the appointment of an umpire ; or
- (b) by declaring that, if the majority of the arbitrators agree, the decision of the majority shall prevail ; or
- (c) by empowering the arbitrators to appoint an umpire ; or
- (d) otherwise as may be agreed between the parties or, if they cannot agree, as the Court may determine.

(2) Where an umpire is appointed, the Court shall fix such time as it thinks reasonable for the making of his award in case he is required to act.

Decision of majority.—Where the order of reference did not provide that the decision of the majority of arbitrators should prevail, and two of the five arbitrators refused to act, it was held that an award by the remaining three who constituted the majority was not valid (c).

Empowering arbitrators to appoint an umpire.—The arbitrators have no power to appoint an umpire, unless they are authorized in that behalf (d).

Arbitration.

Delegation of duty by arbitrator.—An arbitrator cannot delegate his duties to a third person (e). But he may delegate to a third person the performance of acts of a ministerial character. Thus where an arbitrator employed his son to take some measurements instead of taking them himself, it was held that the award was not by that reason invalid (f). Sch. II, paras. 4, 5.

Power of Court to appoint arbitrator in certain cases.

5. [Ss. 507 (2), 510, 511.] (1) In any of the following cases, namely :—

- (a) where the parties cannot agree within a reasonable time with respect to the appointment of an arbitrator, or the person appointed refuses to accept the office of arbitrator, or
- (b) where an arbitrator or umpire—
 - (i) dies, or
 - (ii) refuses or neglects to act or becomes incapable of acting, or
 - (iii) leaves British India in circumstances showing that he will probably not return at an early date, or
- (c) where the arbitrators are empowered by the order of reference to appoint an umpire and fail to do so, any party may serve the other party or the arbitrators, as the case may be, with a written notice to appoint an arbitrator or umpire.

(2) If, within seven clear days after such notice has been served or such further time as the Court may in each case allow, no arbitrator or no umpire is appointed, as the case may be, the Court may, on application by the party who gave the notice, and after giving the other party an opportunity of being heard, appoint an arbitrator or umpire or make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit.

Notice to appoint arbitrator.—Where an order of reference is made on the joint application of A and B, and the arbitrator refuses to act, and A serves B with notice to appoint a new arbitrator, the appointment of the new arbitrator must be made both by A and B, and not by B alone (g).

Arbitration.

Sch. II. Duty of Court under this paragraph.—In the event of the happening of any of the events mentioned in this paragraph, the Court must adopt one of the two courses pointed out in the paragraph, namely, appoint a new arbitrator, or make an order superseding the arbitration. Thus where one of three arbitrators refused to act, and the Court neither appointed a new arbitrator nor made an order superseding the arbitration, it was held that the award made by the other two was invalid (h).

Appointment of new arbitrator or umpire.—Under the Code of 1882, the Court had no power, on the happening of either of the events referred to in cl. (a) of this paragraph, to appoint a new arbitrator without the consent of all the parties to the reference; the reason being that the corresponding Section 507 of that Code contained the words "and [if] the parties desire that the nomination shall be made by the Court" (i). But the said words have been omitted in cl. (a), and the Court has power under this paragraph to appoint a new arbitrator without the consent of all the parties even in the cases mentioned in cl. (a). In cases covered by cl. (b), it is open to the Court to appoint only one new arbitrator in place of several old arbitrators (j). But the Court has no power to appoint an arbitrator or umpire under sub-para. (2) unless notice is given as required by sub-para. (1) and the party served with the notice has been given an opportunity of being heard (k).

The power of the Court to appoint a new arbitrator or umpire may be limited by agreement. A and B submitted to arbitration on the terms that the umpire should be selected from seven persons named. The umpire first selected refused to act, and the Court appointed a new umpire who was not one of the seven persons named. It was held that the umpire not being one of the seven named in the agreement, the award of the umpire was invalid (l).

If the arbitrator refuses to act.—If an arbitrator refuses to act, the Court cannot compel him to act. Thus where an arbitrator refused to act, and the Court, instead of accepting his refusal, directed him to proceed and make an award, it was held that the award was not valid. The finality of an award is based entirely upon the principle that the arbitrators are judges chosen by the parties themselves, and that such judges are willing to settle the disputes between them (m). But an arbitrator has full power to retract his resignation before it is accepted. The mere circumstance of an arbitrator having first tendered and then withdrawn his resignation does not divest him of the character of arbitrator (n).

Order superseding arbitration.—When once a matter is referred to arbitration by an order of the Court, the Court has no power to hear the suit on the merits, unless the arbitration has been superseded by an order under this paragraph (o) or under paragraph 8 or 15.

Form.—For form of order for appointment of new arbitrator see the Appendix to this Schedule, form No. 3.

6. [S. 512.] Every arbitrator or umpire appointed under paragraph 4 or paragraph 5 shall have the like powers as if his name had been inserted in the order of reference.

7. [S. 513.] (1) The Court shall issue the same process to the parties and witness whom the arbitrator or umpire desires to examine, as the Court may issue in suits tried before it. Sch. II, paras. 7,8.

Summoning witnesses and default.

(2) Persons not attending in accordance with such process, or making any other default, or refusing to give their evidence, or guilty of any contempt to the arbitrator or umpire during the investigation of the matters referred, shall be subject to the like disadvantages, penalties and punishments, by order of the Court on the representation of the arbitrator or umpire, as they would incur for the like offences in suits tried before the Court.

8. [S. 514.] Where the arbitrators or the umpire cannot complete the award within the period specified in the order, the Court may, if it thinks fit, either allow further time, and from time to time, either before or after the expiration of the period fixed for the making of the award, enlarge such period ; or may make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit.

Extension of time for making award.

Alteration in the rule.—The words, “ either before or after expiration of the period fixed for the making of the award ” are new. They give effect to decisions under the old section (p).

Extension of time for making award.—If the time originally fixed for making an award has expired, and no award is made, the Court may extend the time for making the award. It is not necessary that the application to extend the time should be made before the expiry of the period originally fixed for making the award. The application may be made even after the expiry of the time originally fixed (q). But it must be made before the award is made. The Court has no power to enlarge the time for the making of an award after the time for making it has expired and after the award has been made (r). Sec. 148 of this Code does not alter the law laid down in this respect (s). An award made after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court may be set aside under paragraph 15, cl. (c).

Where by an order of reference power is given to the arbitrator to extend the time for making the award, he can only extend the time before the time originally fixed for making the award has expired (t).

Arbitration.

Sch. II, paras. 8-10. Estoppel.—The parties to a reference may be estopped by their conduct from impeaching the validity of an award on the ground that it was made after time (u).

App:al.—An appeal lies from an order superseding an arbitration where the award has not been completed within the period allowed by the Court (s. 104, sub [s. (1), cl. (a)]).

9. [S. 515.] Where an umpire has been appointed, he may enter on the reference in the place of the arbitrators,—

Where umpire may arbitrate in lieu of arbitrators.

(a) if they have allowed the appointed time to expire without making an award, or

(b) if they have delivered to the Court or to the umpire a notice in writing stating that they cannot agree.

10. [S. 516.] Where an award in a suit has been made, the persons who made it shall sign it and cause it to be filed in Court together with any depositions and documents which have been taken and proved before them ; and notice of the filing shall be given to the parties.

Award to be signed and filed.

It is not necessary that an award should be signed by the arbitrators in the presence of each other.—It is quite enough if all the arbitrators agree to the terms of the award and sign it. There is no provision of law requiring them to sign in the presence of each other (v). But the award must be signed by all the arbitrators before it is filed. An award signed by one of the arbitrators while it is on the file of the Court is invalid (w).

Necessity of arbitrator's presence at meetings.—When a case has been referred to arbitration, the presence of all the arbitrators at all meetings, and, above all, at the last meeting when the final act of arbitration is done, is essential to the validity of the award (x).

“Together with any depositions and documents.”—The Court has jurisdiction to compel arbitrators to give up documents that may have been filed before them as exhibits during the course of the arbitration. Also if the original records of the suit are handed to the arbitrators to enable them to proceed with the arbitration, and they fail to return them, the Court can compel them to return the records (y).

Notice of the filing shall be given.—It is a material irregularity within the meaning of s. 115, if the Court gives judgment without issuing notice, and the judgment will be set aside in revision (z).

Delivery of award.—The act of an arbitrator in delivering an award to the proper officer of the Court for the purpose of being filed in Court is not an “application” within the meaning of the Limitation Act. Hence there is no period of limitation within which an award should be delivered by an arbitrator to the Court (a).

Sch. II,
paras.
10-12.

Form.—For form of award see the Appendix to this Schedule, form no. 5.

11. [S. 517.] Upon any reference by an order of the Court, the arbitrator or umpire may, with the leave of the Court, state the award as to the whole or any part thereof in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court, and the Court shall deliver its opinion thereon, and shall order such opinion to be added to and to form part of the award.

Statement of special case
by arbitrators or umpire.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order on an award stated in the form of a special case [s. 104, sub-s. (1), cl. (b)]. Where the arbitrators differ on certain matters referred to them, but instead of referring their differences to an umpire as provided by the order of reference, they submit their own opinions in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court, such submission is not an award stated in the form of a special case, and no appeal therefore lies from any order made upon such submission (b).

Form.—For form of “special case” see the appendix to this Schedule, form no. 4.

Power to modify or correct award.

12. [S. 518.] The Court may, by order, modify or correct an award,—

- (a) where it appears that a part of the award is upon a matter not referred to arbitration and such part can be separated from the other part and does not affect the decision on the matter referred ; or
- (b) where the award is imperfect in form, or contains any obvious error which can be amended without affecting such decision ; or
- (c) where the award contains a clerical mistake or an error arising from an accidental slip or omission.

Power to modify or correct.—The Court has no power to modify or correct an award except in the three cases mentioned in this paragraph. A Court acts without jurisdiction if it modifies an award because it takes a view different from that held by the arbitrator (c).

Where a part of the award is upon a matter not referred to arbitration.—Where the matters in dispute in a suit are referred to arbitration, but the question of costs is not referred, and the arbitrators make an award containing a direction that the defendant should pay the plaintiff's costs, the Court has power under this paragraph to modify the award by striking out the direction for the payment of costs, the case being one in which the part of the award upon the matter not referred could be separated from the other part (d). An award that goes beyond the terms of the reference is to that extent ultra vires (e). But where no such separation is possible, the Court should remit the award to the reconsideration of the same arbitrator under paragraph 14, cl. (a).

Clause (c).—This clause is new.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order modifying or correcting an award; see sec. 104, sub-sec. (1), cl. (c).

13. [S. 519.] The Court may also make such order as it thinks fit respecting the costs of the arbitration where any question arises respecting such costs and the award contains no sufficient provision concerning them.

Order as to costs of arbitration.

14. [S. 520.] The Court may remit the award or any matter referred to arbitration to the reconsideration of the same arbitrator or umpire, upon such terms as it thinks fit,—

Where award or matter referred to arbitration may be remitted.

- (a) Where the award has left undetermined any of the matters referred to arbitration, or where it determines any matter not referred to arbitration, unless such matter can be separated without affecting the determination of the matters referred;
- (b) where the award is so indefinite as to be incapable of execution;
- (c) where an objection to the legality of the award is apparent upon the face of it.

Remission of award when the award has left undetermined any of the matters referred to arbitration.—The ground for holding an award to be invalid on account of its not disposing of all the matters referred, appears to be that there is an implied condition in the submission of the parties to the arbitration that the award shall dispose of all. Hence this condition may be waived by the consent of all the parties before the arbitrators (f).

Where the issues in a suit were referred to arbitration, and there was no distinct and separate finding by the arbitrators on each of the issues, but there was a decision on the whole matter in controversy between the parties, it was held that the award could not be said to have left undetermined any of the matters referred to arbitration, and it should not therefore be remitted to the reconsideration of the arbitrator (g). A separate finding on each issue is not necessary, when the whole matter in issue between the parties is decided by the arbitrators (h). But where several issues in a suit are referred to arbitration, and the arbitrator decides by the award only one issue, the award must be remitted to his reconsideration (i). If the arbitrator fails to reconsider the award, the award becomes void : see paragraph 15. Even if parties come to an agreement as regards some of the matters referred to arbitration, the award should contain a determination of those matters, though it be in terms of the agreement, otherwise the award would be open to the objection that it has left those matters undetermined (j).

Award patently illegal.—Where the only question in a suit was whether a Hindu was born blind and therefore not entitled to inherit, and the suit was referred to arbitration, and the arbitrator made an award whereby the blind man was declared to be entitled to a life-interest in a certain portion of the property, it was held on an objection to the award under cl. (c) of this paragraph that the award was not so patently illegal that it could be remitted to the reconsideration of the arbitrator (k).

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order under this paragraph remitting an award to the reconsideration of arbitrators. Where an award is remitted to the reconsideration of the arbitrator, and the arbitrator submits a fresh award and a decree is passed in accordance with the revised award, no appeal lies from the decree on the ground that the order of remittal was wrong (r. 16) and that the original award ought to have been accepted and acted upon (l). But where an award is remitted to the reconsideration of the arbitrator, and the arbitrator refuses to reconsider the award (which consequently becomes void under paragraph 15), and the Court proceeds to try the case and passes a decree in the ordinary way [para. 15, sub-para. (2)], the legality of the order remitting the award may be challenged on appeal from such decree (m) : see sec. 105.

15. [S. 521.] (1) An award remitted under paragraph 14 becomes void on failure of the arbitrator or umpire to reconsider it. But no award shall be set aside except on one of the following grounds, namely :—

Grounds for setting aside award.

- (a) corruption or misconduct of the arbitrator or umpire ;
- (b) either party having been guilty of fraudulent concealment of any matter which he ought to have disclosed, or of wilfully misleading or deceiving the arbitrator or umpire ;
- (c) the award having been made after the issue of an order by the Court superseding the arbitration and proceeding with the suit or after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court, or being otherwise invalid.

Arbitration.

Sch. II, (2) Where an award becomes void or is set aside under para. 15. clause (1), the Court shall make an order superseding the arbitration and in such case shall proceed with the suit.

Points of distinction between s. 521 of the Code of 1882 and this paragraph :—

1. Award made after expiration of period allowed by Court. See notes below under the same head, p. 978.

When the award is otherwise invalid. See notes under the same head, p. 978.

3. Clause (2) is new.

Misconduct.—The term “misconduct” does not necessarily imply moral turpitude; it includes neglect of the duties and responsibilities of the arbitrators, and what Courts of Justice expect from them before allowing finality to their awards (n). Nor does it necessarily imply corruption (o).

Acts amounting to misconduct.—The following acts have been held to amount to “misconduct” on the part of an arbitrator affording a ground for setting aside an award :—

1. Irregularities in procedure which amount to no proper hearing of the matters in dispute (p), e.g., hearing and receiving evidence from one side in the absence of the other side without giving the other side affected by such evidence the opportunity of meeting and answering it (q).
2. Proceeding with arbitration in the absence of one of the arbitrators (r).
3. Refusing to hear witnesses produced by the parties (s).
4. Arbitrators improperly adding another to their number (t).
5. Where three out of five arbitrators were not present at the time the award was made and did not sign the award, although it purported to be signed by all of them, it was held that it amounted to misconduct, and the award was set aside (u).

Acquiescence in acts amounting to misconduct.—It is misconduct if some of the arbitrators are not present at some of the meetings. But if this procedure is adopted with the concurrence of all the parties or if it is acquiesced in by them, it is not open to any of the parties to impeach the award on that ground (v).

Acts not amounting to misconduct.—An arbitrator is not bound by technical rules of procedure. Hence it is not a valid objection to an award that the arbitrator has not acted in strict conformity with the rules of evidence (w). But the rule of the law of evidence which declares that letters written “without prejudice” should not be admitted in evidence, being a rule founded upon natural justice, is as binding upon arbitrators as upon Courts of Justice, and an arbitrator is wrong in receiving and acting upon such a letter. But if no objections taken by the other side to the admissibility of such letter, and an award is made, the award will not be set aside on the ground of misconduct (x). Where it is provided in an agreement for reference that an adjustment relied upon by the plaintiff should not be taken into consideration by the arbitrator, a bona fide mistake on the part of the arbitrator in admitting the adjustment in evidence does not amount to misconduct. Such a stipulation is nothing but a rule of evidence introduced pro hac vice (y).

It is not misconduct on the part of the arbitrator to delegate to a third party the performance of acts of a ministerial character, so long as he exercises his own judgment on the matters referred (z). "Misconduct" cannot be presumed from the mere fact that the arbitrator is the relative of one of the parties (a). The mere fact that the arbitrator has failed to account for the delay in making the award is no ground for presuming fraud (b).

In Buta v. Municipal Committee of Lahore (c), certain matters in dispute between A and B were referred to arbitration. The agreement of reference was drawn up by A's counsel. The arbitrator, feeling doubtful as to the meaning of a certain clause in the agreement, wrote to A to obtain his counsel's opinion on the meaning of that clause. A obtained the opinion, and sent it on to the arbitrator. B was not informed of this until after the award was made. It was held that though it would have been prudent and discreet for the arbitrator to have written to A with B's knowledge and informed B of the opinion, the omission to do this did not amount to "misconduct," as there was no ground for impeaching the good faith of any of the parties concerned.

Evidence of arbitrator.—Where a charge of dishonesty or partiality is made against an arbitrator, any relevant evidence he can give is properly admissible. It is, however, necessary to take care that evidence admitted as relevant on such charges is not used for a different purpose, namely, to scrutinize the decision of the arbitrator on matters within his jurisdiction and in which his decision is final (d).

Appeal from decree based on an award on ground of misconduct.—No appeal lies from a decree passed in accordance with an award, on the ground of misconduct of the arbitrator (e). The only remedy available to the party aggrieved by the award is to apply to have it set aside under this paragraph. See notes to paragraph 16, under the head "Invalid award," p. 981 below.

Fraudulent concealment of any matter which ought to have been disclosed.—Where the arbitrator was the retained pleader of the plaintiff, and this fact was not disclosed by the plaintiff to the defendant before the arbitrator was appointed, the award was set aside on the ground that that fact was one which ought to have been disclosed. Every disclosure which might in the least affect the minds of those who are proposing to submit their dispute to the arbitrament of any particular individual, as regards his selection and fitness for the post, ought to be made, so that each party may have every opportunity of considering whether the reference to arbitration to that particular individual should or should not be made (f).

Arbitration.

Sch. II. . Award made subsequent to order superseding arbitration.—If an order is made, superseding the arbitration under paragraph 5 or 8 or under cl. (2) of this paragraph, or if the period fixed for making the award has expired, the arbitrators have no longer seisin of the reference, and they are functi officio, and cease to have any more power to make an award than the man in the street (g). Similarly an arbitrator is functus officio after the award is made, and he cannot thereafter add to or alter the award (h).

Award made after expiration of period allowed by Court.—Clause (c) of s. 521 stopped at the words "the suit" which occur in cl. (1), sub-cl. (c), of this para. It was followed by another clause which ran thus: "And no award shall be valid unless made within the period allowed by the Court." The latter clause has now been omitted, and instead thereof, we have the words "or, after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court" added into sub-cl. (c). The effect of this alteration is that the only remedy now open to the party impeaching an award on the ground that it was made after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court is to apply under this paragraph to set aside the award. If no application is made to set aside the award under this paragraph, or if the application is made but refused, the award becomes final, and no appeal will lie from a decree based upon the award (i). [Under the Code of 1882 it was held that an appeal lay from a decree based upon such an award (j).] If the application to set aside the award is granted, and an order is made under sub-para. (2) superseding the arbitration, the order is appealable under s. 104, sub-s. (1), cl. (a). See notes to r. 16 below, "No appeal lies from a decree based on an award, etc.," p. 979, and notes to paragraph 3, "Making of award," p. 967 above.

Another consequence of the alteration is that whereas under s. 521 of the old Code an award out of time was a nullity (k), it is not so under the present rule. Under the present rule, it is merely voidable, and if not sought to be set aside within the period of limitation [Limitation Act, 1908, art. 158], it is binding upon the parties.

When the award is otherwise invalid.—The words "or being otherwise invalid" at the end of sub-cl. (c) are new. Under the Code of 1882 it was held that when an award was not a valid and legal award, an appeal would lie from the decree based upon such award, even though the decree might be in accordance with the award. The leading case on the subject was Kali Prosanno Ghose v. Rajani Kant (l) decided by the High Court of Calcutta in the year 1898. The object of adding the words "or being otherwise invalid" into sub-cl. (c) is to supersede the Calcutta and other decisions which allowed an appeal from a decree based upon an invalid award, and to give effect to the principle of finality in cases of arbitration enunciated by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ghulam Khan v. Muhammad Hassan (m), and followed in recent cases (n). The result is that the only remedy now open to a party seeking to impeach an award as being invalid is to apply under this paragraph to have it set aside. If he fails to do so, or if an application is made but refused, the award becomes final, and no appeal will lie from a decree based upon the award. See notes to paragraph 16 under the head "Invalid award," p. 931. It is worth while noting that the Special Committee, which introduced these alterations intended to allow an appeal from an order under this paragraph setting aside or refusing to set aside an award (o), but no such proviso is to be found in s. 104. Sch. II.

An award is not illegal merely because it is based on evidence given by one of the parties on a special oath administered under the Indian Oaths Act with the consent of the other party (p). paras. 15, 16.

Appeal from order under this paragraph.—Except in the case provided by s. 104, cl. (a), no appeal lies from an order under this paragraph setting aside or refusing to set aside an award. But if the order is made by a Chartered High Court, it amounts to a “judgment” within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, and is appealable under that clause. See notes to s. 104 under the head, “Letters Patent appeal,” p. 204. See also notes to paragraph 21 below under the head “Appeal,” p. 992.

It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay and by the Chief Court of the Punjab that though no appeal lies from an order setting aside an award, the legality of the order may be challenged on appeal from the decree that may be ultimately passed in the suit (q) [see s. 105]. A different view has been taken by the High Court of Allahabad (r).

Revision.—An order under this paragraph setting aside or refusing to set aside an award is not subject to revision (s).

16. [S. 522.] (1) Where the Court sees no cause to remit the award or any of the matters referred to arbitration, for re-consideration in manner aforesaid, and no application has been made to set aside the award, or the Court has refused such application, the Court shall, after the time for making such application has expired, proceed to pronounce judgment according to the award.

Judgment to be according to award.

(2) Upon the judgment so pronounced a decree shall follow, and no appeal shall lie from such decree except in so far as the decree is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award.

“After the time for making such application has expired.”—That is, after 10 days from the date on which the award is submitted to the Court: see Limitation Act, 1908, sch. 1, art. 158.

No appeal lies from a decree based on an award except in so far as such decree is in excess of or not in accordance with the award.—In references to arbitration the general rule is that, as the parties choose their own arbitrator to be the judge in the dispute between them, they cannot object to his decision either upon the law or upon the facts. It is now well established that where a matter is referred to

Sch. II. an arbitrator, he is the sole and final judge of all questions not only of fact but of law (t).
para. 16. Thus where an award was impeached on the ground that it was against law, their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "They [arbitrators] may have erred in law, but arbitrators may be judges of law as well as judges of fact, and an error in law certainly does not vitiate an award" (u). And this principle has been carried so far that if parties submit to an arbitrator the decision of a bare point of law, and he gives an erroneous decision, his award is binding notwithstanding (v). In all these cases the Court would say to the party seeking to set aside the award: "You have constituted your own tribunal; you are bound by its decision" (w). The present paragraph gives effect to "the principle of finality" of awards, by declaring that no appeal shall lie from a decree based on an award, except in so far as the decree is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award (x). The only cases in which the Code allows an appeal from a decree based on an award are—

- (1) where the decree is in excess of the award, as where the decree gives interest which the arbitrators have not awarded (y); or
- (2) where the decree is not in accordance with the award.

In this respect there is no difference between a decree based upon a private award (para. 21) and a decree based upon an award made through the intervention of the Court (z).

Is a decree based on an award which has been modified by the Court under paragraph 12 a decree in accordance with the award? It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that it is not, and hence an appeal lies from the decree. Thus where an award directed the defendant to make certain payments to the plaintiff by instalments, and the award was modified by the Court under paragraph 12 by omitting the direction as to payment by instalments, and a decree was passed on the award as so modified, it was held that an appeal would lie from the decree (a). The soundness of this decision is open to question. It is submitted that a decree is in accordance with an award within the meaning of this paragraph, if it is in accordance with the award as modified under paragraph 12, though it may not be in accordance with the original award. Paragraph 16 says: The Court shall proceed to pronounce judgment according to the award. "It is clear that when an award is modified under paragraph 12, the only award according to which judgment could be pronounced is the modified award. Moreover, the decision runs counter to "the principle of finality" which finds expression in the Code.

Where an application made under para. 15, cl. (c), to set aside an award on the ground that it was made after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court has been refused, and a decree is subsequently passed in accordance with the award, no appeal lies from the decree, the decree being in accordance with the award. Nor does any appeal lie from the decree under the Letters Patent (b). See notes to paragraph 15, "Award made after expiration of period allowed by Court," and notes, "Appeal from order under this paragraph," p. 979. See also notes to s. 104, "Letters patent appeal," p. 264 above.

Invalid award.—Under the old section it was held by the Courts in India, that though a decree might be in perfect accordance with an award, an appeal would lie from the decree, if the award upon which the decree was based was invalid. The reason given was that that section presupposed a valid and legal award, and not an award upon which no decree could be passed (c). A different view, however, was taken by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ghulam Khan v. Muhammad Hussain (d), decided in the year 1902. After that expression of opinion two of our High Courts held that no appeal lay under s. 522 from a decree passed on an award on the ground that the award was invalid (e). Under the present Code it is quite clear that no appeal lies from a decree, where such decree is passed in accordance with the award, though the award may be invalid. But the party aggrieved by the award may apply under para. 15, cl. (1), sub-cl. (c), to have the award set aside. If he does not avail himself of that remedy, the award becomes final, and no appeal lies from the decree based upon the award. This change has been introduced by the insertion of the words “or the award being otherwise invalid” in para. 15, cl. (1), sub-cl. (c). The object is to give finality to awards as stated in the notes to paragraph 15 under the head “Where the award is otherwise invalid”. The effect of this alteration is that no appeal lies under this Code when a decree has been passed under the present paragraph upon an award, except in so far as the decree is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award (f). The result is that all those cases, in which it was held under the Code of 1882, that a decree though it be in accordance with the award may be challenged by way of appeal on the ground that there was no valid and legal award, are no longer law.

Illustrations.

(a) An order of reference made on the application of some only of the parties interested is illegal [see paragraph 1]. Therefore an award made in pursuance of such order is also illegal. According to the old section an appeal would lie from a decree upon such an award (g). But no appeal lies under this paragraph, and the only remedy open to the party aggrieved by the award is to apply to the Court under paragraph 15, cl. (1), sub-cl. (c), to set aside the award. Such an application should be made within 10 days from the date on which the award is submitted to the Court. See paragraph 1.

(b) An award made after the expiration of the period fixed by the Court under paragraph 3 or enlarged by the Court under paragraph 8, is invalid. According to the old section an appeal would lie from a decree based on such award (h). No appeal lies under the present paragraph, but the party aggrieved by the award may apply to have it set aside under paragraph 15. See notes to para. 15, “Award made after expiration of period allowed by Court”

Arbitration.

Sch. II. to the old section an appeal would lie from a decree based on such award (i). No para. 16. appeal lies under this paragraph, but the party aggrieved by the award may apply under paragraph 15 to have it set aside (j).

(d) The matters in difference in a suit between A and B are referred to the arbitration of C. C is the retained pleader of A, but this fact is not disclosed to B [see para. 15]. C makes an award. The award is illegal. According to the old section an appeal would lie from the decree (k). No appeal lies under the present paragraph, but B could apply to have the award set aside under paragraph 15.

An appeal lies from a decree based upon a judgment pronounced in contravention of the provisions of this paragraph, though the decree may be in accordance with the award.—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that if a decree is passed on an award before the time for making the application to set aside the award has expired, an appeal will lie from the decree, though the decree may be in accordance with the award (l). Similarly it has been held that where an application to set aside an award has been refused by the Court without considering it, and a decree is passed on the award, an appeal will lie from the decree, though the decree may be in accordance with the award. The reason given is that the word “refused” in this paragraph means refused after judicial consideration (m).

Second appeal.—A second appeal will lie to the High Court where the decree of the Court of first instance is in accordance with the award, and such decree is set aside by the first appellate Court. The reason is that no appeal lies from a decree passed in accordance with an award, and the first appellate Court acts without jurisdiction in entertaining the appeal and setting aside the decree passed in accordance with the award (n). In a similar case the High Court of Calcutta held that no second appeal lies, but that the High Court may revise the order under s. 115 (o).

A second appeal will also lie where the Court of first instance sets aside the award and passes a decree on the merits, and the first appellate Court sets aside the decree and passes a decree in accordance with the award. The mere fact that the decree of the first appellate Court is in accordance with the award is no ground for refusing the appeal (p).

Revision.—We have seen that no appeal lies from a decree passed in accordance with an award. Section 115 provides that where no appeal lies from a decision, an application may be made to the High Court for a revision of the decision. No such application, however, should be admitted in the case of an award. In the case of an award, revision would be more objectionable than an appeal. If an application for revision were admissible in a case where the decree is in accordance with the award, the finality of any award would be open to question (q). Thus where an application was made for revision on the ground that there was no valid order of reference and that the award was therefore a nullity and that no decree ought to have been passed on such an award, the High Court of Allahabad expressed the opinion that the application should not be entertained (r). In a recent Bombay case the High Court entertained an application for revision from a decree which was passed in accordance with the award, on grounds which the Court thought were of an exceptional character (a).

Where the Court acts as arbitrator.—Where a reference is made to the presiding Judge, the parties must be deemed to have agreed to accept his decision as final. Hence no appeal lies from the decision of the Judge in such a case (t), nor is the decision subject to the provisions of the present schedule so as to entitle either party to object to the decision as if it was an award under this schedule (u). A decree passed in accordance with such a decision must be regarded as a consent decree and it comes within the purview of O. 23, r. 3 (u). The same principle applies even if the reference is made to the presiding Judge and another person jointly (u).

It may here be noted that a Judge to whom a reference is made has no power to alter his decision once it is given. In this respect his position is that of an arbitrator who has no power to alter an award once it is made by him (v).

Another case in which the decision of a Court would be regarded as an award is where the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and the suit is heard by the Court by the consent of parties (w). See notes to s. 21, "Absence of jurisdiction," p. 91 above.

Distinction between valuer and arbitrator.—A sues B for a declaration that he is entitled to one-half share of certain property. An order is made by consent that A should pay B a quarter of the value of the property to be settled by a certain referee nominated by the parties. The order is not one passed under paras. and 3, and the decision of the referee is not an award on which a judgment could be pronounced under the present paragraph (x). But the terms of the agreement between the parties may be such that the valuer may be invested with the power of an arbitrator in which case the valuation made by him may operate as an award. In Jackson v. Barry Railway Co. (y), the building contract contained the following clause: "In the event of any question or dispute arising between the company and the contractor as to [then followed the enumeration of several questions], such questions or disputes shall be referred to the engineer whose decision shall be conclusive and binding on both parties." It was assumed that the above clause was an agreement to refer to arbitration, and the only question argued was whether in view of a letter written by the engineer to the contractor after intimation to the parties to proceed with the arbitration the engineer had rendered himself incapable of acting as an arbitrator. It was contended on behalf of the contractor that the true inference from the letter was that the engineer had so completely made up his mind against him that he would not be patiently listened to and receive an honest decision, but this contention was overruled.

Sch. II. to which the agreement relates, that the agreement be filed in para. 17. Court.

(2) The application shall be in writing and shall be numbered and registered as a suit between one or more of the parties interested or claiming to be interested as plaintiff or plaintiffs, and the others or other of them as defendants or defendant, if the application has been presented by all the parties, or, if otherwise, between the applicant as plaintiff and the other parties as defendants.

(3) On such application being made, the Court shall direct notice thereof to be given to all the parties to the agreement, other than the applicants, requiring such parties to show cause, within the time specified in the notice, why the agreement should not be filed.

(4) Where no sufficient cause is shown, the Court shall order the agreement to be filed, and shall make an order of reference to the arbitrator appointed in accordance with the provisions of the agreement or, if there is no such provision and the parties cannot agree, the Court may appoint an arbitrator.

Alterations in the paragraph.—In cl. 4 the words “ and shall make an order of reference to the arbitrator appointed in accordance with the provisions of the agreement, or, if there is no such provision and the parties cannot agree, the Court may appoint an arbitrator ” are substituted for the words “ and shall make an order of reference thereon, and may also nominate the arbitrator when he is not named therein and the parties cannot agree as to the nomination.”

Does not apply—The procedure prescribed by this paragraph does not apply to cases to which the Arbitration Act applies. See notes to s. 89, p. 221 above.

Scope of the paragraph.—Paras. 1 to 16 deal with cases in which the parties to a suit agree to refer the matters in difference between them in the suit to arbitration and apply to the Court for an order of reference. The application in such a case must be made by all the parties to the suit interested in the matters in difference proposed to be referred to arbitration. This and the subsequent paragraph refer to cases in which persons themselves agree, independently of the Court, to refer the matters in difference between them to arbitration (z). In such a case any party to the agreement may apply to the Court to have the agreement filed and to have an order of reference made thereon. Where such an order is made, the provisions of paras. 2 to 16 apply to the proceedings in so far as they are consistent with the agreement so filed (a) [para. 19]. When a submission is filed in Court under this paragraph, the submission is said to be made a rule of the Court.

Agreement to refer to arbitration matters in difference in a pending suit.—Under the Code of 1882 it was held by the High Court of Bombay that the provisions of s. 523 [this para.] and s. 525 [para. 20] applied as well to an agreement to refer to arbitration matters in controversy in a pending suit as to an agreement made before any suit had been instituted (b). The same view was taken by the Allahabad High Court (c). On the other hand, it was held by the High Court of Calcutta (d) and the Chief Court of the Punjab (e), relying on a passage in the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ghulam Khan v. Muhammad Hassan (f) [p. 964 above], that those sections did not apply to an agreement to refer to arbitration where there was a suit pending with respect to the matters in dispute, and that if a reference was made during the pendency of a suit without an order of the Court and an award made, the award could not be taken cognizance of by the Court under those sections. In a case which arose under the new Code, the High Court of Madras agreed with the view taken by the Calcutta High Court, and held that neither the old sections 523 and 525 nor the present para. and para. 20 applied to an agreement to refer matters in difference in a pending suit (g). The same view was taken by the High Court of Bombay in two cases which arose under the present Code (h). In a later case, however, the same High Court held in a case where the parties agreed to refer to arbitration the matters in dispute between them in a pending suit, that paras. 20 and 21 applied to the case and that the correct procedure was to apply to the Court to file the award under paras. 20 and 21 (i). The above cases were reviewed in a recent case (ii) by Macleod, C.J., where the learned judge laid down the procedure to be followed in arbitration proceedings: see notes to O. 23, r. 3, "Adjustment: submission and award," p. 684 above.

The agreement must be in writing.—This paragraph does not apply unless the agreement to refer is in writing (j).

Agreement to refer future differences to arbitration.—Where a charter-party contains a clause that any disagreement that may arise [i.e., arise in future] between the contracting parties as to the proper interpretation of the charter should be referred to arbitration, the agreement, though it refers to future differences, can be filed under this paragraph (k). Agreements to refer future differences are not outside the scope of this section.

"Sufficient cause."—Where an agreement is to refer to several specified arbitrators and one of the arbitrators dies before the application is made under this paragraph, the Court should not make an order of reference under this paragraph (l). But it is otherwise if the agreement contains an express provision that in case of death of any arbitrator, another arbitrator may be appointed in his place (m).

"Arbitrator appointed in accordance with the provisions of the agreement."—Thus where an agreement provides for a reference to a European merchant the Court has no power to appoint an Indian merchant (n).

Where the agreement to refer has been duly revoked.—Where an agreement to refer has been revoked for good cause by one of the parties thereto, the Court is not competent to order it to be filed under this paragraph (o). See notes to para. 1 under the head "Revocation of arbitrator's authority."

Umpire.—If an agreement filed under this paragraph does not contain any provision for the appointment of an umpire in the event of the arbitrators being unable to agree, the Court has no power under this paragraph to appoint an umpire (p).

Appeal.—An order under this paragraph filing or refusing to file an agreement to refer to arbitration is now appealable as an order [s. 104, sub-s. (1), cl. (d)]. Under the Code of 1882 it was appealable as a decree (q).

Revision.—The mere fact that the application is not numbered and registered as a suit as required by cl. (2) of this paragraph is no ground for interfering in revision; such an irregularity is not a material irregularity within the meaning of s. 115 (r).

18. [New. Cf. Arbitration Act 9 of 1899, s. 19.] Where any party to any agreement to refer to arbitration, or any person claiming under him, institutes any suit against any other party to the agreement, or any person claiming under him, in respect of any matter agreed to be referred, any party to such suit may, at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement, apply to the Court to stay the suit; and the Court, if satisfied that there is no sufficient reason why the matter should not be referred in accordance with the agreement to refer to arbitration, and that the applicant was, at the time when the suit was instituted and still remains, ready and willing to do all things necessary to the proper conduct of the arbitration, may make an order staying the suit.

History of the section.—This paragraph is a reproduction with slight alterations of section 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act. The latter section is based on s. 4 of the English Arbitration Act, 1889, which again is based on the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 11.

By s. 28 of the Indian Contract Act agreements in restraint of legal proceedings are declared void. To that section there was an exception to the effect that if the parties have agreed to refer their disputes to arbitration, the existence of the agreement shall be a bar to seeking redress in the ordinary Courts. The exception also recognized the right to sue for specific performance of the agreement. Then came the Specific Relief Act of 1877 which by s. 21 took away the right to sue for the specific performance of the agreement, but preserved the right to the party who was willing to abide by the agreement to object to a trial of the suit filed by the other party. Lastly, we have paragraph 22 of this Schedule which has repealed that portion of s. 21 of the Specific Relief Act which enabled the defendant to plead the agreement to refer as a bar to the suit. In lieu thereof we have the present paragraph which enables a party who is willing to abide by the agreement to apply for a stay of the suit filed by the other party. But the application must be made at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement. If the application is not so made, the suit will proceed, and any award made by the arbitrator after the institution of the suit is a nullity. The reason is that as soon as a suit is brought in respect of the subject-matter of the reference, the arbitrators become functus officio (s).

"At the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement."—The corresponding words in s. 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899, are, "at any time after appearance and before filing a written statement or taking any other steps in the proceedings." It has been held under the English Arbitration Act, 1889, that where the defendant did not know what was the subject-matter of the action, and asked for a statement of claim, the mere request for the statement of claim was not a step in the proceedings (t). But where the defendant was unaware that the contract contained an arbitration clause and asked for an order of discovery and the order asked for was made, it was held that he had taken a step in the proceedings and therefore was not entitled to a stay (u).

"Institutes any suit."—These words show that the present rule refers only to suits instituted after the agreement to refer to arbitration has been made. A sues B in respect of certain matters. The parties then agree to refer the matters to arbitration. Subsequently A declines to proceed with the arbitration, and writes to B that he will proceed with the suit. B applies for an order staying the suit. The Court has no power under this paragraph to stay the suit, for the suit was instituted prior to the agreement (v).

"No sufficient cause"—The burden lies on the plaintiff to show that some sufficient reason exists why the matter should not be referred to arbitration and not on the defendant to show that no such reason exists (w).

"May make an order staying the suit."—The Court has a discretion under this paragraph as to staying a suit instituted by one party to a submission against the other party. At the same time it must be remembered that it is the prima facie duty of the Court to act upon the agreement between the parties (x). "If parties choose to determine for themselves that they will have a domestic forum instead of resorting to the ordinary Courts, then since that Act of Parliament [that is, the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 11, which corresponds to the present paragraph] was passed, a prima facie duty is cast upon the Courts to act upon such an agreement" (y).

Denial of agreement.—Where one of the parties denies the agreement to refer set up by the other party, it is within the province of the Court to decide whether there is such an agreement (z).

Validity of agreement to refer.—To bring a case within this paragraph there must be a subsisting agreement to refer capable of being carried into effect. A suit therefore cannot be stayed under this paragraph if the submission has been revoked for good cause (a). Nor can it be stayed if the original contract containing the arbitration clause is followed by another agreement materially altering the original contract, the reason being that in such a case the arbitration clause ceases, by virtue of the alteration, to have any effect. But a mere extension of time for the performance of that which a party under the original contract is bound to perform does not amount to a material alteration, and the arbitration clause does not cease to operate in such a case (b). See Pollock and Mulla's Indian Contract Act, notes to s. 28.

Stay refused.—Where an arbitration clause does not cover all the matters in respect of which the suit is brought, the Court will not, as a rule, split the suit into two parts, one to be tried by the arbitrator and the other to be tried in Court: the Court will, in such a case, try the whole suit (c). Where fraud is charged, the Court will in general refuse to refer the dispute to arbitration if the party charged with the fraud desires a public inquiry (d).

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order staying or refusing to stay a suit when there is an agreement to refer to arbitration; see s. 104, sub-s. (1), cl. (e).

19. [S. 524.] The foregoing provisions, so far as they are consistent with any agreement filed under paragraph 17, shall be applicable to all proceedings under the order of reference made by the Court under that paragraph, and to the award and to the decree following thereon.

Provisions applicable to proceedings under paragraph 17.

Does not apply.—This paragraph does not apply to cases to which the Arbitration Act applies. See notes to s. 89, p. 221 above.

“So far as they are consistent with any agreement filed under paragraph 17.”—This paragraph provides that where an order of reference is made under paragraph 17 the provisions of paras. 3 to 16 shall apply to all proceedings under the order only so far as they are consistent with the agreement filed under paragraph 17. Thus under paragraph 8 the Court has the power to extend the period for the making of the award. But if the agreement filed under paragraph 17 provides that the arbitrators shall make their award within a fixed period and that they shall have no power to enlarge the time for making the award, the stipulation in the agreement will prevail to the exclusion of the provision in paragraph 8. But the words “so far as they are consistent with any agreement filed under paragraph 17” would not preclude the Court from setting aside an award for misconduct of the arbitrators, though there may be a clause in the agreement that the award should be accepted as “final” (e). Nor do they preclude the Court from appointing a new arbitrator under paragraph 5 in place of one who refuses to act, provided there is no clause in the submission expressly excluding the power of the Court to make such an appointment (f).

(2) The application shall be in writing and shall be numbered and registered as a suit between the applicant as plaintiff and the other parties as defendants.

(3) The Court shall direct notice to be given to the parties to the arbitration, other than the applicant, requiring them to show cause, within a time specified, why the award should not be filed.

Old section.—This paragraph corresponds to s. 525 of the Code of 1882 except that in cl. (1) the words “any Court having jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the award” have been substituted for the words “Court of the lowest grade having jurisdiction over the matter to which the award relates.” See notes below, “Court to which application should be made under this paragraph.”

Does not apply.—This paragraph does not apply to cases to which the Arbitration Act applies; see notes to s. 89, p. 221 above.

Pending suit.—See notes to para. 17 above under the head “Agreement to refer to arbitration matters in a pending suit,” p. 985 above. See also notes to O. 23, r. 3, “Adjustment, submission and award,” p. 684 above.

Scope of this and subsequent paragraph.—The present paragraph and paragraph 21 refer to cases where the agreement of reference is made and the arbitration itself takes place without the intervention of the Court and the assistance of the Court is only sought in order to give effect to the award (g).

This paragraph is no bar to a regular suit to enforce an award.—Under the corresponding section 525 of the Code of 1882 it was held that a party interested in an award may at his option avail himself of the summary remedy provided by that section to enforce the award, or he may bring a regular suit to enforce the award (h). There is nothing in the present Code to preclude such a suit. Rather, such a suit is saved by s. 89 as appears from the words “save in so far as is otherwise provided by any other law for the time being in force” (i). See notes to para. 21. “Res judicata,” p. 993 below.

A valid award constitutes a bar to a suit on the original demand.—An award duly passed in accordance with the submission of the parties is equivalent to final judgment. Hence if an award is made for a partition of joint property no party to the reference can sue for partition. The award is an answer to the suit, though no decree may have been passed on the award (j).

Court to which application should be made under this paragraph.—It is the subject-matter of the award, and not the subject-matter of the reference, that determines the jurisdiction of the Court under the present paragraph. Under the old section the application to file the award had to be made to “the Court of the lowest paras. were held by the High Court of Calcutta to mean "the Court of the lowest grade having 20, 21. jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the reference" (k). The words "subject-matter of the award" have been substituted in this paragraph for the words "matter to which the award relates" to make it clear that an application under this paragraph may be made to any Court having jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the award.

Limitation.—The application under this paragraph should be made within 6 months from the date of the award: Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 178 (l).

Where an award is delivered in parts.—If the agreement to refer provides that the matters in dispute may be taken up and dealt with serialim and that the award may be delivered bit by bit, each portion decided may be dealt with as a distinct award under this paragraph (m).

"Where any matter has been referred to arbitration."—Do the words "any matter" refer only to a matter in respect of which a suit can be entertained by a Civil Court under s. 9 of the Code?—This paragraph provides that when any matter has been referred to arbitration without the intervention of a Court, and an award has been made thereon, any person interested in the award may apply that the award be filed in Court. Paragraph 21 provides for the passing of a decree on the award. Suppose now that the matter referred to arbitration is one as to which a Civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit under s. 9 of the Code, e.g., disputes about man pān, and an award is made thereon. Has the Court jurisdiction to file such an award, and pass a decree thereon under paragraph 21? It has been held by the High Court of Bombay, that it has, and that it is not against the policy of the law to give effect to such awards (n). The result is that rights which are not at all civil rights may be the subject-matter of an arbitration and award and of the decree of a Civil Court. It would be interesting to know how the decree, if disobeyed, would be enforced. However this may be, it is clear that where a matter is such that on grounds of public policy it can be disposed of only by a Court, it cannot form the legitimate subject of a reference, and if such a matter is referred to arbitration, and an award has been made thereon, the Courts should refuse to pass a decree thereon. Thus the right to succeed to the trusteeship of a public charitable trust is not a right which can be settled by arbitration. A Court therefore has no jurisdiction to entertain an application to file an award in such a matter under this paragraph (o).

21. [S. 526.] (1) Where the Court is satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration and that an award has been made thereon, and where no ground such as is mentioned or referred to in paragraph 14 or paragraph 15 is proved, the Court shall order the award to be filed and shall proceed to pronounce judgment according to the award.

Points of distinction between s. 526 of the Code of 1882 and this paragraph :—

1. The words, "where the Court is satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration and that an award has been made thereon," have been added into cl. (1) to negative the view held by the High Court of Bombay under the old section that the Court had no power to determine questions relating to the factum and validity of the agreement to refer and of the award, and to give effect to the view held by the other High Courts. See notes below, "Where the Court is satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration," &c.
2. This word "proved" has been substituted for the word "shown." In fact it was held under the old section that the word "shown" meant "proved" (p). See notes below under the head "Proved."

When the Court is satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration and that an award has been made thereon.—These words are new. In the absence of these words in the corresponding section of the Code of 1882 it was held by the High Court of Bombay that where an application was made under that section to file an award, and the other party raised objections to the factum or validity of the submission and award, the Court had no jurisdiction to inquire whether the parties had or had not referred the matters in dispute to arbitration, and the Court should therefore reject the application, and refer the applicant to a regular suit to enforce the award (q). On the other hand, it was held by the High Courts of Allahabad (r), Calcutta (s) and Madras (t) that the Court had the power under that section to determine all questions relating to the existence and validity of the alleged agreement to refer and of the award, and that the applicant must not be referred to a separate suit. The present paragraph supersedes the Bombay decisions, and gives effect to the decisions of the other High Courts.

"Proved."—It is not sufficient to "allege" grounds of objection under paras. 14 and 15. It is necessary that the ground of objection should be proved. See notes above under the head "Points of distinction," etc.

Grounds of objection under paras. 14 and 15.—Where a matter has been referred to arbitration under an order of the Court, the Court has power in the cases mentioned in para. 14 to remit the award to the reconsideration of the arbitrator. Thus if an award determines any matter not referred to arbitration, the Court may remit the award under para. 14; and if such matter can be separated without affecting the determination of the matters referred, the Court may amend the award by striking out that portion of the award which is in excess of the reference, and enforce the award as to the rest of it. But where a matter has been referred to arbitration without the intervention of the Court, the Court has no power to remit or to amend the award. The Court has under the present para. only two courses open to it, namely, to file the award or refuse to file the award. Hence if an award in a matter referred to arbitration without the intervention of the Court determines matters not referred to arbitration, the only course open to the Court under the present para. is to refuse to file the award, even where the portion of the award open to exception can be separated from the rest (u).

Award made after long delay.—Where the agreement to refer was made in 1905 and the award was not made until 1910 and the Court came to the conclusion that it would probably not have been made at all but for one of the parties having brought a criminal complaint against one of the arbitrators, the Court refused the application to file the award. The Court presumed from the circumstances of the case that the reference must have been abandoned (v).

Award made after revocation of submission.—An award made after the agreement to refer has been revoked by one of the parties thereto for good cause cannot be filed under this paragraph (w).

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this paragraph filing or refusing to file an award: s. 104, sub-s. (1), cl. (f). But no appeal lies from the order passed on appeal (x); see s. 104 (z). But though an appeal lies from an order made under the paragraph, no appeal lies from a decree passed on an award except in so far as the decree is in excess of or not in accordance with the award (y) [see sub-para. (2)]. Suppose now that an order is made directing an award to be filed, and a decree is passed based on the award before an appeal is preferred from the order. Is the right to appeal from the order lost, because a decree is drawn up? It has been held that it is not, and it has been further held that if the Appellate Court sets aside the order, it is competent to it to declare that the decree based on the order is vacated (z). See notes to para. 15, "Award made beyond the period allowed by the Court," p. 978 above.

A applies to file an award under para. 20. B objects to the filing of the award on certain grounds. On the date fixed for the hearing of the objections B does not appear. Thereupon his objections are disallowed and an ex parte decree is passed against B in accordance with the award. B thereupon applies under O. 9, r. 13, to set aside the ex parte decree and to hear his objections to the award. The application is rejected. B then appeals from the order rejecting the application. Is the order appealable? Yes; it is appealable under O. 43, r. 1 (d), by which it is provided that an appeal lies from an order rejecting an application for an order to set aside an ex parte decree in a case open to appeal. The case is one open to appeal for the question between the parties was whether or not the award should be filed as a decree of the Court, and any order made upon it would be appealable under s. 104, sub-s. (1), cl. (f) (a).

Res judicata.—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the refusal of a Court to file a private award on the ground of misconduct of the arbitrator does not operate as res judicata in respect of a suit subsequently brought to enforce the award, the reason given being that the doctrine of res judicata pre-supposes a former suit and a decree in that suit, and that the order of refusal is not a decree, but merely an order (b). This decision, it is submitted, is not correct. A proceeding under para. 20 is a "suit," [see para. 20 (2)], and the order refusing to file the award amounts to a decision which may operate as res judicata under s. 11. The words in s. 11 are "heard and finally decided": the expression "decree" does not occur in the section. Even if proceeding under para. 20 is not a "suit," it is a proceeding in a Court of Civil jurisdiction within the meaning of s. 141, and the provisions of s. 11 apply to it by virtue of s. 141. See preceding paragraph headed "Appeal."

Withdrawal of suit.—The fact that an application has been made under para. 20 does not preclude the applicant from withdrawing the application under O. 23, r. 1, at any time prior to the pronouncement of judgment and preparation of the decree. It is true that a suit alone can be withdrawn under O. 23, r. 1; but an application filed under para. 20 is numbered and registered as a suit (c).

These words have been omitted in view of the provisions of para. 18 above.

THE THIRD SCHEDULE.

EXECUTION OF DECREES BY COLLECTORS.

1. [S. 321.] Where the execution of a decree has been transferred to the Collector under section 68, he may—Powers of Collector.

- (a) proceed as the Court would proceed when the sale of immoveable property is postponed in order to enable the judgment-debtor to raise the amount of the decree ; or
- (b) raise the amount of the decree by letting in perpetuity, or for a term, on payment of a premium or by mortgaging, the whole or any part of the property ordered to be sold ; or
- (c) sell the property ordered to be sold or so much thereof as may be necessary.

Clause (a).—See O. 21, r. 83.

Payment by instalments.—A Collector to whom a decree for sale of mortgaged property has been transferred for execution under s. 68 is limited to one of the three courses specified in this paragraph, and may not depart from them, much less may he do what the Court itself could not do in such a case—allow payment of the debt to be made by instalments (d).

2. [S. 322.] Where the execution of a decree, not being a decree ordering the sale of immoveable property in pursuance of a contract specifically affecting the same, but being a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of which the Court has ordered the sale of immoveable property, has been so transferred, the Collector, if, after such inquiry as he thinks necessary, he has reason to believe that all the liabilities of the judgment-debtor can be discharged without a sale of the whole of his available immoveable property, may proceed as hereinafter provided.

Procedure of Collector in special cases.

Execution by Collectors

- 3. [S. 322A.] (1) In any such case as is referred to in paragraph 2, the Collector shall publish a notice, allowing a period of sixty days from the date of its publication for compliance and calling upon—

paras. 3, 4.

Notice to be given to decree-holders and to persons having claims on property.

- (a) every person holding a decree for the payment of money against the judgment-debtor capable of execution by sale of his immoveable property and which such decree-holder desires to have so executed, and every holder of a decree for the payment of money in execution of which proceedings for the sale of such property are pending, to produce before the Collector a copy of the decree, and a certificate from the Court which passed or is executing the same, declaring the amount recoverable thereunder ;
- (b) every person having any claim on the said property to submit to the Collector a statement of such claim, and to produce the documents (if any) by which it is evidenced.

(2) Such notice shall be published by being affixed on a conspicuous part of the Court-house of the Court which made the original order for sale, and in such other places (if any) as the Collector thinks fit ; and where the address of any such decree-holder or claimant is known, a copy of the notice shall be sent to him by post or otherwise.

Power of Collector to hear objections to execution of decree transferred to him for execution.—Where a decree for money is transferred for execution to the Collector under s. 68, he is not authorized under this paragraph to hear any objection by the parties interested in the property advertised for sale to the sale of that property, nor is it any part of the Collector's duty to decide whether the property has or has not been properly attached (e).

- 4. [S. 322B.] (1) Upon the expiration of the said period, the Collector shall appoint a day for hearing any representations which the judgment-debtor and the decree-holders or claimants (if any) may desire to make, and for holding such inquiry as he may deem

(2) Where there is no dispute as to the fact or extent of the liability of the judgment-debtor to any of the decrees or claims of which the Collector is informed, or as to the relative priorities of such decrees or claims, or as to the liability of any such property for the satisfaction of such decrees or claims, the Collector shall draw up a statement, specifying the amount to be recovered for the discharge of such decrees, the order in which such decrees and claims are to be satisfied, and the immoveable property available for that purpose.

(3) Where any such dispute arises, the Collector shall refer the same, with a statement thereof and his own opinion thereon, to the Court which made the original order for sale, and shall, pending the reference, stay proceedings relating to the subject thereof. The Court shall dispose of the dispute if the matter thereof is within its jurisdiction, or transmit the case to a competent Court for disposal, and the final decision shall be communicated to the Collector who shall then draw up a statement as above provided in accordance with such decision.

5. [S. 322C.] The Collector may, instead of himself issuing the notices and holding the inquiry required by paragraphs 3 and 4, draw up a statement specifying the circumstances of the judgment-debtor and of his immoveable property so far as they are known to the Collector or appear in the records of his office, and forward such statement to the District Court ; and such Court shall thereupon issue the notices, hold the inquiry and draw up the statement required by paragraphs 3 and 4 and transmit such statement to the Collector.

7. [S. 323.] (1) Where the amount to be recovered and the property available have been determined as provided in paragraph 4 or paragraph 5, the Collector may,—

- (a) i it appears that the amount cannot be recovered without the sale of the whole of the property available, proceed to sell such property ; or,
- (b) if it appears that the amount with interest (if any) in accordance with the decree, and, when not decreed, with interest (if any) at such rate as he thinks reasonable, may be recovered without such sale, raise such amount and interest (notwithstanding the original order for sale)—
 - (i) by letting in perpetuity or for a term, on payment of a premium, the whole or any part of the said property ; or
 - (ii) by mortgaging the whole or any part of such property ; or
 - (iii) by selling part of such property ; or
 - (iv) by letting on farm, or managing by himself or another, the whole or any part of such property for any term not exceeding twenty years from the date of the order of sale ; or
 - (v) partly by one of such modes, and partly by another or others of such modes.

(2) For the purpose of managing the whole or any part of such property, the Collector may exercise all the powers of its owner.

(3) For the purpose of improving the saleable value of the property available or any part thereof, or rendering it more suitable for letting or managing, or for preserving the property from sale in satisfaction of an incumbrance, the Collector may discharge the claim of any incumbrancer which has become payable or compound the claim of any incumbrancer whether it has become payable or not, and, for the

If any dispute arises as to the amount due on any incumbrance with which the Collector proposes to deal under this clause, he may institute a suit in the proper Court, either in his own name or the name of the judgment-debtor, to have an account taken, or he may agree to refer such dispute to the decision of two arbitrators, one to be chosen by each party, or of an umpire to be named by such arbitrators.

(4) In proceeding under this paragraph the Collector shall be subject to such rules consistent with this Act as may, from time to time, be made in this behalf by the Local Government.

The words "Local Government" have been substituted for the words "Chief Controlling Revenue Authority" which occurred in the corresponding s. 323, C. P. C., 1882.

8. [S. 324.] Where, on the expiration of the letting or mangement under paragraph 7, the amount to be recovered has not been realized, the Collector shall notify the fact in writing to the judgment-debtor or his representative in interest, stating at the same time that, if the balance necessary to make up the said amount is not paid to the Collector within six weeks from the date of such notice, he will proceed to sell the whole or a sufficient part of the said property; and if on the expiration of the said six weeks, the said balance is not so paid, the Collector shall such sell property or part accordingly.

Recovery of balance (if any) after letting or mangement.

9. [S. 324 A.] (1) The Collector shall, from time to time, render to the Court which made the original order for sale an account of all monies which come to his hands and of all charges incurred by him in the exercise and performance of the powers and duties conferred and imposed on him under the provisions of this schedule, and shall hold the balance at the disposal of the Court.

Property or any part thereof, the rent (if any) from time to time due to a superior holder in respect of such property or part, and, if the Collector so directs, the expenses of any witnesses summoned by him. Sch. III. para. 9.

(3) The balance shall be applied by the Court—

- (a) in providing for the maintenance of such members of the judgment-debtor's family (if any) as are entitled to be maintained out of the income of the property, to such amount in the case of each member as the Court thinks fit ; and,
- (b) where the Collector has proceeded under paragraph 1, in satisfaction of the original decree in execution of which the Court ordered the sale of immoveable property, or otherwise as the Court may under section 73 direct ; or
- (c) where the Collector has proceeded under paragraph 2,—
 - (i) in keeping down the interest on incumbrances on the property ;
 - (ii) where the judgment-debtor has no other sufficient means of subsistence, in providing for his subsistence to such amount as the Court thinks fit ; and
 - (iii) in discharging rateably the claims of the original decree-holder and any other decree-holders who have complied with the said notice, and whose claims were included in the amount ordered to be recovered.

(4) No other holder of a decree for the payment of money shall be entitled to be paid out of such property or balance until the decree-holders who have obtained such order have been satisfied, and the residue (if any) shall be paid to the judgment-debtor or such other person as the Court directs.

Accounts.—The Collector, though bound to render accounts under this paragraph, cannot be compelled to give up the account-books in Court ; nor does this paragraph require him to pay the balance into Court (f).

Sales how to be conducted.

10. [S. 325.] Where the Collector sells any property under this Schedule, he shall put it up to public auction in one or more lots, as he thinks fit, and may—

- (a) fix a reasonable reserved price for each lot ;
- (b) adjourn the sale for a reasonable time whenever, for reasons to be recorded, he deems the adjournment necessary for the purpose of obtaining a fair price for the property ;
- (c) buy in the property offered for sale, and re-sell the same by public auction or private contract, as he thinks fit.

11. [S. 325 A.] (1) So long as the Collector can exercise or perform in respect of the judgment-debtor's immoveable property, or any part thereof, any of the powers or duties conferred or imposed on him by paragraphs 1 to 10, the judgment-debtor or his representative in interest shall be incompetent to mortgage, charge, lease or alienate such property or part except with the written permission of the Collector, nor shall any Civil Court issue any process against such property or part in execution of a decree for the payment of money.

Restrictions as to alienation by judgment-debtor or his representative and prosecution of remedies by decree-holders.

(2) During the same period no Civil Court shall issue any process of execution either against the judgment-debtor or his property in respect of any decree for the satisfaction whereof provision has been made by the Collector under paragraph 7.

(3) The same period shall be excluded in calculating the period of limitation applicable to the execution of any decree affected by the provisions of this paragraph in respect of any remedy of which the decree-holder has been temporarily deprived.

11-13.

"Alienate."—The word alienate in this paragraph contemplates a transfer which is to take effect immediately and not after death. It does not therefore include a disposition of property by will (h).

Alienation subsequent to certification of adjustment.—An intimation by a decree-holder to the Collector to whom the decree is transferred for execution that his claim under the decree has been satisfied by the judgment-debtor, and the recording of such intimation by the Collector amounts to a due certifying of the adjustment of a decree within the meaning of O. 21, r. 2. After the adjustment has been so certified the prohibition against alienation imposed by this paragraph no longer subsists, and it is competent to the judgment-debtor to mortgage, sell or alienate his property (i).

12. [S. 325 B.] Where the property of which the sale has been ordered is situate in more districts than one, the powers and duties conferred and imposed on the Collector by paragraphs 1 to 10 shall be exercised and performed by such one of the Collectors of the said districts as the Local Government may by general rule or special order direct.

The High Courts Act or the Charter Act, 1861.

An Act for Establishing High Courts of Judicature in India (a).
(24 & 25 Vict., C. 104) ; [6th August 1861].

[Repealed and re-enacted with slight modifications by the Government of India Act, 1913.]

Be it enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same as follows :—

1. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by Letters Patent under the great Seal of the United Kingdom, to erect and establish a High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William aforesaid, and by like Letters Patent to erect and establish like High Courts at Madras and Bombay for those Presidencies, respectively. Such High Courts to be established in the said several Presidencies at such time or respective times as to Her Majesty may seem fit, and the High Court to be established under any such Letters Patent in any of the said Presidencies shall be deemed to be established from and after the publication of such Letters Patent in the same Presidency, or such other time as in such Letters Patent may be appointed in this behalf.

2. The High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, and at the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay, respectively, shall consist of a Chief Justice and as many Judges, not exceeding fifteen as Her Majesty may, from time to time, think fit and appoint, who shall be selected from—

- 1st. Barristers of not less than five years' standing ; or
- 2nd. Members of the Covenanted Civil Service of not less than ten years' standing and who shall have served as Zillah Judges or shall have exercised the like powers as those of a Zillah Judge for at least three years of that period ; or
- 3rd. Persons who have held Judicial Office not inferior to that of Principal Sudder Ameen or Judge of a Small Cause Court for a period of not less than five years ; or
- 4th. Persons who have been Pleaders of a Sudder Court or a High Court for a period of not less than ten years, if such Pleaders of a Sudder Court shall have been admitted as Pleaders of a High Court.

Provided that not less than one-third of the Judges of such High Courts, respectively, including the Chief Justice, shall be Barristers, and not less than one-third shall be Members of the Covenanted Civil Service.

(a) By the terms of this Act the exercise of jurisdiction in any part of Her Majesty's Indian Territories by the High Courts was meant to be subject to, and not exclusive of, the general legislative power of the Governor-General in Council. An exercise of legislative authority by the Governor-General in Council, whereby any place or territory is removed from the jurisdiction of the High Courts is one expressly contemplated by this Statute, and by the Letters Patent issued under it. Attorney-General v. Burah (1879) 4 Cal. 172 ; L. R. 5 I. A. 178.

High Courts Act.

3. Provided always, that the persons who at the time of the establishment of such High Court in any of the said Presidencies, are Judges of Supreme Court of Judicature and permanent Judges of the Court of Sudder Dewany Adawlut or Sudder Adawlut of the same Presidency, shall be and become Judges of such High Court without further appointment for that purpose; and the Chief Justice of such Supreme Court shall become the Chief Justice of such High Court.

4. All the Judges of the High Courts established under this Act shall hold their offices during Her Majesty's pleasure provided that it shall be lawful for any Judge of a High Court to resign such office of Judge to the Governor-General of India in Council or Governor in Council of the Presidency in which such High Court is established.

5. The Chief Justice of any such High Court shall have rank and precedence before the other Judges of the same Court, and such of the other Judges of such Court as on its establishment shall have been transferred thereto from the Supreme Court shall have rank and precedence before the Judges of the High Court, not transferred from the Supreme Court, and except as aforesaid, all the Judges of each High Court shall have rank and precedence according to the seniority of their appointments unless otherwise provided in their Patents.

6. Any Chief Justice or Judge, transferred to any High Court from the Supreme Court, shall receive the like salary, and be entitled to the like retiring pension and advantage as he would have been entitled to for and in respect of service in the Supreme Court, if such Court had been continued, his service in the High Court being reckoned as service in the Supreme Court; and except as aforesaid it shall be lawful for the Secretary of State in Council of India to fix the salaries, allowances, furloughs, retiring pensions, and (where necessary) expenses for equipment and voyage of the Chief Justices and Judges of the several High Courts under this Act, and from time to time to alter the same. Provided always such alteration shall not affect the salary of any Judge appointed prior to the date thereof.

7. Upon the happening of a vacancy in the office of Chief Justice, and during any absence of a Chief Justice, the Governor-General in Council or Governor in Council, as the case may be, shall appoint one of the Judges of the same High Court to perform the duties of Chief Justice of the said Court until some person has been appointed by Her Majesty to the office of Chief Justice of the same Court, and has entered on the discharge of the duties of such office, or until the Chief Justice has returned from such absence; and upon the happening of a vacancy in the office of any other Judge of any such High Court, and during any absence of any such Judge, or on the appointment of any such Judge to act as Chief Justice, it shall be lawful for the Governor-General in Council or Governor in Council, as the case may be, to appoint a person, with such qualifications as are required in persons to be appointed to the High Court to act as a Judge of the said High Court, and the person so appointed shall be authorised to sit and to perform the duties of a Judge of the said Court until some person has been appointed by Her Majesty to the office of Judge of the same Court, and has entered on the discharge of the duties of such office, or until the absent Judge has returned from such absence, or until the Governor-General in Council, or Governor in Council as aforesaid, shall see cause to cancel the appointment of such acting Judge.

High Courts Act.

"Upon the happening of a vacancy in the office of any other Judge of any such High Court."—These words refer to a Judge appointed to his office by His Majesty and not a person appointed under the section to act as a Judge (b).

Time for appointment of acting Judge.—There is no limit of time mentioned in this section within which the appointment of an acting Judge is to be made. Such an appointment, therefore, is not invalid because it was not made immediately upon, or within a reasonable time after, the occurrence of the vacancy which it supplied (c).

8. Upon the establishment of such High Court as aforesaid in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal, the Supreme Court and the Court of Sudder Dewany Adawlut and Sudder Nizamut Adawlut at Calcutta, in the same Presidency, shall be abolished :

Abolition of Supreme Courts and Sudder Courts.

And upon the establishment of such High Court in the Presidency of Madras, the Supreme Court and the Court of the Sudder Adawlut and Foudjarry Adawlut in the same Presidency shall be abolished :

And upon the establishment of such High Court in the Presidency of Bombay, the Supreme Court and the Court of Sudder Dewany Adawlut and Sudder Foudjarry Adawlut in the same Presidency shall be abolished :

And the records and documents of the several Courts so abolished in each Presidency shall become, and be, records and documents of the High Court established in the same Presidency.

9. Each of the High Courts to be established under this Act shall have and exercise all such Civil, Criminal, Admiralty, and Vice-Admiralty, Testamentary, Intestate, and Matrimonial Jurisdiction, original and appellate and all such powers and authority for, and in relation to, the administration of justice in the Presidency for which it is established, as Her Majesty may by such Letters Patent as aforesaid, grant and direct, subject, however, to such directions and limitations as to the exercise of original, civil and criminal jurisdiction beyond the limits of the Presidency Towns as may be prescribed thereby ; and save as by such Letters Patent may be otherwise directed, and subject and without prejudice to the legislative powers in relation to the matters aforesaid of the Governor-General of India in Council, the High Court to be established in each Presidency shall have and exercise all jurisdiction and every power and authority whatsoever in any manner vested in any of the Courts in the same Presidency abolished under this Act at the time of the abolition of such last-mentioned Courts.

Subject and without prejudice to legislative powers of the Governor-General in Council.—See notes to cl. 44 of the Letters Patent, infra.

10 Until the Crown shall otherwise provide under the powers of this Act all jurisdiction now exercised by the Supreme Courts of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, respectively, over inhabitants of such parts of India as may not be comprised within the local limits of the Letters Patent to be issued under this Act establishing High Courts at Fort William, Madras and Bombay, shall be exercised, by such High Courts respectively.

High Courts Act.

Repealed by 28 Vict., c. 15, s. 2.

11. Upon the establishment of the said High Courts in the said Presidencies respectively, all provisions then in force in India of Acts of Parliament or of any Orders of Her Majesty in Council, or Charters, or of any Acts of the Legislature of India which at the time or respective times of the establishment of such High Courts are respectively applicable to the Supreme Courts at Fort William in Bengal, Madras and Bombay, respectively, or to the Judges of those Courts shall be taken to be applicable to the said High Courts and the Judges thereof respectively, so far as may be consistent with the provisions of this Act, and the Letters Patent to be issued in pursuance thereof, and subject to the legislative powers in relation to the matters aforesaid of the Governor-General of India in Council.

12. From and after the abolition of the Courts abolished as aforesaid in any of the said Presidencies, the High Court of the same Presidency shall have jurisdiction over all proceedings pending in such abolished Courts at the time of the abolition thereof, and such proceedings and all previous proceedings in the said last-mentioned Courts shall be dealt with as if the same had been had in the said High Court, save that any such proceedings may be continued, as nearly as circumstances permit, under and according to the practice of the abolished Courts respectively.

13. Subject to any laws or regulations which may be made by the Governor-General in Council, the High Courts established in any Presidency under this Act may, by its own rules, provide for the exercise, by one or more Judges or by Division Courts constituted by two or more Judges of the said High Court of the original and appellate jurisdiction vested in such Court, in such manner as may appear to such Court to be convenient for the due administration of justice.

Original jurisdiction.—See notes to s. 115, "Appeal."

Rules.—An order made by a Judge in excess of the jurisdiction delegated to him by rules framed by the High Court under this section is a nullity (d).

14. The Chief Justice of each High Court shall, from time to time, determine what Judge in each case shall sit alone, and what Judges of the Court, whether with or without the Chief Justice, shall constitute the several Division Courts as aforesaid.

15. Each of the High Courts established under this Act shall have superintendence over all Courts which may be subject to its appellate jurisdiction, and shall have power to call for returns, and to direct the transfer of any suit or appeal from any such Court to any other Court of equal or superior jurisdiction, and shall have power to make and issue general rules for regulating the practice and proceedings of such Courts, and also to prescribe forms for every proceeding in the said Court for which it shall think necessary that a form be provided, and also for keeping all books entries, and accounts to be kept by the officers and also to settle tables of fees to be allowed to the Sheriff, Attorneys, and all clerks and officers of Courts and from time to time to alter any such rule or form or table; and the rules so made and the forms so framed, and the tables so settled, shall be used and observed in the said Courts; provided that such general rules and forms and tables be not inconsistent with the provisions of any law in force, and shall before they are issued, have received the sanction, in the Presidency of Fort William of the Governor-General in Council, and in Madras or Bombay, of the Governor in Council of the respective Presidencies.

High Court's power of superintendence: civil proceedings.—The High Courts have under this section not only administrative but judicial powers. In the exercise of its power of superintendence a High Court may direct a Subordinate Court to do its duty, and this power is not limited to cases in which the Subordinate Judge declines to hear or determine a suit or application within his jurisdiction. But a High Court is not competent, in the exercise of this power, to interfere with and set right the orders of a Subordinate Court on the ground that the order of the Subordinate Court has proceeded on an error of law or an error of fact (e). A High Court in the exercise of its superintending power will not ordinarily interfere except in cases of grave and otherwise irreparable injustice (f).

The power of revision conferred upon a High Court by s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code is limited to cases in which no appeal lies to the High Court. There is no such limitation upon the power of superintendence conferred upon a High Court by the present section (g). All that is necessary is that the Court over which the power of superintendence is sought to be exercised should be subject to its appellate jurisdiction. If the subordinate Court is one from which an appeal lies to the High Court, though it be in certain specified cases only, then that Court is subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the High Court and that is sufficient to attract the power of superintendence conferred by this section and, that power may therefore be exercised over the subordinate Court even in cases where a direct appeal does not lie (h).

High Court's powers of superintendence: criminal proceedings.—In the exercise of its power of superintendence the High Court will interfere with an order under s. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, when the Magistrate has acted without jurisdiction, or has exceeded his jurisdiction, or where there has been a material irregularity in the proceedings which amounts to a refusal to exercise jurisdiction or to an usurpation of jurisdiction, or which has prejudiced a party to the proceedings (i).

High Court's power of superintendence: Defence of India Act.—The High Court has no jurisdiction to superintend the proceedings of commissioners appointed under the Defence of India Act, 1915 (j).

When present section to be resorted to.—The special power of superintendence conferred by this section is not as a rule to be exercised in cases where there is an adequate remedy by other proceedings such as appeal or revision (l). That power is as a rule exercised in the following cases :—

- (1) where there is no remedy by revision or appeal (m) ;
- (2) where it is doubtful whether the High Court has the power to revise under s. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure (n) ;
- (3) where the order passed is of an extraordinary character, and there has been a gross failure on the part of the Subordinate Court to do its duty (o).

Appeal.—No appeal lies under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent from an order made by a High Court in the exercise of the power of superintendence under s. 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915, which corresponds with the present section. See cl. 15 of the Letters Patent as amended in 1919.

16. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty, if at any time hereafter Her Majesty see fit so to do, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, to erect and establish a High Court of Judicature in and for any portion of the territories within Her Majesty's dominions in India, not included within the limits of the local jurisdiction of another High Court, to consist of a Chief Justice and of such number of other Judges with such qualifications as are required in persons to be appointed to the High Courts established at the Presidencies hereinbefore mentioned, as Her Majesty from time to time, may think fit and appoint; and it shall be lawful for Her Majesty by such Letters Patent to confer on such Court any such jurisdiction, powers, and authority as under this Act is authorized to be conferred on or will become vested in the High Court to be established in any Presidency hereinbefore mentioned, and, subject to the directions of such Letters Patent all the provisions of this Act having reference to the High Court established in any such Presidency, and to the Chief Justice and other Judges of such Court, and to the Governor-General or Governor of the Presidency in which such High Court is established, shall as far as circumstances may permit, be applicable to the High Court established, in the said territories, and to the Chief Justice and other Judges thereof, and to the person administering the Government of the said territories.

17. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty, if Her Majesty shall so think fit, at any time within three years after the establishment of any High Court under this Act by Her Letters Patent, to revoke all or such parts or provisions as Her Majesty may think fit, of the Letters Patent by which such Court was established and to grant and make such other powers and provisions as Her Majesty may think fit and as might have been granted or made by such first Letters Patent, or, without any such revocation as aforesaid, by like Letters Patent to grant and make any additional or supplementary powers and provisions which might have been granted or made in the first instance.

DESPATCH FROM SECRETARY OF STATE.

SIR CHARLES WOOD'S DESPATCH ACCOMPANYING FIRST LETTERS PATENT OR CHARTER.

Judicial, No. 24.

INDIA OFFICE,
London, 14th May, 1862.

To

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

MY LORD,

I HEREWITH transmit to you the Letters Patent or Charter (p), under the Royal Sign Manual, for the High Court of Judicature to be established in Bengal in accordance with the provisions of the Act 24 and 25, Victoria, Chapter 104, for establishing High Court of Judicature in India, and request that you will take immediate measure for instituting the Court, the first Judges of which, including those appointed under the 3rd section of the Act, are designated in the second clause of the Charter. Those appointed by the Crown will be severally informed by me of their appointments to the Court.

2. This Charter will accomplish the great object which has so long been contemplated, of substituting for the Supreme and Sudder Courts abolished by the Act one High Court of Judicature, possessing the combined powers and authorities of the abolished Courts, and exercising jurisdiction, both over the Provinces under the Sudder Court and over the Presidency Town which forms the local jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.

3. Before I review the provisions in detail, it is necessary that I should direct your attention to the general scope and main provisions of the Act in question.

4. It abolishes, in the first place (as soon as the Charter shall issue), the Supreme Court and the Court of Sudder Dewany Adawlut. It vests in the High Court (by the last provision of section 9) the powers and authorities of those Courts respectively, except so far as the Crown may by such Charter otherwise direct. And (by the first part of the same section) it invests the High Court with such Civil, Criminal, Admiralty, Vice-Admiralty, Testamentary, Intestate and Matrimonial Jurisdiction, and all such powers and authority in relation to the administration of justice in the Presidency, as the same Charter may confer. With respect, therefore, to the fusion of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, it appears obvious that the Act itself speaks, and that to assume and effect the same purpose by affirmative declaration in the Charter would be superfluous. It has been, consequently deemed unnecessary that the Charter should exhibit on the face of it an explicit statement of the powers and jurisdiction to be possessed by the new Court in consequence of the fusion as would have been the proper course if those powers and jurisdiction had been entirely new. Recourse has been had in some places in lieu of such explicit statement to reference to statutory provisions, and in others, to the Charter of the Supreme Court when the object of clearness appeared to require it. But wherever the Charter does not otherwise specify, the High Court will use the powers and administer the jurisprudence appertaining to those Courts respectively to whose authority it now succeeds.

(p) The Letters Patent dated the 14th May, 1862, forwarded with this despatch were afterwards revoked by further Letters Patent, dated 28th December, 1865, for which see post.

Despatch from Secretary of State.

5. But the Charter is intended positively to declare all such Civil, Criminal, and other jurisdictions above specified, as the Crown thinks proper by this Charter to confer on it supplementary or additional to its main purpose, namely, the fusion of the aforesaid Courts.

6. Moreover, the words giving authority to confer on the Court such jurisdiction and such powers and authorities for the administration of justice as the Crown may direct, appear very large and such as, in point of fact, invest the Crown with extensive legislative powers, so far as "the administration of justice," within the meaning of the sections, may require. It has been, however, thought best to use this power very sparingly and simply as ancillary to the real purpose of the Act, namely, the establishment of new Courts.

7. Another reason for the form which the present Letters Patent assume, is to be found in the provisions of section 17 of the Act of last Sessions. By that section power is given to the Crown to recall the Letters Patent establishing the Court, at any time within three years after its establishment, and to grant other Letters Patent in their stead. This provision was inserted in the Act, mainly with the view of enabling Her Majesty's Government to avail themselves of the advice and assistance of the Judges of the Court in framing the more perfect Charter by which the jurisdiction and authority of the Court is to be permanently fixed. On this point, I request you will put yourselves in communication with the Judges of the Court, and, at any time previous to the expiration of two years from the date of establishment of the Court, furnish me with any suggestions they make, or any amendments they may propose in the Letters Patent now transmitted, and I shall be glad if, in proposing alterations, the Judges will put their recommendations as nearly as possible in the form in which they wish them to appear in the future Letters Patent.

8. I proceed to notice, in order, such of the provisions of the Charter as appear to me to call for special remark.

9. By clause 6, power is given to the Chief Justice to appoint the officers of the Court, and to fix their salaries, subject, however, in both cases, to the approval and confirmation of the Governor-General in Council. This provision does not refer to the setting of tables of fees, where fees are allowed, which under section 15 of the Act, is required to be done by the Court.

10. The Supreme Court exercise an authority entirely independent of the Government in regard to its ministerial officers. The Government, however, has always considered itself at liberty to receive representations from any of the officers of the Sudder or Subordinate Courts who felt themselves aggrieved by the orders of the Judicial Authorities, and to express its opinion on the propriety or otherwise of the proceedings of the Courts in such cases. It will be expedient for you to take the question into your consideration, and, after communication with the Court, to adopt some rule in regard to it, which, of course must be uniformly applicable to all the officers of the Court. Constituted as the High Court will be, it will merit all the confidence you can repose in it; but as a question of policy, the extension of the liberty of application to the Government to those who have not hitherto enjoyed it, appears to me preferable to taking it away from those who have heretofore been permitted to avail themselves of it, as a mode of obtaining redress against proceedings alleged by the applicants to be unjust and oppressive.

Despatch from Secretary of State.

11. In regard to the admission of Advocates, Vakeels, and Attorneys, the recommendations of the Law Commissioners have been followed.
Clauses 7-10.

Under the existing practice, the Advocate pleads, and the Attorney acts, for the suitors of the Supreme Court and the Vakeel both pleads and acts for the suitors of the Sudder Court, of which Court the Advocate and Attorney of the Supreme Court are ex-officio Vakeels. These terms are employed in the Charter simply to express the functions of these several classes of practitioners. The Advocate and Attorney will respectively plead and act in the High Court and the Vakeel will both plead and act in the High Court as he did in the Sudder Court. Any person may apply to be admitted either as an Advocate, or Vakeel, or Attorney under the rules which the Court is authorized by the Charter to make, and there is nothing in the Charter to prevent the admission of Advocates and Attorneys to be also Vakeels of the High Court, should the Judges consider such a course to be expedient.

12. The provisions in the Act, section 2, clause 4, which declares that Pleaders of the Sudder Court, "who shall have been admitted as Pleaders of the High Court," shall be eligible, under certain conditions, to the Bench of the Court, implies that a discretionary power may be exercised as to the admission of the present Pleaders of the Sudder Court to the Bar of the High Court. This enactment will account to you for the omission from the Charter of any provision appointing all the present practitioners of the Supreme and Sudder Courts to the High Court. I conclude, however, that unless in any special cases, there are strong reasons to the contrary, the Court will admit the whole of the practitioners in the abolished Courts at the date of their abolition, to be the first Advocates, Vakeels, and Attorneys of the High Court.

13. With reference to the concluding sentence of clause 10, it is to be observed that the Letters Patent contain no provision reserving to the Attorneys of the present Supreme Court the right of pleading after the issue of this Charter, in the Insolvent Court, as newly regulated by clause 17. No such provision, however, is necessary, as the Insolvent Court is a separate tribunal not affected by the Act authorizing the Letters Patent and will continue a separate Court though, for the future, presided over by a Judge of the High Court. The Attorneys, therefore, will, as heretofore, practise in accordance with the rules of the Insolvent Court itself.
Clause 10.

14. By the important provisions contained in the clauses of the Charter, 11 to 38 inclusive, effect is given to the 9th section of the Act, respecting the jurisdictions and powers to be exercised by the High Court.

15. The original civil jurisdiction now exercised by the Supreme Court within the limits of the Presidency Town will henceforth be exercised under the Charter, by the High Court, including in that term (Clause 36 of the Charter) a Judge or Division Court of the High Court, appointed or constituted under the provisions of the 13th section of the Act.
Civil Jurisdiction,
Clause 11.

16. As it is very desirable that every suit should be instituted in the Court of the district in which the property forming the subject of dispute is situated, or in which the cause of action has its origin, or in which the defendant resides or carries on business the jurisdiction hitherto exercised by the Supreme Court (on the ground of constructive inhabitancy or otherwise) over persons and property beyond the local limits of the Presidency Town, but within the limits of the Presidency or Division subject to the authority of the High Court has not been vested in the High Court. The concluding provision of clause 11 provides that the exercise of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the Court shall be confined to the local limits of the Presidency Town, with power, however, to the Court, under clause 13, to call for and try any suit instituted in any Court subject to its superintendence, when, for reasons to be recorded, it shall think proper to do so.

17. The terms of clause 12, defining the original jurisdiction of the High Court as to suits, are nearly similar to those employed in section 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII of 1859), and are intended to include every description of case over which the Mofussil Courts have jurisdiction. By the 8th section of the 21st George III, C. 70, the Supreme Court is precluded from exercising any jurisdiction in any matter concerning the revenue. Further, a decision* of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, pronounced in April 1856, ruled against the exercise of the Ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in matters matrimonial between others than Christians, and even expressed some hesitation as to whether that Court should administer a remedy in such cases on the Civil side. It is one object of the present Charter to do away with all such restrictions and limitations, as far as this can be done without trenching on the proper province of legislation. It has, therefore, been sought to invest the High Court, in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction, with as ample powers in receiving and determining cases of every description, and in applying a remedy to every wrong as are exercised by the Courts not established by Royal Charter, and thus to place the Courts of first instance in the Presidency Towns and in the interior of the country in this respect, as nearly as may be, on the same footing.

18. I shall be glad to be furnished with your opinion, after consultation with the Judges of the Court, as to the concluding portion of clause 12, excluding the jurisdiction of the Court in regard to cases falling within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court of Calcutta, in which the debt or damage or value of the property sued for does not exceed 100 Rupees. Hitherto, I believe, there has been no tendency to bring into the Supreme Court cases cognizable by the Small Cause Court; but should it appear that under the new system, the time of the High Court is unnecessarily taken up with trying cases which might be instituted in the Small Cause Court, it may become a question for consideration whether the sum, excluding the jurisdiction of the High Court, might not be raised to, say, 300 or 500 Rupees.

19. It has been suggested that the Small Cause Court should be placed on the same footing as a Zillah Court in its subjection to the High Court as a Court of appeal and general superintendence. But I do not consider that it was the purpose of the Act of Parliament of last Session that the Crown, in framing a Charter under it for the High Court, should interfere with the present position and jurisdiction of other and independent Courts. This subject, if desirable, is properly to be attained by legislation. Should you be of opinion that the Small Cause Court ought to be placed in the same relation to the High Court as any other Court subject to its appellate jurisdiction and general control, the measure can be carried into effect by an Act of the Governor-General in Council.

20. As already observed, the effect of clause 12 will be to confine the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court within narrower limits than the Civil jurisdiction exercised by the Supreme Court. By clause 13, however, the High Court is empowered to call for and to try, as a Court of first instance, any suit which the law requires to be instituted before some other tribunal. By the exercise of the power thus conferred on it, the High Court will be enabled to obviate all reasonable ground of complaint, when it shall deem that any hardship or injustice is likely to result from the compulsory institution in a Zillah Court of a suit which, but for the change in the system, might have been instituted in the Supreme Court.

Clause 13.

*Reported in 6 Moo. I.A. 348.

Despatch from Secretary of State.

21. The introduction of the words "whether within or without the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William" in this and in several other clauses, may appear to require explanation. The Court about to be established is called in section 2 of the Act, 24 and 25 Victoria, C. 104, a Court "for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William." That title is of course preserved in the Charter. By section 8, the Supreme and Sudder Courts are abolished and by section 9 all their jurisdiction, power, and authority, except when otherwise provided, are vested in the High Court. But the Supreme Court has various original jurisdictions, extending over the whole of the Presidency of Fort William, and also over some of the Non-Regulation Provinces under the Government of India, and the Sudder Court has various appellate jurisdictions extending over the Bengal Division of the Presidency, and also over the Province of Assam and others, which are not properly parts of the Presidency. The result is, that the High Court "for the Bengal Division," succeeding to the powers of both the Supreme and the Sudder Courts, has, in several respects, jurisdictions in territories not within the Bengal Division. As this is the result of the Act, it might not have been necessary to notice it in the Charter, But for the sake of clearness, and in order to show distinctly that the Charter is meant to apply to these extra local jurisdictions, as well as to the strictly local jurisdiction within the Bengal Division, it has been deemed advisable to introduce these words.

22. Clauses 14 and 15 give effect to the recommendation of the Law Commissioners, that the High Court shall have all the appellate jurisdiction which is now exercised by the Sudder Dewany Adawlut, and a new appellate jurisdiction in civil cases, from the Courts of original jurisdiction, constituted by one or more of its own Judges, except that in the case of a decision which has been passed by a majority of the full number of the judges of the Court, the appeal shall lie to Her Majesty in Council.

23. It will appear, from a subsequent clause in the Letters Patent, that the proceedings in the High Court in civil cases are to be regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure enacted by the Legislature of India, of which Act XXIII of 1861 forms a part. By section 23 of the last mentioned Indian Act, provision has been made for a difference of opinion on the hearing of an appeal. A difficulty, however, may occur when two Judges, constituting a Division Court for the trial of cases in the exercise of original jurisdiction differ as to the judgment to be given. For such a case, the Code of Civil Procedure, which is adapted to Courts of first instance presided over by single Judges only, contains no provision. To call in a third Judge, and to re-try the case, with a view to a judgment from which there may be an appeal to the High Court under clause 14 would be productive of unnecessary delay and expense to the parties; and I am of opinion that the Court should make provision for such a contingency, by a rule made under the 13th section of the Act of Parliament, providing either that the judgment shall be in accordance with the opinion of the senior of the Judges constituting the Division Court, or that the final judgment shall be entered pro forma, according to such opinion, such judgment being a judgment for the purpose of an appeal against the same, but not for any other purpose.

Despatch from Secretary of State.

24. The substantive civil law to be administered by the High Court within the jurisdiction of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, respectively, will, until otherwise provided, continue as at present. This, as I have said, it was no part of the purpose of the Act of Parliament or Charter to effect. And the clauses on which I am now commenting are probably superfluous. But they have been introduced to obviate any apprehension which might have been entertained that in fusing the two Courts together, it was intended to fuse also the law which they have respectively hitherto administered, and thus to make a substantial innovation, not only in the tribunals for administration of the law but of the law itself. I trust however, that measures may be taken ere long for effecting great improvements in this respect, by enacting for the British possessions in India a body of substantive law, by which all classes shall be governed, and all transactions shall be regulated, except in cases to which our Judicatures are required to apply the personal laws of any classes of our Indian subjects.

25. Under clauses 21, 22, and 38, no change will be effected by the Charter in the administration of criminal justice in the Presidency Town, or in respect of persons subject to its criminal jurisdiction, residing in the interior of the country. It appears, however, to Her Majesty's Government that some modification of the existing practice, both at the capital and in the provinces, is necessary, and on these points, I shall address you in a separate despatch.

26. The Sudder Court exercises no original jurisdiction, but by clause 23, original criminal jurisdiction, throughout the territories subject to its authority, has been given to the High Court, the principal object being to enable the Judges to hold trials for offences committed out of the Presidency Town, at which from their importance or for other specific cause, it may be expedient that a Judge or Judges of the High Court should preside.

27. The remaining clauses of the Letters Patent, on the subject of the criminal jurisdiction of the High Court, do not call for any particular notice. They contain no special provisions respecting the transfer to that Court of the criminal jurisdiction exercised by the Supreme Court over inhabitants of such parts of India as are not comprised within the local limits of the Letters patent that having been fully provided for by section 10 of the Act under the authority of which the High Court is established.

28. As in the case of the Small Cause Court, you will consult the Judges in regard to the relation in which the High Court is to stand to the Magistrates of Calcutta.

29. Clause 30, respecting the exercise of the jurisdiction by the High Court elsewhere than at its ordinary place of sitting, is a very important provision and one which, I have no doubt, if judiciously carried into effect, will materially tend to the greater efficiency of all the judicatories subject to the superintendence and authority of the High Court. Circumstances may frequently arise when the deputation of a Judge or Judges of the High Court would be a measure of the highest expediency. For such cases the clause under consideration will enable the Government to provide by deputing one or more Judges from the High Court, who would avail themselves of the opportunity thus afforded them of making a searching inquiry into the manner in which the local Courts were performing their duties.

Despatch from Secretary of State.

30. With reference to this clause, it has been considered whether the precedence of section 14 of the Act of Parliament should not be followed and the authority to make the necessary arrangements for exercise of the Court's jurisdiction out of the usual place of sitting vested in the Chief Justice. On the whole, it was thought that acts partaking so much of an administrative character might be more perfectly performed by the Governor-General in Council. But it is scarcely for me to add that Her Majesty's Government entertain full confidence that the Chief Justice will be the authority habitually consulted in the matter.

31. The Supreme Court exercise at present, Admiralty Jurisdiction under its Charter. The Chief Justice has Vice-Admiralty Jurisdiction under the commission of the 19th July, 1822, and all or any of the Judges of the Supreme Court may be appointed Commissioners, under the provisions of 39 and 40, George III, C. 79, section 25, for the trial and adjudication of prize causes and other maritime questions arising in India. By the present Charter, the whole of these jurisdictions and power will be vested in the High Court, and as in the Act above cited, the expression "other maritime questions" in general, mention is made of all the jurisdictions conferred as above-mentioned in the clauses of the Charter, providing both for the civil and criminal maritime jurisdiction of the High Court.

Clauses 33 and 34. 32. The clauses respecting testamentary and intestate jurisdiction do not call for any remark.

33. Her Majesty's Government are desirous of placing the Christian subjects of the Crown within the Presidency in the same position under the High Court, as to "matters matrimonial" in general as they now are under the Supreme Court, and this they believe to be effected by clause 35 of the Charter. But they consider it expedient that the High Court should possess, in addition, the power of decreeing divorce, which the Supreme Court does not possess, in other words, that the High Court should have the same jurisdiction as the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England, established in virtue of 20 and 21 Vic., C. 85, and in regard to which further provisions were made by 22 and 23 Vic., C. 61, and 23 and 24 Vic., C. 144. The Act of Parliament for establishing the High Court, however, does not purport to give to the Crown the power of importing into the Charter all the provisions of the Divorce Court Act, and some of them the Crown clearly could not so import, such for instance as those which prescribe the period of re-marriage, or those which exempt from punishment clergymen refusing to re-marry adulterers. All these are, in truth, matters for Indian legislation, and I request that you will immediately take the subject into your consideration and introduce into your Council a Bill for conferring upon the High Court the jurisdiction and powers of the Divorce Court in England, one of the provisions of which should be to give an appeal to the Privy Council in those cases in which the Divorce Court Act gives an appeal to the House of Lords.

34. The object of the proviso at the end of clause 35 is to obviate any doubt that may possibly arise as to whether, by vesting the High Court with the powers of the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England, it was intended to take away from the Courts within the divisions of the Presidency not established by Royal Charter, any jurisdiction which they might have in matters Matrimonial, as, for instance, in a suit for alimony between Armenians or Native Christians. With any such jurisdiction it is not intended to interfere.

Despatch from Secretary of State.

35. Clause 36 refers to the powers of single Judges and Division Courts, appointed or constituted under the provisions of the 13th section of the Act. By section 14 of the Act, the power of determining from time to time what Judge in each case shall sit alone, and what Judges shall constitute Division Courts, is placed in the hands of the Chief Justice. It will be observed that the law does not require that a Judge selected from the Bar shall necessarily form a part of every Division Court, and it will be for the Chief Justice to consider whether, in cases exclusively between Natives, it will not be desirable to follow, as far as possible, the course which has already been resolved upon in regard to the cases under appeal to the Sudder Court at the time of its abolition, and to constitute the Division Court of Judges trained in the country, whose knowledge of the Native language will obviate the expense and delay of translating the proceedings.

36. Clause 37 is a very important one, and there is little doubt, will prove a very salutary provision. It has, therefore, been inserted, although the change introduced is somewhat greater and more substantial than is generally aimed at in this Charter. It extends to the High Court the Code of Civil Procedure enacted by the Legislature of India for the Court, not established by Royal Charter, and thus accomplishes the object so long contemplated of substituting one simple Code of Procedure for the various systems (corresponding to its common law, equity and admiralty jurisdiction) which have been in operation in the Supreme Court since the date of its establishment.

37. In regard to the rules respecting appeals to the Privy Council the object has been to avoid unnecessary innovation where so much of change, with its necessary inconvenience, is unavoidable. The existing rules which regulate these appeals are, therefore, left in force, with one or two additions only, which experience in the Court of the Judicial Committee has found advisable. For instance, clause 40 is introduced, as it had been commonly introduced, of late years in the appeal rules of other dependencies of Great Britain in order to remove all doubts as to the power of the High Court to allow an appeal to the Council from interlocutory judgments.

38. It will, however, be obvious to you that the rules, as now framed, will be liable to the reproach of confusion, and perhaps of uncertainty. They will be compounded of those contained in the Charter and those already in force which will necessitate reference to several documents. You will agree with me that a simple and intelligible Code of Rules, to regulate appeals to the Privy Council from the new High Courts, or rather from the High Courts in general which may be constituted under the Act of Parliament, will be of great advantage to the suitors and the public. I should wish, therefore, that one of the first objects of the Judges, as soon as the amount of labour thrown on them by their new position may allow it, might be to prepare suggestions for such a Code of Rules, which might then be reduced into a complete shape by the authority of the Privy Council at Home.

39. In forwarding the Letters Patent to the Judges of the High Court, you are requested to furnish them with a copy of this despatch. I trust that the Letters Patent taken in connection with the Act for establishing the Court, will be found to contain everything requisite for enabling the Court to proceed at once to the discharge of its important duties. It is possible that omissions may be discovered by the legal authorities in India, which may impede the proper action of the Court, and should the Judges represent to you that such is the case you will take immediate steps for supplying what is wanting by such legislative measures as you may consider most expedient for remedying the defects brought under your consideration.

Despatch from Secretary of State.

40. I cannot conclude this despatch without expressing the deep interest felt by Her Majesty's Government in the success of this important measure. The Crown by its Letters Patent has sanctioned the establishment of a tribunal as the Chief Court of Justice in India, which in the trained learning of the Judges selected from the Bar, and in the knowledge of the language, feelings, and habits of the Natives of that country possessed by the other members of the Court, combines the most material elements of success. And Her Majesty's Government look with confidence to the zealous exertions and cordial co-operation of the Judges to place the administration of Justice in India, under the controlling authority of the Court in such a state of efficiency as will render it in every respect adequate to its ends, and satisfactory to the people and to the Government.

I have the honour to be,

My Lord.

Your Lordship's most obedient, humble Servant,

(Signed) C. WOOD.

Letters Patent for the High Court of Calcutta.

(December 28, 1865.)

[N.B.—The Letters Patent for the High Courts of Madras and Bombay are mutatis mutandis in almost the same terms.]

VICTORIA, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith. To, all to whom these presents shall come, greeting : Whereas by an Act of Parliament passed in the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth years of Our reign, entitled “An Act for establishing High Courts of Judicature in India” it was, amongst other things, enacted that it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, to erect and establish a High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, aforesaid, and that such High Court should consist of a Chief Justice and as many judges; not exceeding fifteen, as Her Majesty might, from time to time, think fit to appoint, who shall be selected from among persons qualified as in the said Act is declared : Provided always that the persons who at the time of the establishment of such High Court were Judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature and permanent Judges of the Court of Sudder Dewany Adawlut or Sudder Adawlut of the same Presidency, should be and become Judges of such High Court without further appointment for that purpose, and the Chief Justice of such Supreme Court should become the Chief Justice of such High Court, and that upon the establishment of such High Court as aforesaid, the Supreme Court and the Court of Sudder Dewany Adawlut and Sudder Nizamut Adawlut at Calcutta, in the said Presidency, should be abolished.

And that the High Court of Judicature so to be established should have and exercise all such Civil, Criminal, Admiralty

1. Now know ye that We, upon full consideration of the premises, and of Our special grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, have thought fit to revoke, and do by these presents (from and after the date of the publication thereof as hereinafter provided, and subject to the provisions thereof) revoke Our said Letters Patent of the fourteenth of May, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, except so far as the Letters Patent of the fourteenth year of His Majesty King George the Third, dated the twenty-sixth March, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-four, establishing a Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal were revoked or determined thereby.

2. And We do by these presents grant, direct and ordain that notwithstanding the revocation of the said Letters Patent of the fourteenth of May, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, the High Court of Judicature, called the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, shall be and continue, as from the time of the original erection and establishment thereof, the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William aforesaid; and that the said Court shall be and continue a

In making rules for the qualifications, &c., of Advocates, Vakeels and Attorneys.

(b) The words "And we do hereby ordain that every such appointment shall be forthwith submitted to the approval of the Governor-General in Council and shall be either confirmed or disallowed by the Governor-General in Council", which occurred in this clause, were omitted by the Amending Letters Patent dated 11th March 1919.

empowered to remove, or to suspend from practice, on reasonable cause, the said Advocates, Vakeels, or Attorneys-at-law; and no person whatsoever but such Advocates, Vakeels, or Attorneys shall be allowed to act or to plead for, or on behalf of any suitor in the said High Court, except that any suitor shall be allowed to appear, plead, or act on his own behalf or on behalf of a co-suitor. Cls. 10, 11.

Power to remove or suspend on reasonable cause.—The words “on reasonable cause” are not confined to purely professional misconduct, but embrace all causes which may afford reasonable ground for suspension or removal (c). As to what is reasonable cause, see the undermentioned cases (d)

An Attorney is an officer of the Court, and any person aggrieved by the misconduct of an Attorney has the right to invoke the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Court (e).

Professional etiquette affecting counsel.—It is unprofessional for counsel to cross-examine a witness as to facts about which he has no instructions but are within his personal knowledge.* When counsel during the hearing of a case calls for the production of a book, which is produced and handed to him by his opponent with certain pages marked as those only to which he may refer in respect of the subject-matter of his cross-examination, it is improper for counsel who calls for the book to inspect any of the other pages. There is nothing unprofessional in counsel giving evidence in a case in which he appears as counsel, though, as a general practice it is undesirable (f). Where counsel accepts a brief to appear at the trial of a case and is paid the consultation fee and the fee for attending the trial, he should return both the fees if after holding consultation he leaves for another place and is unable to attend the trial of the case; the consultation must be deemed to be held with a view to his attending the trial (g).

Appeal.—See notes to clause 39 below.

Civil jurisdiction of the High Court.

11. And We hereby ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall have and exercise ordinary original civil jurisdiction within such local limits as may, from time to time, be declared and prescribed by any law made by competent legislative authority for India and until some local limits shall be so declared and prescribed within the limit declared and prescribed by the

Cls. 11, 12. proclamation fixing the limits of Calcutta, issued by the Governor-General in Council, on the 10th day of September, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four and the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the said High Court shall not extend beyond the limits for the time being declared and prescribed as the local limits of such jurisdiction (h).

Local limits.—Power is given by s 109 of the Government of India Act to the Governor General in Council to alter the local limits of the jurisdiction of High Courts.

Issue of warrant.—The High Court has no power in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction to issue a warrant against the person of a judgment-debtor and appoint a special bailiff to execute it against the judgment-debtor wherever he might be found in the Presidency (i). Such an order, however, may be made for the arrest of a defendant who has been guilty of a contempt of Court (j), for an order for attachment for contempt is not an order made in exercise of the High Court's civil jurisdiction (k).

12. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction shall be empowered to receive, try, and determine suits of every description, if, in the case of suits for land or other immoveable property, such land or property shall be situated, or, in all other cases, if cause of action shall have arisen either wholly, or in case the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained, in part, within the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the said High Court, or if the defendant at the time of the commencement of the suit shall dwell or carry on business, or personally work for gain, within such limits; except that the said High Court shall not have such original jurisdiction in cases falling within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court at Calcutta, in which the debt or damage, or value of the property sued for does not exceed one hundred rupees.

Scope of the clause.—Barring certain suits specified at the end of this clause, the High Courts of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, are empowered to try the following suits in the exercise of their ordinary original civil jurisdiction, namely—

(h) In the Madras and Bombay Letters Patent the words are "by any law made by the Governor in Council." In the same Letters Patent, for the words "within the limits declared and proscribed," &c., are substituted "within the limits of the local jurisdiction of the said High Court of—

CL. 12.

- (a) if the land or property is situated wholly within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the said High Courts; or
- (b) where the land or property is situated in part only within the said limits, if the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained (1). See notes below, "Suit for land of which a part is within jurisdiction," p. 1038.

II. Suits other than those for land—

- (a) if the cause of action has arisen wholly within the said limits; or
- (b) where the cause of action has arisen in part only within the said limits, if the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained, or
- (c) if the defendant at the time of the commencement of the suit dwells or carries on business or personally works for gain within such limits.

"Suits for land or other immoveable property."—This expression has given rise to conflicting decisions. It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta, that a "suit for land" within the meaning of this clause is a suit substantially for land that is, for the purpose of acquiring title to or possession of land (a), or for declaring any interest in land (n). A agrees in Calcutta to sell to B land situated outside the original jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court. If A fails to perform his contract and B sues A for specific performance, the suit is one for land, and it will not be entertained by the Court, the land being situated outside its jurisdiction. But if B fails to perform his contract, and A sues B for specific performance, the suit is not one for land, and hence the suit will lie in the Calcutta Court (o). Similarly, a suit by a mortgagee for specific performance of an agreement to execute a mortgage of land is a suit for land, and it will not be entertained by the Calcutta Court, if the land is situated beyond the original jurisdiction of the Court (p). And it has been laid down by the same Court that suits for redemption or foreclosure or for sale of mortgaged property are all suits for land, and they will not be entertained by that Court if the land is situated beyond its original jurisdiction (q). In a recent case the same Court held that a suit by a lessee for a declaration that the lease was a subsisting lease and for rents and profits is a suit for land, and it will not be entertained if the land is situated beyond its jurisdiction (r). In short, the Calcutta High Court would appear to hold that suits of the kind mentioned in cls. (a) to (c) of s. 16 of the Code are all suits for land (s). The same view has been taken by the Madras High Court (t). According to the latter Court, a suit in which a decree is asked for operating directly on the land is a suit for land. It has thus been held that a suit for maintenance in which the plaintiff prays that the amount may be charged on specific land is a suit for land, for if a charge is created by the decree, it can be enforced by a sale of the land (v). The High Court of Bombay has given a restricted meaning to the

Cl. 12. expression "suits for land." Thus it was held by that Court in Holkar v. Dadabhai (v) that it had jurisdiction under this clause to try a suit for specific performance of an agreement to execute a mortgage made in Bombay, though relating to land situate outside the original jurisdiction, and to order the mortgage-debt to be realised by sale of such land. Such a suit, according to the Bombay Court, is not a suit for land, though according to the Calcutta and Madras decisions it would be a suit for land. Similarly it has been held by the same High Court that a suit for foreclosure of a mortgage of land is not a suit for land, and that it could therefore be entertained though the land is situate outside the jurisdiction of the Court (w). According to the Calcutta and Madras decisions such a suit would be a suit for land. Similarly a suit by a purchaser for specific performance of an agreement to sell land situated outside the jurisdiction of the Court is not a suit for land according to the Bombay High Court (x). According to the Calcutta High Court, such a suit is a suit for land. In a recent case from Calcutta where the suit was one for sale on a mortgage and all the immoveable properties comprised in the mortgage were situated outside the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court, the Privy Council held that the suit was one for land within the meaning of cl. 12 and that the High Court therefore had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit (y).

Suits for partition of land and suits for a declaration of title to land, are suits for land not only according to the Calcutta (z) and Madras High Courts (a), but also according to the Bombay High Court (b); such suits will not be entertained by any of these Courts if the land is situated outside the jurisdiction of the Court. As regards suits for recovery of title-deeds of land, it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta, that such suits are not suits for land within the meaning of this clause, although the suit may involve question of title (c). On the other hand, it has been held by the High Court of Bombay that such a suit is a suit for land, if the substantial question to be decided is a question of title to the land (d). A suit for damages for trespass to land has been held by the High Court of Calcutta to be a suit for land (e). There seems to be no doubt that it would be treated as such by the High Courts of Bombay and Madras.

In Holkar v. Dadabhai (f), it was observed in effect by Sir Charles Sargent that the High Courts of India have all the powers of a Court of Equity in England for enforcing their decrees in personam; in other words, the High Courts in India can entertain all suits in personam which could be entertained by the Court of Equity in England. It is, however, a remarkable fact that the Courts of Equity in England do not entertain suits in personam unless the defendant resides or carries on business within the jurisdiction. In Holkar v. Dadabhai, the contract for mortgage was made in Bombay, but the defendant did not reside or carry on business in Bombay. The suit was one for specific performance and the Court held, applying the English law, that the suit was not one for land within the meaning of cl. 12, and that the suit being one other than a suit for land, the second part of cl. 12 applied, and that as leave to sue was obtained [part of the cause of action having arisen in Bombay, namely, the making of the contract], it had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. With great respect, it is submitted, it is an entirely unwarranted extension of the doctrine "Equity acts in personam." See notes to s. 16 of the Code, under the heads "Equity Acts in personam," and "Suits in personam," p. 70 above.

We shall now turn to cases decided by the Calcutta High Court in which it was held that the suit was not one for land. From the point of view of the Calcutta High Court, to constitute a suit one for land, the suit must have been brought for the purpose of acquiring possession of, or of establishing a title to, or an interest in, the land which is the subject of dispute. But it does not necessarily follow that every suit which has any reference to land is therefore a suit for land (g). In the Land Mortgage Bank v. Sudurudeen Ahmed, Trevelyan, J. said: "I decline to hold that wherever land has anything to do with a suit it is therefore a suit for land" (h). Thus a suit by trustees against their co-trustees to enforce their right under a deed of trust to act jointly with the defendants as shebaita and managers of lands dedicated to an idol, in which neither the plaintiffs nor the defendants had any beneficial interest, is not a suit for land, and may be entertained by the High Court, though the lands may be situate beyond the local limits of its original jurisdiction (i). So a suit for an account and dissolution of partnership is not a suit for land, merely because one asset of the partnership happens to be a tea garden situate in the mufassal (j). And it has been held by the same Court that a suit for administration, and as incidental to that suit, for a declaration that certain leases granted by the executors of the estate cannot stand as against the plaintiff (the beneficiary), is not a suit for land (k). In a recent case where a suit was brought by three out of four executors against the fourth executor for his removal from the office of trustee and executor and for accounts of the assets of the deceased, and for administration of his estate, it was held by the Privy Council that the suit was not one for land, and that the High Court of Madras had jurisdiction to entertain the suit, though the property left by the deceased was outside its jurisdiction, as a part of the cause of action had arisen within the jurisdiction, and the defendant was dwelling in Madras at the time of the institution of the suit (l). In a recent Calcutta case, it was held that the High Court may entertain a suit by an executor for a declaration and injunction (though not for possession) in respect of the estate of the testator consisting of several immoveable properties, provided one at least of the properties is situated within its original jurisdiction, and leave of the Court is obtained. It is not necessary that the cause of action should arise within the local limits, or be specifically with reference to that property which is situated within those limits (m). The above cases would be decided the same way by the High Court of Bombay.

"All other cases"—suits for partition of moveable and immoveable property, the latter being situated wholly outside jurisdiction.—The words "all other cases" in this clause do not include cases of suits for immoveable plus moveable property. They refer to cases in which immoveable property is not involved. Hence if A sues B for partition of moveable and immoveable property, and the immoveable property is situated wholly outside the jurisdiction, the suit must be dismissed as to such property, even if the leave of the Court has been obtained. The reason is that the immoveable property being situated wholly outside the jurisdiction, the Court has no power to grant leave to sue as regards such property (n). In such a case the plaint may be amended with the leave of the Court by omitting therefrom so much as relates to immoveable property, and the suit may be proceeded with so far as it relates to moveable property (o).

Suit for land of which a part is within jurisdiction.—Where there are several immoveable properties, then if even one of them is situated within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of a Chartered High Court, the Court can entertain a suit for a partition of all the properties including those situated without the said limits provided the leave of the Court has been first obtained. The reason is that though the suit is one for land, the Court may, by granting leave, entertain the suit, a portion of the land being within those limits (oo). If no such leave is obtained, the Court can proceed only with the suit so far as it relates to the immoveable properties situated within the said limits (p). For the same reason it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that where some of the mortgaged properties included in the mortgage-deed are within, and some without, the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the Court, the Court has jurisdiction, on leave to sue being obtained, to entertain a suit on the mortgage in respect of all the properties including those situated beyond the said limits (q). See notes "Scope of the clause," p. 1034 above.

Leave of Court.—The leave under this clause is a condition precedent to jurisdiction, so that unless the condition is fulfilled by obtaining the necessary leave to sue, the Court will have no jurisdiction to entertain the suit (r). Such leave affords the very foundation of the jurisdiction: hence it must be obtained before the institution of the suit; it cannot be granted after the suit has been instituted. The leave granted is confined to the cause or causes of action set forth in the plaint at the time when the leave was granted: hence the plaint cannot be amended so as to alter the cause of action (s). But if the cause of action is not altered, there is no objection to an amendment (t). If a suit is brought in a Chartered High Court with leave of the Court, but there is nothing on the face of the plaint to show that any part of the cause of action arose within its jurisdiction, the plaintiff may be allowed to prove by evidence that part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction, and if it is necessary to amend the plaint by adding a statement that part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction, the amendment may be allowed, for such an amendment does not alter or add to the original cause of action (u). Where a defendant who does not reside within the jurisdiction and against whom the cause of action has arisen in part only within the jurisdiction, is added after the institution of the suit, leave under this clause must be obtained at the time of the application for adding him as a party, though leave was obtained when the suit was originally filed (v). The force of an order granting leave to institute a suit is exhausted when the suit is instituted in pursuance of the order. Hence if the suit is withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit upon the same cause of action, and a fresh suit is brought, there is nothing to prevent the Court from granting fresh leave to institute the fresh suit (w). Cl. 12.

The leave under this section must be distinctly applied for and obtained; it cannot be implied from the fact that the plaintiff was granted leave to sue as a pauper (x).

Cause of action.—As to the definition of “cause of action,” see notes to s. 20 of the Code, “Cause of action,” p. 86 above.

Cause of action in suits on contract.—It is now settled that in the case of a suit on a contract, “the cause of action” within the meaning of the present clause, means the whole cause of action, and that it consists of the making of the contract and of its breach in the place where it ought to be performed. Thus to give jurisdiction to the High Court of Bombay, the plaintiff must show that the contract was made in Bombay, that Bombay was the place in which the contract was to be performed, and that the breach took place in Bombay. The making of the contract in Bombay constitutes part only of the cause of action. And so does the breach thereof occurring in Bombay. If part only of the cause of action arises in Bombay, the High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit on a contract, unless the leave of the Court has been previously obtained (y). A suit on a promissory note which is neither made nor made payable in Bombay cannot be brought in the High Court of Bombay, though the note was passed for the balance of account in respect of transactions effected in Bombay (z). See also notes to s. 20 of the Code, “Cause of action in suits on contracts,” p. 86 above.

“If the cause of action shall have arisen in part.”—A in Bombay gave instructions to B, a commission agent carrying on business at Phulgaon, to enter into certain transactions on his behalf. Accounts were sent by B from Phulgaon to A in Bombay. B failed to pay the amount due to A at the foot of the account between him and A. Thereupon A sued B in the High Court of Bombay after obtaining leave under this clause on the ground that part of the cause of action had arisen in Bombay. On behalf of B it was contended that no part of the cause of action had arisen in Bombay, and that leave to sue ought not to have been granted at all. But this contention was overruled, and it was held that instructions having been sent to B from Bombay, and that accounts having been rendered to A at Bombay, and that the demand for payment having been made from Bombay, a material part of the cause of action had arisen in Bombay, and that the leave to sue had been rightly granted (a).

It has been held that the words “if the cause of action shall have arisen in part” refer to a material part of the cause of action (b). There is nothing, it is submitted, in the language of this clause to warrant such a construction, though the Court may, in the exercise of its discretion, refuse to grant leave to sue if a material part of the cause of action has not arisen within its jurisdiction. The reason is that in dealing with applications for leave to sue under this clause, the Court is not precluded from taking the question of convenience into consideration (c).

Part of the cause of action cannot be said to arise at a place where payment was not originally contracted for, merely because after performance of the contract and without any consideration a promise is made to pay at that place (c).

For other cases see notes to s. 20 above, “Cause of action in suits on contracts,” p. 86 above.

Cl. 12.

Defendant.—The word “defendant” in this clause means all the defendants, where there are two or more defendants to a suit. It is not sufficient that one of the defendants dwells or carries on business within the jurisdiction (d).

Jurisdiction over non-resident foreigners.—If the cause of action has arisen within the jurisdiction of a Chartered High Court, the Court has jurisdiction over a foreigner defendant notwithstanding the fact that he did not dwell within the jurisdiction at the time of the institution of the suit (e). But the jurisdiction in such cases ought to be exercised with great caution (f).

It is doubtful, however, whether the mere fact of carrying on business through an agent within the local limits of the jurisdiction of a British Indian Court would give that Court jurisdiction over a non-resident foreigner (g).

Dwell—See notes to s. 16 of the Code, “Dwell within the meaning of clause 12 of the Charter,” on p. 80 above.

“Carries on business”—See notes to s. 16 of the Code, under the same head on p. 81 above.

“Personally works for gain.”—See notes to s. 16 of the Code, under the same head on p. 82 above.

Suits against companies.—See notes to s. 20, “Suits against corporations : Explanation II,” on p. 89 above.

“Ordinary jurisdiction.”—The “ordinary” jurisdiction of the High Court embraces all such as is exercised in the ordinary course of law, and without any special occasion or special order being necessary therefor (h).

Appeal.—The leave under this clause is granted on an ex parte application. If an order is made granting leave, the defendant may apply to have the order set aside, or he may wait until the hearing, or the legality of the order may be called in question as a separate issue for trial at the hearing of the suit (i). If the defendant does not wait until the hearing, and applies to have the order granting the leave set aside, and if the application is rejected, he may appeal from the order rejecting the application (j). Similarly if the plaintiff applies for leave, and leave is refused, the plaintiff may appeal from the order (k). The appeal would be one under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent.

The order granting or refusing leave by one Judge cannot be superseded by another Judge except on appeal from the order (l).

Waiver.—There are two classes of cases to be considered under this head, namely,—

- (1) where the plaintiff in his plaint alleges that portion of the cause of action arose outside the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction and fails to take leave of the Court and the case comes on for trial ;
- (2) where the plaintiff in his plaint alleges that the whole cause of action arose within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction, but it turns out at the trial that portion of the cause of action arose within and portion outside the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction.

(l) Vithelipa v. Cundasawmy (1875) 8 M. H. C. 21.

In case (1), the defendant may by appearing and pleading waive the objection to the jurisdiction. Thus it was held by the High Court of Calcutta (m), following Moore v. Gamgee (n), in a case where the plaintiff alleged in his plaint that portion of the cause of action had arisen outside the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction but no leave was obtained by the plaintiff under clause 12, and the defendant without raising any objection to the jurisdiction filed his written statement and applied subsequently for a commission to examine witnesses, that the defendant had waived his objection to the jurisdiction. This decision proceeded on the ground that the absence of leave under this clause did not go to the root of the jurisdiction of the Court. This decision is hardly consistent with the observations of Sir Richard Couch in Hadjee Ismail v. Hadjee Mahomed (o), where the learned Judge said that an order under clause 12 was not a mere formal order or an order merely regulating the procedure in the suit, but one that has the effect of giving jurisdiction to the Court which it otherwise would not have, and the judgment of Telang, J., in Rampurab v. Premsookh (p), in which it was said that such leave affords the very foundation of the jurisdiction.

In case (2) where the plaintiff sets up a complete jurisdiction in the court to try the case and the defendant is called upon to plead to this, if it turns out that the Court had not complete jurisdiction, obviously the defendant cannot be held bound by the doctrine of estoppel on the ground that he waived the objection of want of jurisdiction (q).

S. 21 of the Code, which is a new section, is not one of the sections mentioned in s. 120. Does it therefore apply to Chartered High Courts? If it does, it follows that there can be a waiver of an objection as to the place of suing. But does not the word "revisional" in s. 21 show that the section was not intended to apply to Chartered High Courts, but to those Courts only to which ss. 16, 17 and 20 apply? See in this connection cl. 44 below.

13. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall have power to remove and to try and determine, as Court of extraordinary original jurisdiction, any suit being or falling within the jurisdiction of any Court, whether within or without the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, subject to its superintendence, when the said High Court shall think proper to do so, either on the agreement of the parties to that effect or for purposes of justice the reasons for so doing being recorded on the proceedings of the said High Court.

"When the High Court shall think proper to do so."—In a suit for immoveable property instituted in the Dinagepur Court, the defendant applied for its transfer to the Calcutta High Court under this clause, the grounds of the application being (1) that questions of difficulty arose in the suit; (2) that the defendant's witnesses lived in Calcutta, and that it would be impossible for her to go to Dinagepur and take her " Subject to its superintendence."—Note that the words used in this clause are " subject to its superintendence," while those used in sec. 15 of the Charter Act [now s. 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915] are " subject to its appellate jurisdiction." The power of transfer contained in sec. 15 of the Charter Act has nothing to do with the power of removal conferred by the present clause, and the Letters Patent make superintendence, not appellate jurisdiction, the condition of the exercise of the power of removal conferred by this clause. It has accordingly been held that the Court of the Political Resident at Aden being a Court subject to the superintendence of the High Court of Bombay within the meaning of the present clause, the High Court of Bombay has power to remove a suit from that Court to itself for trial and determination, though the Aden Court is not subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the High Court (s).

Transfer of suit from Presidency Small Cause Court to High Court.

—The High Court has power to transfer to itself a suit from the Presidency Small Cause Court, and the order for such transfer can be made, if allowed by the rules of the High Court, by a single Judge of that Court (t).

Powers of High Court in dealing with suits transferred under this clause.—The powers of the High Court in dealing with suits transferred under this clause would seem to be confined to the powers which, but for the transfer, might have been exercised by the Court from which the suit is transferred (u). See cl. 20 below.

14. And We do further ordain that, where plaintiff has several causes of action against a defendant, such causes of action not being for land or other immoveable property, and the said High Court shall have original jurisdiction in respect of one of such causes of action, it shall be lawful for the said High Court to call on the defendant to show cause why the several causes of action should not be joined together in one suit, and to make such order for trial of the same as to the said High Court shall seem fit.

Joinder of several causes of action.

Joinder of causes of action.—Where a suit is founded upon two causes of action, one of which is alleged to have arisen partly within the jurisdiction of the Bombay High Court and the other wholly outside the jurisdiction, the High Court has power, after granting leave to sue in respect of the former cause of action under clause 12, to allow the plaintiff to join the latter in the same suit. There is nothing in the present clause to show that the power of the Court to make such an order under this clause is limited to cases where one of the causes of action has arisen wholly within the jurisdiction (v).

Meaning of “judgment” as used in this clause:—

1. Calcutta High Court.—Though there are many cases decided by the High Courts under this clause, there are only four or five in which an effort has been made to define the term “judgment” as used in this clause. The decision of the Calcutta High Court in the case of The Justices of the Peace for Calcutta v. The Oriental Gas Co. (w), stands at the head of them all. In that case Couch, C.J., said: “We think ‘judgment’ in clause 15 means a decision which affects the merits of the question between the parties by determining some right or liability. It may be either final or preliminary or interlocutory, the difference between them being that a final judgment determines the whole cause or suit, and a preliminary or interlocutory judgment determines only a part of it leaving other matters to be determined.” “This definition is now of some antiquity, and is rapidly becoming, if it has not already become, almost classical” (x). The point actually decided in The Justices of the Peace for Calcutta v. The Oriental Gas Co. was that no appeal lies under this clause from an order directing the issue of a mandamus to the Justices of the Peace for Calcutta to compel them to refer to arbitration a question of compensation. The above decision was followed by a decision of the same Court in Haidjee Ismail

Let. Pat. [Cal., Bom., and Mad.]

- CL. 15. v. Hadjee Mahomed (y), where it was held that an appeal lies under this clause from an order refusing to set aside an order granting leave to sue to the plaintiff under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent. Referring to the said order, Couch, C.J., said: "It is not a mere formal order or an order merely regulating the procedure in the suit, but one that has the effect of giving a jurisdiction to the Court which it otherwise would not have. And it may fairly be said to determine some right between them, viz., the right to sue in a particular Court and to compel the defendants who are not within its jurisdiction to come in and defend the suit, or, if they do not, to make them liable to have a decree passed against them in their absence." In a later case, Garth, C.J., said: "I think that the word 'judgment' means a judgment or decree which decides the case one way or the other in its entirety, and that it does not mean a decision or order of an interlocutory character which merely decides some isolated point, not affecting the merits or the result of the entire suit" (z).

The definition of "judgment" in the case of Justices of the Peace for Calcutta (a) was adopted by a majority of the same High Court in a later case where it was held that an appeal lies under this clause from an order made by a single Judge of that Court under O. 45, r. 15, refusing to transmit for execution an Order of His Majesty in Council (b). The decision was affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council (c). Referring to the judgment of the majority, their Lordships said: "These learned Judges held (and their Lordships think rightly) that whether the transmission of an order under s. 610 now O. 45, r. 15] would or would not be a merely ministerial proceeding Mr. Justice Pontifex [whose order was appealed from] had in fact exercised a judicial discretion, and had come to a decision of great importance, which, if it remained, would entirely conclude any rights of Kalisunderi for an execution in this suit. They held, therefore, that it was a judgment within the meaning of cl. 15." In a recent case, Sanderson, C.J., said that the definition of "judgment" given by Couch, C.J., had never been regarded as absolutely exhaustive, and that in every case where the Court was called upon to decide whether the decision under appeal was or was not a "judgment," regard must be had to the nature of the order (d).

2. Bombay High Court.—The definition of "judgment" as given in the two Calcutta cases cited above has been adopted by the High Court of Bombay. In Miya Mahomed v. Zorabai (e), Scott, C.J., referring to the above Calcutta cases, said "For a considerable number of years in this Court those two decisions (f) have to my knowledge been regarded as the leading decisions to be followed on the question whether an order in any particular case is a 'judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent.' The leading Bombay case is Sonbai v. Ahmedbhai decided in the year 1872 (g).

3. Madras High Court.—Turning now to the Madras decisions the earlier leading case on the subject was De Souza v. Coles (h) decided in the year 1868. The modern leading case is that of Tuljaram v. Alagappa (i) decided by a Full Bench of that Court in 1910. In the former case, Bittlestone, J., said: "The word 'judgment' cannot be limited to the final judgment in the suit, but must be held to have the more general meaning of any decision or determination affecting the rights or the interest of any suitor or applicant. When the language giving the appeal is so general in its terms as that contained in the 15th clause of the Charter, it is, we think, impossible to prescribe any limits to the right of appeal founded upon the nature of the order or decree appealed from." This definition has now been rejected as too wide, and instead thereof, we have another definition of the term 'judgment' laid down in Tuljaram's case. In that case White, C.J., says as follows :—

Cl. 15.

"The test seems to me to be not what is the form of the adjudication, but what is its effect in the suit or proceeding in which it is made. If its effect, whatever its form may be, and whatever be the nature of the application on which it is made, is to put an end to the suit or proceeding so far as the Court before which the suit or proceeding is pending is concerned, or if its effect, if it is not complied with, is to put an end to the suit or proceeding. I think the adjudication is a judgment within the meaning of the clause. An adjudication on an application which is nothing more than a step towards obtaining a final adjudication in the suit is not, in my opinion, a judgment within the meaning of the Letters Patent. I think, too, an order on an independent proceeding which is ancillary to the suit (not instituted as a step towards judgment, but with a view to rendering the judgment effective if obtained),—e.g., an order on an application for an interim injunction, or for the appointment of a receiver is a 'judgment' within the meaning of the clause."

It will be seen that the above definition of 'judgment' is wider than that in Justice of the Peace for Calcutta, and narrower than the one in De Souza v. Coles. Referring to the former case, White, C.J., said that he was not prepared to say as was said in that case that 'judgment' within the meaning of this clause must be a decision which affects the merits by determining some right or liability. The learned Chief Justice added : "I think the decision may be a judgment for the purposes of the clause, though it does not affect the merits of the suit or proceeding and does not determine any question of right raised in the suit or proceeding." Referring to the definition of 'judgment' in De Souza v. Coles, the learned Chief Justice said that it was too wide.

4. Allahabad High Court.—Clause 10 of the Letters Patent for the Allahabad High Court is in terms similar to cl. 15 of the Letters Patent for the other High Courts now under consideration. No serious attempt has been made by the Allahabad High Court to define the word "Judgment" in this clause, nor was it called upon to do so in view of the rulings of that Court that no order made under the Code from which an appeal was not allowed by s. 588 of the Code of 1882 [now s. 104] was appealable under the said clause (j). On the other hand, it was held by the other High Courts that such orders could be appealable under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent if they amounted to a "judgment," and hence it became necessary for those Courts to define the word "judgment" as used in cl. 15. It is conceived that the same necessity will soon be felt by the Allahabad Court, for the view taken by that Court is no longer tenable having regard to the change of law effected by s. 104 of the present Code [see notes to s. 104, "Letters Patent appeal," p. 264 above]. The only definition hitherto given by that Court of the word "judgment" is that it must be "such a judgment on the part of all the learned and honourable Judges who may constitute a Bench as disposes of the suit on the appeal before it" (k). An order granting probate has been held by that Court to be a "judgment" (l).

Orders merely regulating procedure in a suit.—All the High Courts are now agreed that no appeal lies under this clause from an order merely regulating procedure in a suit. It has thus been held that no appeal lies from an order directing a party to produce and give inspection of documents (m), or from an order directing the issue of a commission for the examination of witnesses (n), or from an order refusing to try certain issues as preliminary issues (o), or from an order refusing to frame an issue asked for by one of the parties (p). The decision in an earlier Madras case (q) that an appeal lies under this clause from an order fixing a distant date for the hearing of the suit has been disapproved in later decisions of the same Court (r): it is clear that such an order is one relating merely to the date of hearing. But an appeal lies from an order directing a plaintiff to give security for costs (s), as also from an order refusing a stay of execution (t).

Wrong exercise of discretion may be a ground of appeal.—The fact that the making of an order was a matter of discretion does not affect the appealability of the order, though it may be a good reason for refusing to set aside the order in appeal (u).

Orders in suits and appeals.—We have already noted in their proper place what orders made under the Code are appealable under this clause and what orders are not so appealable. The following is a list of such orders:—

Orders in proceedings other than suits and appeals.—A “judgment” within the meaning of this clause need not be an adjudication in a suit or appeal as technically understood. An adjudication which terminates what may be called an original petition like an application for the custody of a minor may be a “judgment” so as to be appealable under this clause. The following is a list of such adjudications:—

1. Habeas corpus.—An appeal lies under this clause from an order deciding the claim of relatives to the custody of a minor on a writ of habeas corpus (v).
2. Leave to sue.—An appeal lies from an order refusing to set aside an order granting leave to sue under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, and also from an order refusing to grant leave to sue. See notes to cl. 12, “Appeal,” p. 1040 above.
3. Administrator-General's Act, 3 of 1913.—An appeal lies from an order allowing to the Administrator-General commission at a certain rate (w).
4. Probate and Administration Act, 1881.—An appeal lies from an order purporting to be made under s. 90 of the Probate and Administration Act at the instance of a beneficiary in a case in which there is no restriction imposed by the will on the power of the executor to sell immoveable property forming part of the estate of the deceased. Such an order is really one without jurisdiction (x).
5. Limitation Act, s. 5.—No appeal lies from an order refusing to enlarge the time for preferring an appeal (y).
6. Mandamus.—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta in the leading case of The Justices of the Peace for Calcutta v. The Oriental Gas Co. (z), that no appeal lies from an order which directs a mandamus to issue to a public body to compel them to refer a question of compensation to arbitration, the reason given being that such an order does not determine any question whatever between the parties, but only initiates proceedings by which the liability of the public body to make compensation is to be ascertained and determined. This decision has been dissented from by White, C.J., in the recent Madras case of Tuljaram v. Alagappa (a).
7. Contempt.—An appeal lies from an order of committal for contempt (b), as well as from an order refusing an application to commit for contempt of Court (c).

Cl. 15.

8. Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction.—An appeal lies from the decision of a single Judge of a Chartered High Court exercising Admiralty or Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction (d).
9. Arbitration Act 9 of 1899.—An appeal lies under this clause from an order refusing to set aside an award made and filed under the Arbitration Act (e).
10. Land Acquisition Act 1 of 1894.—See notes below, "Land acquisition appeal."

Preliminary and interlocutory judgments.—An order refusing leave to sue under cl. 12 of the Charter is an instance of a preliminary judgment within the meaning of this clause (f). An order directing a plaintiff to give security for the costs of a suit, and an order refusing a stay of execution are instances of interlocutory judgments. See notes above "Orders merely regulating procedure in a suit," p. 1046.

Orders made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction.—The words "not being an order made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction" were added into this clause by the Amended Letters Patent of 11th March 1919. The addition of these words makes it clear that no appeal lies under this clause from orders made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction. See notes to s. 115, "Appeal," p. 292 above.

Orders made in the exercise of the power of superintendence.—The words "not being a sentence or order passed or made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under the provisions of section one hundred and seven of the Government of India Act, 1915," were added into this clause by the Amended Letters Patent of 11th March 1919. The addition of these words makes it clear that no appeal lies under this clause from orders made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under s. 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915.

New points.—It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad (g) and Patna (h) that in appeals under the corresponding clauses of the Letters Patent for those Courts an appellant is not entitled to be heard on points which have not been raised before the Judge from whose judgment he is appealing. But the appeal given to the Full Court under those clauses is not confined to the points on which the Judges of the Division Court differ (i).

Land acquisition appeal.—The decision of the High Court in a land acquisition appeal is not a "judgment" within the meaning of this clause so as to enable a party to file a further appeal to the High Court under this clause (j). See notes to cl. 39 below under the head, "The decision must amount to a judgment, decree, or order."

Admiralty jurisdiction of Supreme Courts.—See cl. 26 of the Charter of the Calcutta Supreme Court, cl. 41 of the Charter of the Madras Supreme Court, and cl. 53 of the Charter of the Bombay Supreme Court

Necessaries supplied to a ship.—It was settled to be the law in England that prior to the passing of 3 and 4 Vict., c. 65 the Court of Admiralty had no jurisdiction in the case of necessaries supplied to a ship, though perhaps it occasionally purported to exercise the jurisdiction where not prohibited (t). The same view has obtained in India (u); but there is a difference of opinion as to whether the extended powers under 3 and 4 Vict., c. 65 and 24 Vict., c. 10, became vested in the Indian High Court by virtue of the several Letters Patent (v). Assuming that the High Court in its Admiralty jurisdiction had no jurisdiction over claims for maritime necessaries under any previous enactment, such jurisdiction would now rest on the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890, which vests in it the power described in sec. 5 of the Admiralty Act, 1861 [24 Vict., c. 10]. The effect of the two Acts is to invest the Indian High Court with jurisdiction over claims for necessaries supplied to a ship elsewhere than in the port to which the ship Court belongs, unless it is shown to the satisfaction of the Court that at the time of the institution of the suit the owner is domiciled in British India or Burma (w).

Cs. 35, 36. professing the Christian religion: Provided always that nothing therein contained shall be held to interfere with the exercise of any jurisdiction in matters matrimonial by any Court not established by Royal Charter within the said Presidency lawfully possessed thereof.

"Our subjects professing the Christian religion."—The High Court has no jurisdiction under this clause to grant a decree for restitution unless both parties are Christians. It has therefore no jurisdiction under this clause to grant such a decree when the petitioner is a Christian, but the respondent is a Parai. Nor is any such jurisdiction conferred upon it in suits for restitution of conjugal rights by the Indian Divorce Act, 1869 (y). See Indian Divorce Act, s. 4.

Respondent not within the Presidency.—The High Court has no jurisdiction to grant a decree for restitution against a respondent who was absent from the Presidency at the time the suit was instituted and remains absent. But residence at date of suit of both spouses, whatever the domicile, is sufficient to give jurisdiction in suits of this nature (z).

Powers of single Judges and Division Courts.

36. And We do hereby declare that any function which is hereby directed to be performed by the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, in the exercise of its original or appellate jurisdiction, may be performed by any Judge or by any Division Court thereof, appointed or constituted for such purpose in pursuance of section one hundred and eight of the Government of India Act, 1915 (a); and if such Division Court is composed of two or more Judges, and the Judges are divided in opinion as to the decision to be given on any points, such point shall be decided according to the opinion of the majority of the Judges, if there shall be a majority; but if the Judges should be equally divided, then the opinion of the senior Judge shall prevail.

Where the Judges are equally divided.—Where an application is made to the High Court under s. 195, clause (6), of the Criminal Procedure Code, to revoke a sanction granted by a lower Court or to give a sanction refused by it, and the judges composing the bench hearing the application are equally divided in opinion, the case is governed by the present clause and not by s. 429 or s. 439 of that Code (b).

Civil Procedure.

37. And We do further ordain that it shall be lawful for the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, from time to time, to make rules and orders for the purpose of regulating all proceedings in civil cases which may be brought before the said High Court, including proceedings in its Admiralty, Vice-Admiralty, Testamentary, Intestate and Matrimonial Jurisdiction, respectively: Provided always that the said High Court shall be guided in making such rules and orders as far as possible by the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, being an Act passed by the Governor-General in Council, and being Act No. VIII of 1859, and the provisions of any law which has been made, amending or altering the same, by competent legislative authority for India. C. 15. 37-39.

38. And We do further ordain that the proceedings in all criminal cases, which shall be brought before the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, in the exercise of its ordinary original criminal jurisdiction and also in all other criminal cases over which the said High Court had jurisdiction immediately before the publication of these presents, shall be regulated by the procedure and practice which was in use in the said High Court immediately before such publication, subject to any law which has been or may be made in relation thereto by competent legislative authority for India; and that the proceedings in all other criminal cases shall be regulated by the Code of Criminal Procedure, prescribed by an Act passed by the Governor-General in Council, and being Act No. XXV of 1861, or by such further or other laws in relation to criminal procedure as may have been or may be made by such authority as aforesaid.

Appeals to Privy Council.

39. - Cl. 39. any final judgment, decree, or order made in the exercise of original jurisdiction by Judges of the said High Court, or of any Division Court, from which an appeal shall not lie to the said High Court under the provisions contained in the 15th clause of these presents : Provided, in either case, that the sum or matter at issue is of the amount or value of not less than Rupees 10,000, or that such judgment, decree, or order shall involve, directly or indirectly, some claim, demand, or question to or respecting property amounting to or of the value of not less than Rupees 10,000 ; or from any other final judgment, decree or order made either on appeal or otherwise aforesaid, when the said High Court shall declare that the case is a fit one for appeal to Us, Our heirs or successors, in Our or Their Privy Council. Subject always to such rules and orders as are now in force, or may, from time to time, be made, respecting appeals to Ourselves in Council from the Courts of the said Presidency, except so far as the said existing rules and orders respectively are hereby varied, and subject also to such further rules and orders as We may, with the advice of Our Privy Council, hereafter make in that behalf.

Decisions appealable to the Privy Council.—No appeal lies to His Majesty in Council under this clause, unless—

- (i) the decision from which an appeal is sought to be preferred amounts to a judgment, decree, or order ;
- (ii) the decision is a final one ; and
- (iii) the decision is passed on appeal, or in the exercise of original jurisdiction.

The decision must amount to a judgment, decree, or order.—No appeal lies to the Privy Council from an award made by a High Court on appeal from a District Court under s. 54 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894. Such an award is not a judgment, decree or order within the meaning of this clause (c).

The judgment, decree or order must be final.—See notes to s. 109 of the Code under the head “ Final order,” p. 269 above.

The final judgment, decree or order must be one made on appeal or in the exercise of original jurisdiction.—Cl. 10 of the Charter empowers the High Court to deal with professional misconduct by suspension or removal. An order made under that clause is not in the exercise either of the original or appellate jurisdiction of the High Court, and is not therefore appealable to His Majesty in Council (d). But an order made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under s. 15 of the High Courts Act (e) [now s. 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915], or in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction under section 115 of the Code (f), is appealable to the Privy Council. It may here be stated that cl. 15 of the Letters Patent was amended by the Amended Letters Patent of 11th March 1919 by adding into the clause certain words which make it clear that no appeal lies to the High Court under that clause from an order made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction or from an order made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under s. 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915.

"Made on appeal."—An order made by the High Court rejecting an application to amend a decree passed by that Court on appeal is not an order "made on appeal" within the meaning of this clause (g); nor is an order made by the High Court rejecting an application to review a judgment passed on appeal (h). Such an order is not an order made on appeal against the judgment sought to be reviewed; it is an order in the appeal in which the judgment sought to be reviewed was given (i).

40. And We do further ordain that it shall be lawful for the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, at its discretion on the motion, or if the said High Court be not sitting, then for any Judge of the said High Court upon the petition of any party who considers himself aggrieved by any preliminary or interlocutory judgment, decree, order, or sentence of the High Court, in any such proceeding as aforesaid, not being of criminal jurisdiction, to grant permission to such party to appeal against the same to Us, Our heirs and successors, in Our or Their Privy Council, subject to the same rules, regulations, and limitations, as are herein expressed respecting appeals from final judgments, decrees, orders and sentences.

Appeal from interlocutory judgment.

Appeal from interlocutory judgment.—No appeal lies to the Privy Council from an interlocutory judgment or order of a Judge of a High Court until such judgment or order has been subjected to an appeal to the High Court under cl. 15, except in those cases in which by reason of the number of Judges who have made such order an appeal under cl. 15 is given directly to the Privy Council (j). The High Court will not, it seems, in the exercise of its discretion under this clause grant leave to appeal to the Privy Council upon a mere question of practice, such as an order for inspection of documents (k) or an order refusing the appointment of a receiver in a suit (l). But an order made by the High Court of Bombay under cl. 13 of the Letters Patent transferring to itself a suit from the Court of the Resident at Aden raises a question of jurisdiction, as distinguished from practice, and leave may be granted from such an order to appeal to the Privy Council (m).

Cls. 41-43.

41. And We do further ordain that, from any judgment, order or sentence of the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, made in the exercise of original criminal jurisdiction, or in any criminal case where any point or points of law have been reserved for the opinion of the said High Court in manner hereinbefore provided, by any Court which has exercised original jurisdiction, it shall be lawful for the persons aggrieved by such judgment, order, or sentence to appeal to Us, Our heirs or successors in Council, provided the said High Court shall declare that the case is a fit one for such appeal and under such conditions as the said High Court may establish or require, subject always to such rules and orders as We may, with the advice of Our Privy Council, hereafter make in that behalf.

Appeal in criminal cases, &c.

42. And We do further ordain that in all cases of appeal made from any judgment, order, sentence, or decree of the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, to Us, Our heirs or successors, in Our or Their Privy Council a true and correct copy of all evidence, proceedings, judgments, decrees, and orders had or made in such cases appealed, so far as the same have relation to the matters of appeal, such copies to be certified under the seal of the said High Court, and that the said High Court shall also certify and transmit to Us, Our heirs and successors in Our or Their Privy Council, a copy of the reasons given by the Judges of such Court, or by any such Judges, for or against the judgment or determination appealed against.

Rule as to transmission of copies of evidence and other documents.

And We do further ordain that the said High Court shall, in all cases of appeal to Us, Our heirs or successors, conform to and execute or cause to be executed, such judgment and orders as We, Our heirs or successors in Our or Their Privy Council, shall think fit to make in the premises in such manner as any original judgment, decree or decretal orders, or other order or rule of the said High Court should or might have been executed.

Calls for Records, &c., by the Government.

High Court to comply with requisition from Government for records, &c.

43. And it is Our further will and pleasure that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall comply with such requisitions as may be made by the Government for records, returns, and statements in such form and manner as such Government may deem proper. Cls. 43, 44.

44. And We do further ordain and declare that all the provisions of these Our Letters Patent are subject to the legislative powers of the Governor-General in Legislative Council, and also of the Governor-General in Council under section seventy-one of the Government of India Act, 1915, and also of the Governor-General in cases of emergency under section seventy-two of that Act and may be in all respects amended and altered thereby.

Powers of the Indian Legislature preserved.

Alterations in this clause.—This clause was substituted for the original clause 44 by the Amending Letters Patent of 11th March 1919. The material alteration consists in substituting the words "powers of the Governor-General in Legislative Council and also of the Governor-General in Council" for the words "powers of the Governor-General in Council."

Legislative powers of the Governor-General in Council.—The powers of the Governor-General in Council to make laws are derived from the Indian Councils Act of 1861 (24 and 25 Vict., c. 67). By sec. 22 of that Act the Governor-General in Council is given power to make laws in the manner provided, including power to repeal or amend existing laws, and including the making of laws for all Courts of justice and for all persons whatever, British or Native, foreigners or others. But a proviso to that section enacts that there is to be no power to repeal or in any way affect any Act passed in the same session of Parliament with the Indian Councils Act. The High Courts Act of 1861 (24 and 25 Vict., c. 104) is such an Act, and the Governor-General in Council therefore has no power to alter its provisions, unless such power is expressly given by the Act itself. Thus the Governor-General in Council has no power to alter the provisions of that Act as to the qualifications of the judges of the High Courts (sec. 3), or the provisions of sec. 15 thereof giving the High Courts superintendence over the Courts which are subject to its appellate jurisdiction (n). But the Governor-General in Council has power to remove any place or territory from the jurisdiction of a High Court, the reason being that such power is distinctly recognized by sec. 9 of the said Act, and it is also consistent with the Letters Patent (cl. 44) as required by the said sec. 9 (o).

Further, there is a proviso to sec. 22 of the Indian Councils Act, which enacts that there is to be no power to repeal or in any way affect any provision of the Government of India Act of 1858. Sec. 65 of the latter Act provides that all persons shall have and take the same suits, remedies and proceedings against the Secretary of State for India in Council as they could have done against the East India Company. Before the Government of India Act, 1858, a British subject could sue the East India Company to determine his claim to any right over land. The Governor-General in Council has therefore no

45. And it is Our further will and pleasure that these Letters Patent shall be published by the Governor-General in Council, and shall come into operation from and after the date of such publication; and that from and after the date on which effect shall have been given to them, so much of the aforesaid Letters Patent granted by His Majesty, King George The Third, as was not revoked or determined by the said Letters Patent of the fourteenth of May, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, and is inconsistent with these Letters Patent, shall cease, determine and be utterly void, to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

Provisions of former Letters Patent inconsistent with these Letters Patent to be void.

In Witness thereof We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent. Witness Ourselves at Westminster, the twenty-eighth day of December, in the twenty-ninth year of Our reign.

Letters Patent for the High Court of Allahabad.

(March 17, 1866.)

Cls. 1, 2.

[The two first paragraphs of the Preamble are similar to those of the Calcutta Letters Patent of 1865.]

And whereas it is further declared by the said recited Act that it shall be lawful for Us by Letters Patent, to erect, and establish a High Court of Judicature in and for any portion of the territories, within Her Majesty's dominions in India, not included within the limits of the local jurisdiction of another High Court, to consist of a Chief Justice and such number of other Judges, with such qualifications as were by the same Act required in persons to be appointed to the High Courts, established at the said Presidencies, as We from time to time might think fit and appoint; and that, subject to the directions of the Letters Patent, all the provisions of the said recited Act relative to High Courts and to the Chief Justice and other Judges of such Courts and to the Governor-General or Governor of the Presidency, in which such High Courts were established shall, as far as circumstances may permit, be applicable to any new High Court which may be established in the said territories, and to the Chief Justice and other Judges thereof, and to the persons administering the Government of the said territories;

And whereas We did upon full consideration of the premises, think fit to erect and establish, and by Our Letters Patent, under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, bearing date at Westminster the fourteenth day of May, in the twenty-fifth year of Our reign, in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, did accordingly, for Us, Our heirs and successors, erect and establish at Fort William in Bengal, for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, aforesaid, a High Court of Judicature which should be called the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, and did thereby constitute the said Court to be a Court of Record:

1. Now know ye that We, upon full consideration of the premises and of Our special grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, have thought fit to erect and establish, and by these presents We do accordingly, for Us, Our heirs and successors, erect and establish, for the North-Western Provinces of the Presidency of Fort William aforesaid, a High Court of Judicature, which shall be called the High Court of Judicature, for the North-Western Provinces, and We do hereby constitute the said Court to be a Court of Record.

2. And We do hereby appoint and ordain that the High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces shall, until further or other provisions shall be made by Us, or Our heirs and successors, in that behalf, in accordance with the said recited Act, consist of a Chief Justice and five Judges, the first Chief Justice being Walter Morgan, Esquire, and the five Judges being Alexander Ross, Esquire, William Edwards, Esquire, William Roberts, Esquire, Francis Boyle Pearson, Esquire, and Charles Arthur Turner, Esquire, being respectively qualified as in the said Act is declared.

[Powers of Crown to appoint a sixth puisne Judge.—A question having arisen as to the validity of the appointment of a sixth puisne judge, it was held that under

Let. Pat. [All.].

Cls. 2-15. clauses 1 and 2 it was quite competent to the Crown to appoint a sixth puisne judge (g). See High Courts Act, 1861, s. 16.]

3. And We do ordain that the Chief Justice and every Judge of the said High Court of Judicature, for the North-Western Provinces previously to entering upon the execution of the duties of his office, shall make and subscribe the following declaration before such authority or person as the Governor-General in Council may commission to receive it :—

"I, A. B., appointed Chief Justice [or a Judge] of the High Court of Judicature, for the North-Western Provinces, do solemnly declare that I will faithfully perform the duties of my office to the best of my ability, knowledge and judgment."

4-8. •[These clauses are similar to clauses 6 to 10 of the Calcutta Letters Patent of 1865.]

Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court.

9. And we do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature, for the North-Western Provinces, shall have power to remove and to try and determine, as a Court of extraordinary original jurisdiction, any suit being or falling within the jurisdiction of any Court subject to its superintendence, when the said High Court shall think proper to do so, either on the agreement of the parties to that effect, or for purpose of justice, the reasons for so doing being recorded on the proceedings of the said High Court.

Original jurisdiction.—Note that the High Court of Allahabad does not possess ordinary original civil jurisdiction.]

10-11. [These clauses are similar to clauses 15 and 16 of the Calcutta Letters Patent of 1865.]

12. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature, for the North-Western Provinces, shall have the like power and authority with respect to the persons and estates of infants; idiots, and lunatics within the North-Western Provinces, as that which is exercised in the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, but subject to the provisions of any laws or regulations now in force.

13-14. [These clauses are similar to clauses 20 and 21 of the Calcutta Letters Patent of 1865.]

Criminal Jurisdiction.

15. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature, for the North-Western Provinces, shall have ordinary original criminal jurisdiction in respect of all such persons within the said Provinces as the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, shall have criminal jurisdiction over at the date of the publication of these presents; and the criminal jurisdiction of the said last-mentioned High Court over such persons shall cease at such date: Provided, nevertheless that criminal proceedings which shall at such date have been commenced in the said last-mentioned High Court shall continue as if these presents had not been issued. Cls. 15-25

16. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature, for the North-Western Provinces, in the exercise of its ordinary original criminal jurisdiction, shall be empowered to try all persons brought before it in due course of law.

17. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature, for the North-Western Provinces, shall have extraordinary original criminal jurisdiction over all persons residing in places within the jurisdiction of any Court now subject to the superintendence of the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut, and shall have authority to try at its discretion any such persons brought before it on charges preferred by any Magistrate or other officer specially empowered by the Government in that behalf.

18. [This clause is similar to clause 25 of the Calcutta Letters Patent of 1865.]

19. And We do further ordain that, on such point or points of law being so reserved as aforesaid, the said High Court shall have full power and authority to review the case, or such part of it as may be necessary, and finally determine such point or points of law, and thereupon to alter the sentence passed by the Court of original jurisdiction, and to pass such judgment and sentence as to the said High Court shall seem right.

20. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature, for the North-Western Provinces, shall be a Court of Appeal from the Criminal Courts of the said Provinces, and from all other Courts from which there is now an appeal to the Court of Sudder Nizamut Adawlut for the said Provinces, and shall exercise appellate jurisdiction in such cases as are subject to appeal to the said Court of Sudder Adawlut by virtue of any law now in force.

21. And We do further ordain that the said High Court shall be a Court of reference and revision from the Criminal Courts subject to its appellate jurisdiction, and shall have power to hear and determine all such cases referred to it by the Session Judges or by any other Officers now authorized to refer cases to the Court of Sudder Nizamut Adawlut of the North-Western Provinces, and to revise all such cases tried by any Officer or Court possessing criminal jurisdiction, as are now subject to reference or to revision by the said Court of Sudder Nizamut Adawlut.

22. And We do further ordain that the said High Court shall have power to direct the transfer of any criminal case or appeal from any Court to any other Court of equal or superior jurisdiction, and also to direct the preliminary investigations or trial of any criminal case by any Officer or Court otherwise competent to investigate or try it, though such case belongs in ordinary course to the jurisdiction of some other Officer or Court.

23. [This clause is similar to clause 29 of the Calcutta Letters Patent of 1865.]

Let. Pat. [All.].

Cls. 24-29. Exercise of Jurisdiction elsewhere, than at the ordinary place of sitting of the High Court.

24. And We do further ordain that whenever it shall appear to the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, subject to the control of the Governor-General in Council, convenient that the jurisdiction and power by these Our Letters Patent, or by the recited act, vested in the said High Court, should be exercised in any place within the jurisdiction of any Court now subject to the superintendence of any Sudder Dewany Adawlut or the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut of the North-Western Provinces, other than the usual places of sitting of the said High Court, or at several such places by way of circuit, the proceedings in cases before the said High Court, at such place or places, shall be regulated by any law relating thereto which has been or may be made by competent legislative authority for India.

Testamentary and Intestate Jurisdiction.

25. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces, shall have the like power and authority as that which is now lawfully exercised within the said Provinces, by the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, in relation to the granting of probates of last wills and testaments, and letters of administration of the goods, chattels, credits, and all other effects whatsoever of persons dying intestate; and that the jurisdiction of the said last-mentioned High Court in relation hereto shall cease from the date of the publication of these presents; Provided always that any proceedings already commenced in relation to any of the matters aforesaid in the said last-mentioned High Court shall continue as if these presents had not been issued: Provided also that nothing in these Letters Patent contained shall interfere with the provisions of any law which has been made by competent legislative authority for India, by which power is given to any other Court to grant such probates and letters of administration.

26-27. [These clauses correspond with clauses 35 and 36 of the Calcutta Letters Patent of 1865.]

Civil Procedure.

28. And We do further ordain that it shall be lawful for the said High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces from time to time to make rules and orders for the purpose of adapting as far as possible the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, being an Act passed by the Governor-General in Council and being Act No. VIII of 1859, and the provisions of any law which has been or may be made, amending or altering the same, by competent legislative authority for India, to all proceedings in its testamentary, intestate, and matrimonial jurisdiction respectively.

Criminal Procedure.

29. And We do further ordain that the proceedings in all criminal cases which shall be brought before the said High Court, in the exercise of its ordinary original criminal jurisdiction, shall be regulated by the procedure and practice which was in use in the High Court of Judicature for Fort William in Bengal, immediately before the publication of these presents, subject to any law which has been or may be made in relation thereto by competent legislative authority for India; and that the proceedings in all other criminal cases shall be regulated by the Code of Criminal Procedure, prescribed by an Act passed by the Governor-General in Council, and being Act No. XXV of 1861, or by such further or other laws in relation to criminal procedure as may have been or may be made by such authority as aforesaid.

Appeals to Privy Council.

30. And We do further ordain that any person or persons may appeal to us, Our heirs and successors, in Our or Their Privy Council, in any matter not being of criminal jurisdiction, from any final judgment, decree, or order of the said High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces, made on appeal, and from any final judgment, decree, or order made in the exercise of original jurisdiction by the Judges of the said High Court, or of any Division Court, from which an appeal shall not lie to the said High Court under the provision contained in the 10th Clause of these presents: Provided, in either case, that the sum or matter at issue is of amount or value of not less than 10,000 rupees, or that such judgment, decree, or order shall involve, directly or indirectly, some claim, demand or question to or respecting property amounting to, or of the value of not less than 10,000 rupees; or from any other final judgment, decree or order made either on appeal or otherwise as aforesaid when the said High Court shall declare that the case is a fit one for appeal to Us, Our heirs or successors in Our or Their Privy Council: subject always to such rules and orders as are now in force, or may from time to time be made respecting appeals to Ourselves in Council from the Courts of the said Provinces, except so far as the said existing rules and orders, respectively, are hereby varied and subject also to such further rules and orders, as we may, with the advice of our Privy Council, hereafter make in that behalf.

Letters Patent for the High Court of Patna.

(February 9, 1916.)

GEORGE THE FIFTH, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India To all to whom these Presents shall come, greeting: WHEREAS

Recital of Act 24 and 25
Vict., c. 104.

by an Act of Parliament passed in the Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Years of the Reign of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, and called the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, it was, amongst other things, enacted, by section one, that it should be lawful for Her Majesty, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, to erect and establish a High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William; and, by section two, that such High Court should consist of a Chief Justice and as many Judges, not exceeding fifteen, as Her Majesty might, from time to time, think fit to appoint, who should be selected from among persons qualified as in the said Act was declared; and, by section eight, that upon the establishment of such High Court as aforesaid the Supreme Court and the Court of Sadr Diwani Adalat and Sadr Nizamat Adalat at Calcutta, in the said Presidency, should be abolished;

and, by section nine, that the High Court of Judicature so to be established should have and exercise all such civil, criminal, admiralty, and vice-admiralty, testamentary, intestate and matrimonial jurisdiction, original and appellate, and all such powers and authority for and in relation to the administration of justice in the said Presidency, as Her Majesty might by such Letters Patent as aforesaid grant and direct, subject, however, to such directions and limitations, as to the exercise of original civil and criminal jurisdiction beyond the limits of the Presidency town, as might be prescribed thereby; and that, save as by such Letters Patent might be otherwise directed, and subject and without prejudice to the legislative powers in relation to the matters aforesaid of the Governor-General of India in Council, the High Court so to be established should have and exercise all jurisdiction, and every power and authority whatsoever in any manner vested in any of the Courts in the same Presidency abolished under the said Act at the time of the abolition of such last-mentioned Courts:

And whereas it was further declared by section sixteen of the said recited Act that it should be lawful for Us by Letters Patent to erect and establish a High Court of Judicature in and for any portion of territories within Our Dominions in India, not included within the limits of the local jurisdiction of another High Court, to consist of a Chief Justice and such number of other Judges, with such qualifications as were by the same Act required in persons to be appointed to the High Courts established at the Presidencies of Fort William in Bengal, of Madras, and of Bombay, as We from time to time might think fit and appoint; and that it should be lawful for Us, by such Letters Patent, to confer on any new High Court which might be so established any such jurisdiction, powers and authority as under the same Act was authorized to be conferred on or would become vested in the High Court established in any of the said Presidencies; and that subject to the directions of the Letters Patent, all the provisions of the said recited Act relative to High Courts and to the Chief Justice and other Judges of such Courts, and to the Governor-General or Governor of the Presidency in which such High Courts were established, should, as far as circumstances might permit, be applicable to any new High Court which might be established in the said territories, and to the Chief Justice and other Judges thereof, and to the persons administering the Government of the said territories :

And whereas, upon full consideration of the premises, Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, bearing date at Westminster the Fourteenth day of May, in the Twenty-fifth Year of Her Reign, in the Year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, did erect and establish a High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William aforesaid, and did constitute that Court to be a Court of Record.

And whereas Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, by Letters Patent under the Great seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, bearing date at Westminster the Twenty-eighth day of December in the Twenty-ninth Year of Her Reign, in the Year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, did revoke the said Letters Patent bearing date the Fourteenth day of May in the Year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, but notwithstanding that revocation did continue the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal and declared that the Court should continue to be a Court of Record :

And whereas, upon full consideration of the premises, Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, bearing date at Westminster the Seventeenth day of March, in the Twenty-ninth year of Her Reign, in the Year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, did erect and establish a High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces, which said Court is situated at Allahabad in the Province of Agra and is now called the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad, and did constitute that Court to be a Court of Record :

And whereas by an Act of Parliament passed in the First and Second Years of Our Reign, and called the Indian High Courts Act, 1911, it was enacted, amongst other things, by section one, that the maximum number of Judges of a High Court of Judicature in India, including the Chief Justice, should be twenty ;

and, by section two, that Our power under section sixteen of the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, might be exercised from time to time and that a High Court might be established under the said section sixteen in any portion of the territories within Our Dominions in India, whether or not included within the limits of the local jurisdiction of another High Court ; and that, where such a High Court was established in any part of such territories included within the limits of the local jurisdiction of another High Court, it should be lawful for Us by Letters Patent to alter the local jurisdiction of that other High Court, and to make such incidental, consequential and supplemental provisions as might appear to be necessary by reason of the alteration of those limits :

And whereas the said Indian High Courts Acts, 1861 and 1911, have been repealed and re-enacted by an Act of Parliament passed in the Fifth and Sixth Years of Our Reign, and called the Government of India Act, 1915 ;

And whereas certain territories formerly subject to and included within the limits of the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal were by proclamation made by the Governor-General of India on the Twenty-second day of March in the Year of Our Lord One

Cls. 1-4. thousand nine hundred and twelve, constituted a separate Province, called the Province of Bihar and Orissa, and are now governed by a Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

1. Now know ye that We, upon full consideration of the premises, and of Our special grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, have thought fit to erect and establish, and by these presents We do accordingly for Us, Our Heirs and Successors, erect and establish, for the Province of Bihar and Orissa aforesaid, with effect from the date of the publication of these presents in the Bihar and Orissa Gazette, a High Court of Judicature, which shall be called the High Court of Judicature at Patna, and We do hereby constitute the said Court to be a Court of Record.

2. And We do hereby appoint and ordain that the High Court of Judicature at Patna shall, until further or other provision be made by Us, or Our Heirs and Successors, in that behalf in accordance with section One hundred and one of the said recited Government of India Act, 1915, consist of a Chief Justice and six other Judges, the first Chief Justice being Sir Edward Maynard Des Champs Chamiér, Knight, and the six other Judges being Saiyid Shurf-ud-din, Esquire, Edmund Pelly Chapman, Esquire, Basanta Kumar Mullick, Esquire, Francis Reginald Roe, Esquire, the Honourable Cecil Atkinson, and Jowala Persad, Esquire, being respectively qualified as in the said Act is declared.

107. Where an application is made for the sale of land or of any interest in land, the Court shall, before ordering sale thereof, call upon the parties to state whether such land is or is not ancestral land within the meaning of Notification No. 188711—238-10, dated 7th October 1911, of the Local Government, and shall fix a date for determining the said question.

On the day so fixed, or on any date to which the enquiry may have been adjourned, the Court may take such evidence, by affidavit or otherwise, as it may deem necessary: and may also call for a report from the Collector of the district as to whether such land or any portion thereof is ancestral land.

After considering the evidence and the report, if any, the Court shall determine App. V. whether such land, or any, and what part of it, is ancestral land.

The result of the enquiry shall be noted in an order made for the purpose by the presiding Judge in his own handwriting.

108. 109. The certificate of the sub-registrar and the report of the Collector shall be open to the inspection of the parties or their pleaders, free of charge, between the time of the receipt by the Court and the declaration of the result of the enquiry.

No fees are payable in respect of the report by the Collector.

110. The result of the enquiry under rule 66 shall be noted in an order made for the purpose by the presiding Judge in his own handwriting. The Court may in its discretion adjourn the enquiry, provided that the reasons for the adjournment are stated in writing, and that no more adjournments are made than are necessary for the purposes of the inquiry.

111. If after proclamation of the intended sale has been made any matter is brought to the notice of the Court which it considers material for purchasers to know, the Court shall cause the same to be notified to intending purchasers when the property is put up for sale.

112. The costs of the proceedings under rules 66, 106 and 108 shall be paid in the first instance by the decree-holder; but they shall be charged as part of the costs of the execution, unless the Court, for reasons to be specified in writing, shall consider that they shall wholly or in part be omitted therefrom.

113. When permission has been given to a decree-holder to bid for property, the Court ordering the sale shall inform the officer appointed to conduct the sale whether there are any persons, in addition to the decree-holder, entitled to share in the sale proceeds.

Rules—All.App. V.

116. When an application is made for the attachment of live-stock or other moveable property, the decree-holder shall pay into Court in cash such sum as will cover the costs of the maintenance and custody of the property for fifteen days. If within three clear days before the expiry of any such period of fifteen days the amount of such costs for such further period as the Court may direct be not paid into Court, the Court, on receiving a report thereof from the proper officer, may issue an order for the withdrawal of the attachment and direct by whom the costs of the attachment are to be paid.

117. Live-stock which has been attached in execution of a decree shall ordinarily be left at the place where the attachment is made either in custody of the judgment-debtor on his furnishing security, or in that of some landholder or other respectable person willing to undertake the responsibility of its custody and to produce it when required by the Court.

118. If the Custody of live-stock cannot be provided for in the manner described in the last preceding rule, the animals attached shall be removed to the nearest pound established under the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871, and committed to the custody of the pound-keeper, who shall enter in a register—

119. For every animal committed to the custody of the pound-keeper as aforesaid, a charge shall be levied as rent for the use of the pound for each fifteen or part of fifteen days during which such custody continue, according to the scale prescribed under section 12 of Act No. 1 of 1871.

And the sum so levied shall be sent to the Treasury for credit to the Municipal or District Board, as the case may be, under whose jurisdiction the pound is. All such sums shall be applied in the same manner as fines levied under section 12 of the said Cattle Trespass Act

120. The pound-keeper shall take charge of, feed and water, animals attached and committed as aforesaid until they are withdrawn from his custody as hereinafter provided and he shall be entitled to be paid for their maintenance at such rates as may be, from time to time, prescribed under proper authority. Such rates shall, for animals specified in the section mentioned in the last preceding rule, not exceed the rates for the time being fixed under section 5 of the same Act. In any case, for special reasons to be recorded in writing, the Court may require payment to be made for maintenance at higher rates than those prescribed.

121. The charges herein authorized for the maintenance of live-stock shall be paid to the pound-keeper by the attaching officer for the first fifteen days at the time the animals are committed to his custody, and thereafter for such further period as the Court may direct, at the commencement of such period. Payments for such maintenance so made in excess of the sum due for the number of days during which the animals may be in the custody of the pound-keeper shall be refunded by him to the attaching officer.

122. Animals attached and committed as aforesaid shall not be released from custody by the pound-keeper except on the written order of the Court, or of the attaching officer, or of the officer appointed to conduct the sale; the person receiving the animals, on their being so released, shall sign a receipt for them in the register mentioned in rule 118.

123. For the safe custody of moveable property other than live-stock while under attachment, the attaching officer shall, subject to approval by the Court, make such arrangements as may be most convenient and economical.

124. With the permission of the Court the attaching officer may place one or more persons in special charge of such property.

125. The fee for the services of each such person shall be payable in the manner prescribed in rule 116. It shall not be less than two annas, and shall ordinarily not be more than three and a half annas per diem. The Court may at its discretion allow a higher fee; but if it do so, it shall state in writing its reasons for allowing an exceptional rate.

126. When the services of such person are no longer required the attaching officer shall give him a certificate on a counterfoil form of the number of days he has served and of the amount due to him; and on the presentation of such certificate to the Court which ordered the attachment, the amount shall be paid to him in the presence of the presiding Judge. Provided that, where the amount does not exceed Rs. 5, it may be paid to the Sahna by money order on requisition by the Amin, and the presentation of the certificate may be dispensed with.

127. When in consequence of an order of attachment being withdrawn or for some other reasons, the person has not been employed or has remained in charge of the property for a shorter time than that for which payment has been made in respect of his services, the fee paid shall be refunded in whole or in part, as the case may be.

128. Fees paid into Court under the foregoing rules shall be entered in the Register of Petty Receipts and Repayments.

129. When any sum levied under rule 119 is remitted to the treasury, it shall be accompanied by an order in triplicate (in the form given as form 9 of the Municipal Account Code), of which one part will be forwarded by the Treasury Officials to the District or Municipal Board, as the case may be. A note that the same has been paid into the Treasury as rent for the use of the pound, will be recorded on the extract from the pass book.

130. The cost of repairing attached property for sale, or of conveying it to the place where it is to be kept or sold, shall be payable by the decree-holder to the attaching officer.
